THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, October 3d, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

Sudden Death. We are again called upon to record the death of another of our most worthy and exemplary citizens, Mr. Ira B. Newcomb, who died very suddenly at his residence on Sunday morning last, of disease of the heart, aged thirty-seven years. Funeral services were performed over his remains, at his late residence, on Monday afternoon, by Rev. Mr. Rodgers; after which, the remains were placed in charge of Rural Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, of which the deceased was late a member. A procession was formed, headed by the Quincy Brass Band—followed by Rural Lodge; next came the hearse and a long train of carriages, bearing the family, relatives and friends of the deceased; after which the whole moved with solemnity—the Band playing a funeral dirge, to the Cemetery, where the solemn and impressive Masonic burial rites were performed by Worshipful Master, Edwin S. Bradford, assisted by the Chaplain, Albert A. Stoddard. In the death of Mr. Newcomb we are all losers; the community in the loss of a worthy and exemplary citizen; his family in the loss of an affectionate husband and a kind parent.

Since the above was written, there has been considerable excitement about the deceased, from the supposition that Mr. Newcomb was still alive. For this reason we have given what information we have gathered.

Mr. Newcomb, on Saturday morning last, rose apparently in good health as usual, and, after finishing some books he was making, was about to prepare to go to Boston, where he carried on the boot business, when he was taken with a violent pain in his breast. A physician was called who administered some laudanum, which eased the pain, and he felt better throughout the day, and retired as usual. Late in the evening, when his son returned from the city, he inquired about his business, and appeared quite well. A few hours later, about one p. m., he awoke his wife, and informed her that he was in extreme pain. She rubbed him, then went to call her son who slept up stairs, when she returned he was gasping, and soon expired.

His funeral took place on the following day, (Monday), but instead of being put into the grave already dug, he was placed in a tomb, as it was thought he showed signs of life—the flesh on his hands could be moved, and his lips showed color.

On Wednesday, after being in the tomb two days and nights he was removed to his late residence, physicians from Boston called, and attempts made to bring him to life, but without success. The remains were carried to the cemetery again on the following evening.

Returned. Capt. Benjamin F. Meservy, of Company K, 18th Mass. Regiment, has obtained a furlough of ten days. He arrived in this town on Wednesday last, and has since gone to Maine, where his mother is dangerously sick.

Bank Dividends. The Mount Wollaston and Quincy Stone Banks, of this town have declared semi-annual dividends of 3 1/2 per cent, payable on Monday next.

An Aged Veteran. Died at Bowling Green, Kentucky, September 22, 1863, Mr. Joseph Crane, formerly of this town, aged sixty-two years and seven months. Mr. Crane was for many years past resident in Chicago, Illinois. When the call came for more troops in the Spring of 1862, he, notwithstanding his age, joined the Elgin Battery, full of strength and patriotic ardor, which might cause many a younger man to blush. He has fallen, like a hero, in his country's service.

Conference at East Weymouth. Rev. Mr. Lane's church at East Weymouth was crowded to overflowing on Tuesday last at the meeting of the Norfolk Conference of Congregational Churches. The exercises were of unusual interest. Rev. E. L. Clark, of North Bridgewater, late Chaplain of the 12th Massachusetts Regiment, preached a sermon on "The Word of the Lord and of Gideon," which had the true ring of patriotic feeling. His remarks on loyal men in our land were severe but most justly deserved. The discourse was a very able one, and would read well in print. The singing on the occasion was by a well-trained choir, assisted by an orchestra, and added greatly to the interest of the service. The discussion on the Inspiration of the Bible, the value of our English version, and the true province of Sacred Criticism, was opened by Rev. Mr. Thwing, and continued by Rev. Messrs. Stone, Lea, Broughton, Walker and Davis. A generous collation was provided for all by the good people of East Weymouth.

Thanksgiving Day. The Governor and Council has appointed Thursday, November 26, as a day of Thanksgiving in Massachusetts.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Oct. 1, 1863.

WAR ASPECTS.

There is no evidence that any fighting campaign is open in Virginia. The rebels seem acting on the defensive; for should General Meade's army step south of the Rapidan, the enemy would fall back even to Richmond. The seat of war is now in the Southwest, and the fall campaign may see the great and final battles of the rebellion fought there. Our army under Rosecrans is in the heart of the Confederacy. The aim of the rebels is to drive General Rosecrans out of Chattanooga and recover East Tennessee. In this they will probably be sorely disappointed; as the latest advices assure us that the position of our army around Chattanooga is strong; the men are in good spirits and order—there being no lack of guns, ammunition or provisions. Rosecrans is not only safe, but will soon take the offensive. Every thing remains quiet before Charleston, South Carolina.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

Has been received to September 16th. It is reported that the pirate Florida is sold at Brest and that eighty of her crew have gone to Liverpool, probably to go on board of one of the rebel Rams now nearly ready to sail from England. Matters in France are quiet. The Polish question is still unsettled, and a knotty one it is to adjust. The Confederate loan was quoted at twenty-five per cent. discount. We would not give a fig for all the Confederate scrip in Europe. The general tone of the London papers is in opposition to the system of furnishing the Southern Confederacy with a piratical navy, regarding the act as a breach of neutrality. John Bull is coming to a more rational view on the "neutrality of nations." No confidence can be placed in his professions of friendship to the United States. Look out for him. The young King of Greece, George, one of Queen Victoria's boys, is about to visit the Czar, one of the protecting sovereigns of that classic country. It is rumored that the Confederate Government at Richmond has recalled Mason from London. Fears are entertained in England that the French Government will speedily recognize the rebels. The London Herald advertising to the rumored probable recall of Mason, says it is in consequence of the systematic rudeness with which he has been treated by Earl Russell, and hints that it has been through the suggestion of Mr. Adams that Mason has been excluded from official intercourse with the British Government.

Evening. Further advices from the South, inform us that the army under General Gillmore, before Charleston, is hard at work remodeling batteries Gregg and Wagner, and are making rapid progress towards completing the final arrangements for bombarding the City and Fort Moultrie.

The numerical strength of the colored regiments in the field on the Federal side, is about twenty-five thousand. From the Provost Master General's office at Washington, it is ascertained that on the first of July last, there were ninety-three thousand deserters from all the armies in the field. There is a rumor this evening of Federal reverses in Louisiana, and that General Weitzel was killed. It wants confirmation. The report that a new draft of 600,000 men is about to be made, is believed to be premature. No step will be taken towards a new draft until the present one is completed in the several States which have not yet exceeded their quota of volunteers sufficiently to cover that under the draft, as Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

LOCALS.

The "Indian Summer" has prevailed through the week with delightful weather. The city is full of visitors and every thing wears a lively appearance. Business is tip top, and our monied institutions are about to disgorge large semi-annual dividends. Many of the banks have declared four per cent. The Boston Theatre, Melodone and Kimball's Museum, are under good headway. The Hutchinson Family is here, their concerts are well attended. Perham's Great Mirror of the Rebellion draws crowded houses every evening. The lecture season will soon commence with strong indications of success.

THE NORFOLK COUNTY FAIR which came off at Dedham, on Thursday and Friday last, although not so largely attended as on former occasions, was a very creditable affair. The exhibition of cattle was quite large, among which was noticed some fine specimens. The Vegetable department was well supplied, many of the products of which would compare favorably with former years. Poultry was in abundance—and we think there was no barn yard fowl but was honorably represented. The ploughing match was an interesting feature in the first day's performance, and went off with great credit. The awards were very liberally distributed, and none, we think, more deservedly, than to Miss Carrie E. Colburn, of Dedham, (only thirteen years of age,) a competitor in the article of bread. There were other aspirants, but she carried off the palm.

Rev. Mr. Thwing preaches Sabbath morning on "REMEMBERED WORDS."

Reimbursement of Bounties.

An act was passed at the last session of the Legislature, providing for the reimbursement to cities and towns of the amount paid by them in bounties to volunteers, and assessing a special tax to meet the liability thus incurred. From a table recently prepared by the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, it appears that the whole sum thus paid by the cities and towns was $3,418,640 50, and a tax to that amount has been levied accordingly.

Norfolk county has paid but $294,950 00, while the amount of reimbursement tax is $327,232 27, thus making a difference now due the State of $81,668 88; which is the largest sum, (by over $40,000 00) due from any other County except Suffolk. And of this large amount, there are but five towns called upon to pay it, viz:—Brookline, Dorchester, Milton, Roxbury, and West Roxbury; as will be seen by the following table. All the other towns receive something back from the State. Quincy will receive $384 49 which is the smallest amount to be paid to any town in the County except Dover and Medway—two very small places.

HANOVER. It was stated some time since that the town of Hanover had voted to pay the commutation of the conscripts from that town who should be accepted by the Examining Board. The money has been paid over to the men, and Hanover has not one drafted man in the army. So says the Abington Standard.

COLORADO TROOPS. The Baltimore papers speak in terms of great commendation of the appearance of the 4th Regiment of colored troops which paraded in that city on Thursday of last week in full strength of numbers. The Regiment is commanded by Colonel Samuel A. Duncan, late Major of the 14th New Hampshire Volunteers.

Colonel Duncan will be remembered by our readers as the late successful and popular Principal of our High School. The same qualities that ensured success here, are placing him in high and honorable positions in the service of his country.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Shakers of Union village near Cincinnati, have announced their intention to give to that city for the benefit of the poor, from one to ten thousand cords of wood.

Seven out of thirty conscripts drawn from Bedford, (N. H.) were milkmen. They will, of course, "hurry up" the war with new vigor.

At Charlestown, Mass., Government is building a great steamship, which is designed for wonderful speed. This vessel is to bear the name of one of the swiftest mountain streams of New Hampshire, that is, the Ammonoosuc.

The Middleboro Gazette says that one hundred and fifty-eight bushels of berries have been picked in that town and Lakeville this year and sent to Nantucket.

President Lincoln has issued a proclamation suspending the writ of habeas corpus in all cases arising in the military and naval service.

The battery on Long Point, Provincetown, a few rods north of the light house, is nearly completed, and is very formidable. The sand with which it is constructed is such as to make it, for its class, a second Fort Wagner.

Out of two millions of dollars of postal currency recently canceled and burned, not two hundred dollars were counterfeited.

The potato crop in the western part of York county, Maine, is said to be badly affected by rot.

A general order has been issued at Washington, taking out of the hospitals every enlisted man (except hospital stewards) who are fit for duty. It is thought that several thousand will thus be speedily obtained, as a large number are employed in various ways about the hospitals who have been fit for active duty for months.

It is understood that the prize money of the navy amounts to $30,000,000. Most of this sum will come directly or indirectly from British pockets. Of this, few will be disposed to complain. There have been numerous heavy failures in England from this cause, and more will inevitably follow.

The Pay Department has made arrangements by which Paymasters will hereafter be assigned to particular descriptions of troops, instead of some of them, as now, attending to all kinds of service. This, it is to be hoped, will facilitate the disbursement.

The Cape Cod Republican says that the cranberry pickers are about to commence their work. So far, the prospect is favorable. The crop of Haverhill will be worth something near thirty thousand dollars.

The Harriet Lane, captured by the rebels at Galveston, Texas, still lays off Redfield Bar on that coast. Her shaft was bent by a round shot in the engagement and the engine cannot consequently be made to work.

A submarine cable is to be made to connect the forts in Boston harbor with the State House. It will be four miles in length, the wire being coated with gutta serena and hemp, and protected by sixteen galvanized wires, laid longitudinally. A New York firm has the contract for $10,000, to be paid by the government.

Our losses in officers of Rosecrans' army, so far as they have come to hand, amount to one Brigadier-General, six Colonels, two Majors, five Captains, and eight Lieutenants, killed, and Brig. Gen. J. C. Starkweather, Brig. Gen. John H. King, and 263 other officers wounded.

Governor Buckingham of Connecticut has decided that members of the enrolled militia who have been drafted into the service of the United States and have furnished substitutes, or paid $300 commutation, are not exempt from State military duty.

THE LADY'S BOOK. Mid the clash of conflicting interests, which now absorbs the public mind, and the fierce rage of warlike passions, Mr. Godey, in his editorial chair, remains undisturbed, and pursues the even tenor of his way, as if all were calm and sunshine in the outside world. The October number of this monthly visitor, comes to us, glowing in autumnal beauties—rich in the treasures of the season. The "Double Extension Fashion Plate," of course, takes the precedence among the many fine illustrations, which will be duly appreciated by the devotees of fashion. "The Sister's School," (another of the embellishments) is a picture of the affections, descriptive of domestic scenes in a New England village. The "First Lesson on the Flageolet," betrays the inward feelings of a young amateur, of musical proclivities, in his first essays to give utterance to his youthful aspirations. Other gems of a different order, are interspersed through the work; Patterns for female taste and ingenuity, Embroidery and Drawing Lessons, and an endless variety of designs for fancy needle work. The Literary department, also, has its excellencies; "Aunt Sophie's Visits" progresses with interest; "The Pursuit of Wealth," has reached its sixth chapter; these, with a table of Receipts in cooking, and other miscellaneous readings, form but a mere outline of its contents.

It seems to be accorded by the universal consent of mankind that Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.'s Sarsaparilla, Pectoral and Pills are the greatest remedies yet discovered for the treatment of disease; that Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the great Elixir of Life, which Philosophers have sought for purifying the blood. Try it and judge for yourselves.

WAR AND PEACE. The law of compensation always holds—one man invents a new bullet, another produces a box of salve to heal the wound the bullet inflicts. Grace's celebrated Salve is now packed side by side with cartridges in the soldier's knapsack. Let every friend of the soldier take care to provide him with a box of this invaluable remedy for burns, scalds, flesh wounds, boils, pimples, eruptions, and all inflammatory diseases of the skin. The most excruciating pains are allayed by its use better than by the strongest opiate. 25 cents a box. See advertisement in another column.

SEWING MACHINES.
OUR LETTER A Family Sewing Machine
Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.
It is beyond doubt the
BEST AND CHEAPEST
And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful
appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling,
Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Braiding,
Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No
other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make
our Family Sewing Machine most reliable,
and most durable, and most certain in action
at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.
Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,
can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine
is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine
when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest
woods, are finished in the simplest and chas-
est manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb
manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family
Machine in operation, so as to judge of its
great capacity and beauty.
It is fast becoming as popular for family
sewing as our Manufacturing machines are
for manufacturing purposes.
The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES
DR. CHEESEMAN'S
FEMALE REGULATING PILLS

The combination of ingredients in these Pills
are the result of a long and extensive practice.
They are mild in their operation, and certain in correcting all irregularities, Painful Menstruations, removing all obstructions whether from cold
or otherwise, headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, whites, all nervous affections,
hysteria, fatigue, pain in the back and limbs,
&c., disturbed sleep, which arise from interruption of nature.

was the commencement of a new era in the treatment of those irregularities and obstructions which have afflicted so many to a PREMATURE GRAVE. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular, and whenever an obstruction
takes place the general health begins to decline.
DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS
are the most effective remedy ever known for all complaints peculiar to Females. To all classes
they are invaluable, inducing, with certainty, periodical regularity. They are known to thousands,
who have used them at different periods, throughout the country, having the sanction of some of the most eminent Physicians in America.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Love.

A Stray Page
From the Portfolio of "an Old Bachelor."

BY WILLIE F. OILCHREIST.

That little word, oh, what a change
It makes in mortal mind,
For rich and poor all feel its power,
And in it a balm find.

For Love the student leaves his books
To sing some pensive lay,
Beneath the window of some maid,
He sighs his soul away.

The soldier for it braves all pain,
In his broad scars glories,
That he may win some fair one's hand,
Telling his bold stories.

The prim young miss, scarce out of teens
Will by the window sit,
Waiting for some favorite beau
To pass and take a "quint."

Poets have written all about it,
Wise men too been in love,
But I think the passion foolish,
I pronounce it a "humbug."

For the Patriot.

Send Him Off.

OLE CURR.

What dat yankee gal about,
Flirting wid her craven beau?
Send him off de sneaking lout,
Send him off to face de foe.

Tell him for he country's good,
Go and meet de battle strife;
Gal who boast de yankee blood,
Should not be de cowards wife.

Don't insult yo fader's fame,
Who dere country's foes defied;
Don't disgrace yo mudder's name,
Who for freedom would have died.

Would yo hear yo children say,
Fader scare to meet de foe;
Mudder tell him to stay,
Mudder 'fraid to let him go.

Lengthen out yo lover's chain,
Do not fear old maid to prove;
He may soon return again,
Far more wordy ob yo love;

Den yo little children boast,
On de day ob jubilee;
Mudder 'long to freedom', host Fader fought for liberty.

When de merry bells shall ring,
When de tundering cannon roar;
Den dey freedom's song can sing,
When de tyrants rule no more.

Money.

Money, thou base of bliss and source of woe, Whence comest thou, that thou art so fresh and fine?

I know thy parentage is base and low;
Man found thee poor and dirty in a mire.

Surely thou did'st so little contribute
To this great kingdom, which thou now hast got,
That he was fain, when thou wast destitute,
To dig thee out of thy dark cave and groat.

Then, forcing thee by fire, he made thee bright,
Nay, thou hast got the face of man! for we Have, with our stamp and seal, transferr'd our right;

Thou art the man, and we but dross to thee!
Man calleth thee his wealth, who made thee rich;
And, while he digs out thee, falls in the ditch.

Anecdotes.

My lord, said a profligate to the famous Robert, Earl of Oxford, you and I have been in all the jails in the kingdom.
What do you mean by that, you rascal?
asked the earl.
Your lordship has been in the Tower, and I have been in every other.

Bill did you ever go to sea?
I guess I did last year for instance, I went to see a red-headed gal but I only went once.
Why so?
Because her brother had an unpleasant
habit of throwing bootjacks and smothering
iron at people.

Dear sir, I need a great lady, in a watered silk, at the World's Fair, have the goodness to inform me if there are any noblemen in the United States?
Yes, me'am, answered a full fed Jonathan,
I am one of them.

Nat what are you leaning over the empty
cask for?
I am mourning over departed spirits.

Jennie, said one Irishman to another the first time he saw a locomotive, what is that snoring beast?
Shure I don't know, was the reply, unless
it's a steamboat splurgin to get wather.

Lord North, during a severe sickness, said
to his physician, Sir, I am obliged to you for introducing me to some old acquaintances.
Who are they, my lord? inquired the doctor.
My ribs, replied his lordship, which I have not felt for many years until now.

WM. GRAY, ESQ.: DEAR SIR—Two months ago, my head was almost bald, and the little hair
that was left was falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your Hair Restorative, and it immediately stopped

The peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the constitutions of multitudes of men. It either produces or is produced by an ac-
feebled, vitiated state
of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their vigorous action, and falls into disorder and decay. The scrofulous contamination is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vice, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin,
it is hereditary in the constitution, descending
"from parents to children unto the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The diseases which it originates take various names, according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, crupose and cutaneous affections. These all having the same origin, require the same remedy, viz. purification and

Norfolk County Teacher's Association.

This Association will hold its next Semi-Annual meeting at the Town Hall, in this town, on Friday and Saturday, the 16th and 17th of the present month.

Our County Educational Meetings are regarded as among the most interesting and profitable that occur during the year; and it is expected that this will not fall short of any previous gathering in point of interest.

The first meeting of the Association was held at Temperance Hall, Dedham, on Thursday, August 17th, 1848, and these have been continued, semi-annually, in various parts of the country, to the present time. Among the names of the Officers elected at the first meeting, we find those of Charles A. Cummings and George Newcomb, both then teachers in Quincy.

Lectures were delivered on that occasion by Mr. Newcomb and Rev. Mr. Burrill, also of Quincy. The former spoke upon "The importance of religious instruction in Common School Education," and the latter upon "Music as a branch of Common School Education."

Since its organization in 1848, the Association has met three times in this town. First, on the 26th of Dec., 1849; second, on the 22d of Dec., 1853; The third and last time on the 25th of Oct. 1857.

The following are the order of exercises:

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16TH.

At 10 o'clock, A. M., the Meeting will be organized for the transaction of business.

At 10:15 o'clock, A. M., a DISCUSSION. Subject: The best methods of conducting recitations, so as to cultivate a retentive memory.

At 2:15 o'clock, P. M., a LECTURE.

At 4 o'clock, P. M., a DISCUSSION. Subject: General Exercises in School.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17TH.

At 9:15 o'clock, A. M., a DISCUSSION. Question: How large a portion of a Teacher's reading and study should be devoted to books strictly educational?

At 10:15 o'clock, A. M., a DISCUSSION. Question: Should the opinions of Teachers be consulted in the choice of Text Books?

Ladies are invited to present Essays upon the subjects offered for discussion.

We understand that the Hon. Henry K. Oliver, Superintendent of the Public Schools of Lawrence, perhaps better known as a State Official, will deliver the Lecture on Friday afternoon; and that a gentleman of equal ability will speak on the same evening.

According to the usual custom the hospitalities of the citizens will be extended to teachers from abroad; and we anticipate this meeting as a pleasant event, both for the teachers of the County and their ENTERTAINERS.

A Welcome Visitor.

Dr. Grieve, the renowned American traveler and lecturer, it will be remembered visited Quincy in 1852, to investigate the mysterious tragedy and melancholy death of his brother, John R. Grieve and wife, Hannah Banks. During the lapse of eleven years, Dr. Grieve has traveled through twenty-two States, and happened to be in Charleston, (S. C.) at the meeting of the Southern Convention, and had the pleasure of making a Union reply to William L. Yancy's secession speech. Dr. G. has spent six years of his life in the Sunny South and witnessed many of the rebel proceedings; and now thanks God he is in New England surrounded with the most enlightened of our race, where the stars and stripes of liberty will forever wave "O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave."

COMPLIMENTARY. The hearty welcome extended to our fellow-townsmen, Loring A. French, Esq., on his late visit to his home, after an absence of twenty-six months in the service of his country, was the spontaneous feeling of our people and shows their estimation of the man and the soldier. His old friends, on hearing of his arrival, immediately took measures to testify in a substantial manner, their continued respect, esteem, and deep sympathy in his late domestic afflictions. A well-filled purse, of about sixty dollars, was made up, and with an accompanying address presented to him. It is needless to say, that the present and motive were duly appreciated, and met with a hearty and feeling response.

Mr. French left here, for New York, Thursday afternoon, where he took the mail Steamer for New Orleans—at present the headquarters of Nim's Battery, to which he belongs. He carries with him the best wishes of the community for his future welfare and safe return.

STOCKINGS FOR SOLDIERS. The demand for Woolen Stockings is very great. It has been suggested that quantities of cast-off socks are stowed away in many houses which might be taken and re-footed at little expense. Will the ladies attend to this matter?

THE NEWS—OTHER MATTERS.

This has been a comparatively quiet week as to exciting intelligence. From the South-west we learn, that a rebel cavalry force under General Wheeler, four thousand strong, was totally defeated on Friday, the first instant, near Anderson's Crossing, in Tennessee; rebel loss heavy. General Rosecrans position near Chattanooga is considered impregnable. That the army of General Burnside is all right in Tennessee; his right wing being in communication with Rosecrans' army. The Federal attack on Charleston has recommenced with increased vigor. A powerful expedition under General Foster has sailed from Fortress Monroe; their destination is a secret; guess the boys are going to make a loud call on Charleston. Meade's army is quiet. A writer from Fortress Monroe, says, affairs on the Peninsula are at a decided standstill. Sickness to a frightful extent has ravaged among our troops there, and the result is that six-eighths of the forces were stricken down by the malarious swamp fevers, unfit for duty. A few days back, however, two frosts have occurred, which improved the health of the army. Heavy reinforcements are going from the army of the Potomac to join General Rosecrans' army—but that he will not resume offensive operations for some weeks to come, as time is necessary for re-organization. The distance to be travelled by troops leaving the army of the Potomac is about a thousand miles. In the meantime, the slow and uncertain operations of the war, have carried up gold to 148, with a continued upward tendency. The prices of the necessities of life have increased very materially since the first of September. Business, however, is very active; all the hotels and private boarding houses in this great emporium are generously patronized; indeed, good board and lodgings are hard to get. The city is large enough to comfortably accommodate all who visit Boston. Some branches of enterprise are carried up to fever heat. In the book trade, the leading houses of New York, Philadelphia and Boston, are now doing business to an extent almost unexampled. The same is the case in the West. The loyal States are developing their resources and wonderfully increasing in wealth by the operation of war; at least, such are appearances.

A somewhat remarkable speech was made in Maryland on Saturday last by Mr. Blair, Post Master General, handling Senator Sumner's programme on the question of reconstruction with much severity. There is evidently a great difference of opinion with a portion of the Cabinet and President, as to the best course of bringing back into the Union, those seceding States desirous of returning to their allegiance. Mr. Blair expresses the opinion that the course of the Abolitionists is despotic, and may be fatal to republican institutions; that many of the Republican papers have struck the key note of revolution. He says the President's plan of re-construction is to put the power of State governments as soon as they are redeemed into the hands of loyal men, and then each State resumes its place in the councils of the Nation with all its attributes and rights. He has signified his purpose of writing to Tennessee and Louisiana, now in preparation to follow these examples, and every other State as soon as it can be rescued from the rebel armies, will be aided to come in and reintegrate the grand family of Republics. In concluding Mr. Blair says:

"The issues are thus made up between the President and the rebels and their foreign sympathizers, who revolutionize our government to create a separate government in the South, on the one hand, and on the other hand between the President and the ultra Abolitionists, who would disfranchise the Southern sections of our country. It is not probable that the latter, though aiming at a different result, will be found co-operating in the end with conspirators in the South and their foreign allies. They may prefer parting with the South to partnership and equality under the Constitution."

PERSONAL. Mr. Bryant Newcomb, Jr., one of Quincy's conscripts, has been assigned to Co. E, 32d Regiment, and joined his company for duty.

Mr. Henry C. White of the 11th Regiment has arrived home on a short furlough.

EMERSON'S FAMOUS HAIR DYE. There has long been felt the want of a reliable specific, to renovate, and restore the premature decay of the hair from disease and other causes. Mr. Emerson, in the discovery of his celebrated DYE, has furnished that desideratum. He claims for it, all the virtues and qualities desirable in such an article: simple and easy of application; instantaneous in its effects; free from every blemish—will not soil the purest linen; is durable in its nature—retaining its lustre and beauty until the hair grows out, and in no wise injurious to the hair, but rather invigorates and promotes its growth. From numerous testimonials, which we have seen, of those who have tested its merits, we have no hesitancy in adding our testimony to the above endorsement. For sale by the manufacturer, T. G. Emerson, at his place of business, corner of Hancock and Temple sts.

NEW STORE. The rooms on Hancock St., near the Post Office, so long occupied as a Cabinet manufactory by W. M. French Esq., and lately by Charles H. Kimball, has been tastefully fitted up and transformed into one of the neatest stores in town. It was opened on Saturday last by Charles N. Ditson and Harrison Crane, two of our young, enterprising and industrious merchants, who are too well known to need any recommendation from us.

By referring to our advertising columns, it will be seen that they have a large assortment of first class family Groceries, Glass, Crockery and Wares, which they offer for sale at the lowest cash prices—all our readers who are in want of anything in their line (will have to do), is, to call, examine their stock, peep into their smiling faces, order your goods, draw your pocket books, and you will soon see the white horse at your door.

SUNDAY SERVICES. "Father Tillinghast," the well known Quaker, an indefatigable S. S. laborer, will speak to-morrow morning at the Point, Rev. Mr. Rogers' church; at 2 P. M. at the Quarterly S. S. Concert, Hancock Street Church, Rev. Mr. Thwing's, and in the Evening at North Weymouth. The public are invited.

TO THE LADIES. Messrs. Cushman & Brooks have added to their new store, rooms especially for Cloaks and Shawls, and fitted the same with new styles and patterns, and would invite their friends and patrons to call and examine their extensive stock. The reader will remember the numbers of their new store are 90 and 92 Tremont-street, Boston.

DENTISTRY. Dr. S. Stocking, 19 Tremont Row, Boston, has associated with himself Dr. D. L. Stocking, a very able and accomplished practitioner, and we bespeak for them a continuance of the patronage which the excellence of their work and the reasonableness of their prices merits. See their card in today's paper.

Adams Literary Association.

With the month of October has the Adams Literary Association again commenced its career of usefulness, after an interval of five months, during which, the members have been recruiting their intellectual faculties for a vigorous Fall campaign in the debating line. On last Monday evening they commenced the good work by the election of the following officers:

President: Charles Marsh.
Vice President: Edward Brackett.
Secretary: James H. Mundy.
Assistant Secretary: George Randall.
Treasurer: Henry Barker.
Librarian: William P. Barker.
Directors: John Hardwick, Joseph G. Brackett, Henry Chubbuck, Henry McGrath, Charles Newcomb.

Trustees: L. P. Forbush, J. Mayhew Marsh, George Cahill, Francis M. Johnson, Edwin W. Marsh.
The Association is in a prosperous condition, with the exception of numbers, many of the members having exchanged the pleasures and advantages of home, for the tented field and battle strife, and the dangers of naval combat. The Association is represented in the army by all ranks, from private to Colonel. Several have already perished that their country might live.

They have a choice Library of several hundred volumes; besides which, some three or four hundred more will very soon be added to it when it will consist of valuable Public Documents, Encyclopedias, the works of the best Poets, Novelists, Essayists and Historians, besides many other books on various subjects.

The Association meets every Monday evening, at 7:15 o'clock, spending a portion of the time in select reading and speaking. After which there is a debate upon some subject previously assigned; these questions are certainly not circumscribed, since they comprise literary, political and religious matters.

When this cruel war is over, and the gallant defenders of their country's honor return to their welcoming friends and relations, then the Adams Literary with full numbers will be able to show its great importance. In the meantime, let the public do what it can, to aid this truly valuable institution, by furnishing good members to take the places of those who are absent at war.

Ladies and gentlemen are cordially invited to attend the meetings at Barker's Hall, over Mr. Gill's store.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

THE QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD. We learn from Mr. Cook, the gentlemanly Superintendent of this road, that the large and liberal patronage, which has been extended to it during the Summer, still continues; and that there is a good prospect of a large travel this winter. The Company, for this reason, are making every effort to accommodate their patrons. They have commenced moving their track from the northerly to the southerly side of the Turnpike, so as to prevent the snow-storms this winter, from putting a veto upon their travel. They intend to move about one mile of the old track, commencing where it now crosses the turnpike, (near Mr. Quincy's Avenue,) and continuing on the southerly side to the flats, North of the school house, where there is not much danger of the snow drifting to any extent.

The Company intend also to be prepared with new and beautiful sleighs, so as to be able to give their friends a jolly ride, accompanied by the music of merry bells, in case the "Snow Monarch" should think it wise to cover Mother Earth several feet with its light and feathery mantle.

"STRAW BUDS." A series of articles, under the above title, which have been in the course of publication through our columns, during the past year, are from the ready pen of a valued correspondent. The subjects introduced have been of a social and moral character, and presented in that easy and seductive manner, peculiar to the author, as to enlist the feelings and interests of the reader. The seeds thus sown, will, we think, in due time, yield a rich harvest. The tender bud, gives promise of the ripe fruit.

A NOVEL RACE. A race between a steam carriage and some horses at the Vermont State Fair resulted in favor of the horses.—The machine is a curiosity. It cost two thousand dollars, is two horse power, and weighs five hundred pounds. A hodful of coal will make steam enough to propel the carriage twenty-five miles making the expense of running it less than a cent a mile. It can go up or down any hill a horse can, but it cannot make time any where but on a straight course.

A paint mine has lately been discovered in California, which yields eighty-four different tints, varying from vermilion to dove color. The supply is large enough to last a hundred years.

SALVE AND SALVATION. The "little pot of ointment," might have meant Grace's Salve, which cures everything on the skin in the shape of eruptions. It cures boils also, and felioms, and sore breasts. In short there is such an emollient about it, that the ladies use it as a cosmetic. Only 25 cents. See advertisement in another column.

THE "COTTAGE." Through the kindness of Mr. N. B. Fernald, we were made the recipient one day the present week, of one of those beautiful, as well as celebrated, "Cottage" Kerosene Burners. They are small and very convenient to carry about, give a rich, mellow light, and is, without exception a valuable household article. The chimneys are removed very nicely by a little handle which makes them quite convenient about lighting. The lamps are similar to others we have seen, but for a large quantity of light they are superior to any we believe in the market, and are for sale at the store of Mr. Fernald on Washington street. He has also, a new and neat article for cleaning chimneys, which appears to be a general favorite with everybody.

RETURNED. Capt. Meserve has returned from Maine, and after a short stop in this place, started once more to join his Regiment. May good success attend him.

THE undersigned have associated themselves together in the practice of Dental Surgery, at the old office of Dr. S. Stocking, No. 19 Tremont Row, Boston. We are prepared to do the best of work in every department of our profession, and on the most REASONABLE TERMS. We shall give special attention to filling Decayed Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth in gold and silver, we shall bestow especial pains in mounting whole and half sets on Vulcanized Rubber base—a mode of adapting artificial teeth to the mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base being less expensive than gold and silver, brings the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We flatter ourselves that an experience of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer them. The use of Ether will be continued in our practice, and administered in the most judicious and scientific manner.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

REINSTATED. We are happy to announce that Dr. Edward Russell, of this town, has satisfactorily explained to the Secretary of War the discrepancy in his accounts with the Government and has been ordered to report for duty. In common with the community in which Dr. Russell has long resided, we were afflicted that anything should occur to cloud even for a moment the rising reputation of our young friend; and we are exceedingly rejoiced to be able to say that the Doctor has completely vindicated himself from the charges made against him.

AN OLD SOLDIER. Henry C. White, son of Mr. Thomas White, formerly of this town, called to see us yesterday. He enlisted in April, 1861, and has seen considerable hard fighting. In fact, he has taken a part in every battle his Company has been engaged to, with the exception of Gettysburg, at which time he was lying in the hospital, wounded. He belonged to Company I, 11th Mass. Regiment, but has been recently transferred to the 2d Battalion Invalid Corps, stationed at Chestnut Hill Hospital, Philadelphia. He is in rather feeble health, but will return to duty, after a short furlough of ten days, on Monday next.

FATAL ACCIDENT. A child of Mr. James B. Fletcher of this town, aged twenty-two months, while playing about the yard of its parent's residence, on Friday afternoon of last week, fell into an uncovered hoghead of water which was used as a cistern, and was drowned. This sad occurrence should warn parents and others to see that all cisterns are properly covered.

SICKNESS. We learn that Typhoid Fever is still quite prevalent in different parts of the town. Among the many prostrated, we are sorry to announce the Chairman of the Selectmen, Ebenezer Adams, Esq. He has been confined to his house some ten days, but we are happy to state that the latest accounts are that he is some better.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT. We are happy to learn from a reliable source, that Capt. B. F. Meserve, of the 18th Mass., returned to his Regiment one day last week with a Lieutenant Colonel's Commission. We congratulate him on his good fortune and believe it was merited.

IN FAVOR. We were very agreeably made the recipient of a fine present of that delicious fruit, the St. Michael pear, a few days since, through the politeness of our kind and considerate neighbor, Nathaniel White, Esq. Mr. White has been very successful in its culture; he has a number of trees, among other choice qualities, in his garden, in fine bearing order. He will please accept our thanks, and those of the juvenile members of our family for his very acceptable present.

TO OUR PATRONS. We have been renovating our office of late; adding to our former stock of materials, a new supply of the most fashionable job type, for every description of letter press printing; such as, Bill-Heads, Circulars, Business Cards, etc. Also, a very neat and highly finished letter, expressly designed for those exquisite, Visiting and Wedding Cards. Our facilities are now ample to meet all orders of our friends, as promptly, as in good taste, and on as reasonable terms, as can be obtained in Boston or elsewhere. We invite a trial, and guarantee satisfaction.

LOSS IN THE CAVALRY SERVICE. General Pleasanton has completed his official report of the operations of the cavalry in the late campaign. It exhibits the surprising fact that the total loss of the cavalry corps, from June ninth to the present time, in killed, wounded, and missing, is upward of four thousand. This illustrates the severity of the cavalry service very strikingly.

THE RANDOLPH TRANSCRIPT has departed this life. The publisher, Mr. Brown, in last week's issue, in a column of reasons, gave his readers to understand, that with the present number the weekly visits of the Transcript would be discontinued. The motive which prompted him to this course may be summed up in a few words—want of patronage. Six years of unremitting toil, having failed of success, a further probation, he thinks, would be an unjustifiable act of self-immolation. We shall miss the Transcript; it was a spicy little paper, and one of much local interest.

THE PRICE OF FUEL. The price of fuel is still on the rise; red and white ash coal, $11 per ton, and Franklin $12; Nova Scotia wood $11 per cord; Eastern birch wood, $12, and $10 for pine wood; slabs $8 and $9. The coal dealers state that prices will rise to a high notch before January, as the demand from the mines is greater than the supply, and Uncle Sam is using immense quantities.—Boston Herald.

From the Army of the Cumberland.

DEAR MOTHER: I hope you have not thought that I never intended to write again. We left Tullahoma, six weeks ago yesterday (Sunday). I suppose you received the short letter that I wrote that day. I have since told you not to worry about me, if I should make long intervals between my letters to you. I have not actually had a chance to write since we left Tullahoma. We stopped a few days at Bellefonte, Tennessee, and thence south, flanking Chattanooga. We crossed the Cumberland mountains, back and forth, four times; dragging our guns and horses most to death; it seemed to us like playing catch with the rebels. I suppose there will be no use in giving any details of our march, only that we have had pretty hard marching, on scant feed, also, water. We passed into Alabama, and out of Alabama, into Georgia, and out of Georgia, several times. However, we have made a fight out of those rascals, a little sooner than Rosecrans intended, I think. I can assure you both sides were handled pretty roughly, last Saturday and Sunday, (a week ago). We had Longstreet with a large corps of men, and we fought with Joe Johnston, and every body else, I should think. I suppose there was four or five of them, to one of us. I rather think they came pretty near springing a trap on old Rose, although we are here in Chattanooga, defying the whole Confederates to day.

Our poor little Brigade suffered considerably more than they ever did before. The 89th Illinois Regiment, in particular. My old Company (K) has only thirteen men left. A Lieutenant Colonel, Adjutant, three Captains, and three Lieutenants were killed, and two hundred privates. We lost twenty-one men in our Battery. You may imagine they threw their lead and iron amongst us pretty carelessly. I will just tell you how near I came of not writing this letter; a twelve pound shot came so near to my roof, that it took about half of my hat off, and burned quite a bunch of hair from the top of my head; it made me quite dizzy for a short time. I was acting as No. 1, (runner) on our piece. We had three batteries playing on us at one time. Several of our men became demoralized, and ran and left their post.

I have been away from home some time, and God knows I would like to see home once more, but as long as I have a post to fill, no man is going to fill it for me—unless I fall. I don't claim to be brave, neither do I crave a post in front of the enemy; nor do I unnecessarily expose myself. I go where I am directed to go, and duty calls. I suppose we must have lost fifteen hundred in killed; the Lord only knows how many wounded and prisoners; I can't imagine how many we lost. They are always thousands of men who run to the rear and hide away; the woods were full of such losers when we left the battle field Sunday night. The rebels generally get a great many prisoners in that way. The men get to the rear, and don't know where they are going; get lost, and then have great stories to tell.

I saw a couple of Longstreet's men after the battle of Saturday; they were among the prisoners our boys had taken. They say they had rather fight a double line of battle of Meade's (band box) men, than to fight a skirmish line of our boys. They charged three times on our boys Sunday afternoon in one place, with treble columns; we never fell back a foot, but as soon as the rebels wavered, we would charge with bayonets at double-quick, and with a tremendous yell. It is horrid to think of. I suppose you will see a full account of the battle in the papers; probably you will not get the true statement; but you will find that Johnson's Division done their duty—Willich's Brigade in particular. One of our boys was in the rear with our cannons—about the time our right was falling back, Rosecrans sat there on his horse, he was crying like a child; but we think as much of him as ever. We have been fortifying all the time since we fell back here; and have had several night attacks; they shelled us right smart the first two or three days and nights. The rebels left a fine lot of hospital buildings for us. This is a fine town. Our Battery is planted behind good breastworks, in the front yard of a splendid residence—a most beautiful town. How would you like to have a line of breastworks through your front yard, and then have all the trees cut down, and some General's head quarters in the parlor?

I am well; never better in my life; altho' we are reduced to half our numbers. Don't be worried about me, I shall take care of myself. I have received a number of letters from home, which I shall endeavor to answer the first opportunity. I wrote this in a great hurry—and all the confusion of the camp, dirt and carnage; so with my imperfections you must read charitably. My secretary, a splendid desk, which I held between my knees, I found on opening it, was an old copy of the Boston Directory, which the boys had picked up about town. I must close here. Good night.

September 29th. I will add to the above a line or two more to this meeting. We have uncommon dry weather. We have had but one light shower since we left Tullahoma. I believe our last battle was the only one during the war that was not accompanied with rain. The rebels have been quiet for the last thirty-six hours. I hardly think they will trouble us here. They evidently don't like to see us in this place. The rebels from the Potomac are dressed well. They don't look much like our rebels from Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi. Longstreet's men are dressed quite tasty; more so than a great many of our men. Our Division lost sixteen hundred and forty six men. Remember me to all your friends.

Yours affectionately, FRANK.

DELIRIUM TREMENS. A Boston paper says it has a record of thirty cases of deaths by delirium tremens in that city and immediate vicinity, within a month. Suppose it could be proved that the same number of deaths were caused by rattlesnakes that were allowed to roam about the country, it is probable that the city authorities do? The selling of the vile compounds under the name of liquors, are as directly the cause of the death of these men as rattlesnakes could be.—Portland Press, October 5.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, OCT. 15, 1863.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS.

The money transactions of the week have not been so strong as previously. The leading stocks fell well. The Old Colony Railroad shares tipped at $147, Boston and Worcester, $137, Boston and Lowell, $106. The receipts on the Metropolitan, including the Dorchester Avenue Road which came into their possession October 1st, instant, are nearly $14000 for ten days, or 1400 per day, without rent due from the Quincy, Broadway, or Suffolk Companies for the use of their tracks. Gold vibrating at 153. Government securities very firm. In fact, the national finances are represented in a favorable condition; the public debt being $1,222,756,000. In New York, on Tuesday $350,000 worth of United States Bonds were issued to foreign brokers, and the Government has money now on hand with which to pay the entire army for the month of Nov., which money was furnished by foreign capitalists. The Manufacturers' Insurance Company declared a semi-annual dividend of fifteen per cent. Such are some of the aspects of the financial market at home, and the high favor that our government paper is held abroad for foreign investments. The pleasant weather continuing into the second week of Oct. has a cheerful influence on all kinds of business enterprise, which in the nature of things cannot continue so good a great while longer. We may have dull times yet before spring, and every man of business should calculate for the future, learning wisdom from the past, not venturing too far on the sea of speculation.

LATE WAR NEWS.

That the two armies of the Potomac are lying in close proximity to each other, and that a general engagement between General Meade and Lee is daily expected. The authorities at Washington are doing all they can to save Rosecrans's army, and to enable him to whip the rebels, so that they will stay whipped. Troops are needed, and the Provost Marshals in various parts of Massachusetts have received instructions from Washington to use all their efforts to forward enlistments for two months, and if at the end of that time the quota of the State is unfilled, to proceed at once with another draft.

THE ELECTIONS.—POSITION DEFINED.

The recent elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Iowa, cannot be classed as party triumphs. All we want is a united sentiment, to crush this wicked rebellion, and bring the war to an end in a way in which the interests of all loyal communities will be duly secured in its termination. For this reason we are free to say, the Federal government representing the nation, should be sustained by Democrats and Republicans, in the exercise of all constitutional rights and powers to save the nation, and to put down rebellion and treason, as rebellion and treason. This is the loyal duty of every man, to save the Democratic freedom and the territorial integrity of our Republic. The Union victories of Tuesday last in Ohio and Pennsylvania over radicalism and treason, North and South, are as good for the safety of our liberties, as a great achievement by the wage of battles. It is the voice of the people, to stand by the flag. When the people, not parties, win victories, they understand what they mean. As loyal men, when the vitality of our country is threatened—its civil and religious liberties endangered by the ruthless hands of the Southern secessionist and the Northern disunionist, our duty to God and our country is to stand by its government in every effort to punish traitors; to suppress by force and arms this most nefarious rebellion; to strengthen the hands of the administration in its efforts to restore the Union by all the provisions of the Federal Constitution. For this reason we rejoice in Union victories, whether on the field of battle or at the ballot box; and every lover of his country, whether Democrat or Republican, will rejoice. Should our modesty permit, we shall bestow our vote at the coming election on candidates friendly to all means, in putting down this war against freedom, and of restoring the Union as our Fathers made for us. The Constitution must be forever preserved.

Rev. J. G. Bartholomew, of Roxbury, will preach at the Universalist Church, Weymouth Landing, to-morrow, at 10 1/2 A. M. and 2 P. M.

FALL ELECTIONS. Elections will be held in the following States on the days specified: Massachusetts Nov 3 Delaware Nov. 10 New York Nov 3 Iowa Nov. 10 Maryland Nov 3 Minnesota Nov. 10 Wisconsin Nov 5 W. Virginia Nov. 10

The elections in Pennsylvania and Ohio were held on Tuesday last. The returns come in slowly, but indicate large Union majorities. Curtin's majority in Pennsylvania is estimated 20,000. Brough's in Ohio at 60,000.

The late Eugene F. Trask.

PORT RANDALL, DAKOTA TERR., SEPTEMBER 10, 1863.

To the Publisher of the Patriot: At a meeting held in the Theatre Hall, Saturday evening, September 5th, by the officers and soldiers at Fort Randall, Dakota Territory, on the death of Sergeant Major Eugene F. Trask, of Company B, 41st Iowa Infantry, who came to his death while in the stage, on his way, under orders, for Sioux City, Iowa, Head Quarters, First Military District Department of the North West—by the deadly aim of the merciless Indians, secreted near Choteau Creek, about thirty miles east of Fort Randall. J. W. Davis, Company A, 41st Iowa Regiment was called to the chair, and Sergeant L. G. Cunningham, Company C, Secretary.

Remarks, highly touching and appropriate were made by Sergeant Cherry, Company B; Lieutenant Bacon, Dakota Cavalry; Captain Cooper, Company A, 41st Iowa Regiment, and others. A Committee was then appointed to draft Resolutions, expressive of the esteem of the officers and soldiers for Sergeant Trask, and their feelings in his sudden and murderous death; who reported the following, which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS: It has pleased the Supreme Ruler of the universe to call from our midst, our beloved friend and companion in arms, Eugene F. Trask, of Company B, 41st Iowa Regiment—who met his death as a true soldier, while on his way, under orders, for Sioux City, Iowa, at the hands of the merciless and barbarous Indian on the third ult., therefore,

Resolved: That in the many person of Eugene F. Trask, we recognized an earnest friend, an honest patriot in the cause of his country, and a brave, energetic and persevering officer and soldier in the army of the Union.

Resolved: That as a true gentleman and soldier, the character of Sergeant Major Eugene F. Trask is above reproach, and in his death our Battalion lost one of its brightest ornaments, and our cause one of its most faithful and devoted defenders.

Resolved: That it is with the deepest sadness that we miss him from our circle, our ranks and the cause of our country.

Resolved: That we bear no sympathy with those who croak so much in sympathy for what they so sympathizingly term "the poor Indian."

Resolved: That we feel that it is our duty to wage the war of extermination against all Indians armed against our people, and especially those that we may through proper evidence be led to believe to have a hand in the merciless assassination of our beloved comrade and brother.

Resolved: That we most deeply sympathize with the bereaved parents and friends of the deceased, and that we, his late companions in arms, will ever cherish and respect his memory for his patriotism, his bravery, and his character—and as one of the heroic sons of Wilson's Creek.

Resolved: That a copy of these Resolutions be forwarded to the parents of the deceased, also, to the County party of his native town; one to the Fort Randall News; one to the Wisconsin Democrat; one to the Annamora Eureka, and one to the Iowa City Republican.

A. R. CHERRY, Chairman of Com. On motion the meeting adjourned.

J. W. DAVIS, Chairman. L. G. CUNNINGHAM, Secretary.

We are prepared to do the best of work in every department of our profession, on the most reasonable terms. We shall give special attention to filling Decayed Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth on gold and silver, we shall have especial pains in mounting whole and half sets on Vulcanized Rubber base—a mode of adapting artificial teeth to the mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base being less expensive than gold and silver, brings the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We differ ourselves that an experience of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer them. The use of Ether will be resorted to in our practice, and administered in the most judicious and scientific manner.

Hood's "Season."

Summer's gone and over!
Fogs are falling down;
And with russet tinges
Autumn's doing brown.

Boughs are daily riven
By the gusty thief;
And the Book of Nature
Getteth short of leaves.

Round the tops of houses,
Swallows, as they flit,
Give, like yearly tenants,
Notices to quit.

Skies, of fickle temper,
Weep by turns and laugh—
Night and Day together,
Taking half and half.

So October endeth—
Cold and most perverse—
But the month that follows
Sure will pinch us worse.

Scrap.

DOUGHNUTS. One cup melted lard, one pint of milk, one cup of yeast; mix at night, in the morning when perfectly light add two cups brown sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, let it rise again till about quarter of an inch thick, and cut it out.

APPLE BATTER. Half pint of milk, one egg, flour enough to make a stiff batter; a little salt. Fill your pudding dish with sliced apples pour your batter over them and steam three hours. To be eaten with sauce.

Eels have been skinned since Noah came out of the ark; and printers have been cheated out of their just dues, ever since the Orientals printed with blocks of wood; yet neither do the eels get used to being skinned nor the printers to being fleeced. This argues great obstinacy on the part of eels and printers.

LIKE PRODUCE LIKE. This is true, whether applied to animals or vegetables. It is a law of nature and therefore immutable. If we would multiply a choice breed of animals, a valuable variety of plants, or an elegant flower, we must take care to breed from those in greatest esteem.

Different occasions draw out different parts of a man's character till the whole is known, however much he may try to disguise it.

Of little human flowers, Death gathers many. He places them upon his bosom, and he is transformed into something less terrific than he was before. We learn to gaze and shudder not, for he carries in his arms the sweet blossoms of our earthly hopes.

A lady who had read of the extensive manufacture of odometer to tell how far a carriage had been run, said she wished some Connecticut genius would invent an instrument to tell how far husbands had been in the evening when they just step down to the post office?

It is said that the Tartans invite a man to drink by gently pulling his ear. A good many of our people will "take pull" without waiting to have their ears pulled.

A lady should discard a lover that she can't influence. She shouldn't have a beau that she can't bend.

Frontenelle describes a lover as a man who, in his anxiety to obtain possession of another, loses possession of himself.

The indigent world might be clothed from the trimmings of the vain.

He that borrows binds himself with his neighbor's rope.

Bacon says that labor conquers all things, but idleness conquers more people than labor does.

The sweetest and most satisfactory connection in life are those formed between persons of congenial minds, equally linked together by the conformity of their virtues, and by the ties of esteem.

One may say what he pleases if he only speaks through teeth and from the heart. Loving tones carry truths into the offending. When we are most tender at heart, our words are most powerful.

Happy the man who is an early riser. Every morning day comes to him with a virgin's love—full of bloom, of purity and freshness. The youth of Nature is contagious, like the gladness of a happy child. I doubt if any man can be called old so long as he is an early riser and an early waker.

THE VOTING LIST. As an annual custom we have transferred this matter to our columns. There is an increase over last year's list, of some twenty-five names, notwithstanding the depletion of our population by the casualties of war and other causes, leaving an aggregate of over eleven hundred voters.

For the Patriot.

Norfolk County Teachers' Association.

The Thirty-Second Semi-Annual meeting of this Association was held at the Town Hall, Quincy, on the 16th and 17th of October. The Association was called to order at 10 o'clock by the President, E. Frank Wood, Esq., of Dorchester. Rev. E. P. Thwing invoked a Divine blessing, after which, a hearty welcome was extended to the Teachers present by the Rev. John D. Wells. A Song of Welcome, kindly written for the occasion by William S. Morton, Esq., was then sung by pupils from the High School. The President briefly responded.

The morning session was occupied in a discussion: "The best methods of conducting Recitations, so as to cultivate a retentive Memory."

Remarks were made by D. W. Jones of Roxbury, D. B. Hagar of Jamaica Plain, and Mr. Houghton of Dorchester.

At the opening of the afternoon session, the question of the morning was discussed by Messrs. Hagar, Marble, and Patten. At 2 1/2 o'clock an able lecture was presented by General H. K. Oliver of Salem. The lecturer chose for his subject: "Some fallacies in Education;" and clearly showed their effects upon the pupil in the school room, as well as amid the duties of after life.

At the close of the lecture, an Essay, prepared by a Female Teacher, was read by the Secretary. The subject: "General Exercises in Schools" was then discussed by Messrs. Patten, Mayhew, Jones, Kimball, and Hagar. The attention of those present was called to that most excellent work, entitled, "Helps to Education in the Homes of our Country," recently presented to the public by Rev. Warren Burton; and quite a number of copies were sold upon the spot.

By special request, the exercises of the evening were commenced by a repetition of the Welcome Song, to which the Association had listened in the morning. The President then introduced Rev. A. P. Putnam of Roxbury, as the lecturer of the evening. Having passed sixteen months in other lands, he spoke to us of our "Our Country, as viewed by an American travelling abroad." The lecture was replete with noble sentiments and patriotic feeling, and was eloquently delivered.

Reference was made to the influence of our war upon other peoples; not upon France and England alone, but upon the Swiss, the Italians, the Sheik of the desert, and the boatmen of the Nile, as well. Our struggle serves as an inspiration to the Old World's millions, and should our nation fall, there would be no Star of Freedom shining in the West; no refuge for the children of oppression hunted from the land of their nativity. One of the deepest impressions made upon the Speaker's mind while abroad, was the necessity of maintaining the Union—not for ourselves alone—but as a boon to the nations of the earth. Mention was made of the part our Free Schools are to play in preparing men, rich with intellect, possessed of high aspirations and resolved to live to noble ends. This is the country of the future. Here is land for the landless—a home for the homeless. Here humanity is to make its greatest history. At the close of the lecture the Association adjourned to spend a social hour, enlivened with song.

Saturday Morning. The exercises of the day were commenced with prayer by Rev. J. D. Wells; after which, the question, "How large a portion of a Teacher's time for reading and study, should be devoted to books strictly Educational," was ably discussed by Messrs. Marble, Hagar, Newcomb, Northrop, Houghton and Jones. As the hour for adjournment approached, Mr. Patten offered appropriate resolutions, thanking the citizens of Quincy for their hearty, abundant, and graceful hospitalities, and gratefully acknowledging the kindness of William S. Morton, Esq., and the pupils of the High School, in offering the sweet Song of Welcome.

At about 12 m. the Association adjourned with the singing of "Old Hundred."

This meeting is considered the largest ever held by the Association, and was certainly inferior to none in point of interest. More than ample entertainment was offered by the citizens of Quincy, and those who were present will remember their acts of kindness with tender interest.

GRANVILLE B. PUTNAM, Secretary.

ENCOURAGING. The captains in the nine months regiments have not yet received their pay, and an officer who has just returned from Washington, brings the information that the accumulation of quarterly returns is so enormous at the departments in that city that the officers above mentioned will not probably receive attention for a year at least, and perhaps much longer than that.

A NOVEL MODEL REFORM.—One of the great questions of the day relates to poison discipline. How can we cure a felon? Is the cry. We answer that Grace's wonderful Salve not only cures felons, but boils, burns, scalds, flesh wounds, bruises, all eruptions of the skin and scalp, and even the most obstinate old ulcers and other sores. It is a wonderful compound, suited alike to the skin of a child and of the adult. No one who has ever tried its virtues will ever be without a box of it. Sold everywhere. 25 cts. a box. See advertisement in another column.

LOCALS.

The Fall trade is now in full operation, and nearly all kinds of enterprises, are active and remunerative. The great advances in the daily necessities of life are pinching and oppressive to the industrial classes. In fact, every thing is high, without any philosophical reason. For the season has been abundant, and our markets are store houses groaning under the vast quantities of produce and goods they contain. The magic rise in prices is clearly the result of gigantic speculative extravagance. According to the unerring laws of trade, the evil will cure itself in a few months, and the plans of these vampires, or moderns, will burst like the South Sea Bubble. Now, this speculative mania, is brought on by that extravagance, (a shame and disgrace to our country) which is developing itself in every class of society. We see it in the equipages, dresses, amusements, and the thousands of luxuries, wherever we go. Every body is calculating to get rich, and hence follows boundless speculation and the love of luxury; and while this dangerous spirit of extravagance continues, people will have to pay exorbitant prices, and are in fact educating themselves for it; but distress will follow before winter is gone to count less households. The lecture season is not important. The Irish had contributed much of an interesting address from Henry Giles, Esq., of New York, delivered before an audience of nearly five hundred, under the auspices of the St. John's Benevolent Society at the Tremont Temple. His subject was "Irish born citizens, their relation to the nation and government of the United States." The Boston Herald thus neatly alludes to Mr. Giles' admirable lecture:

"The speaker had heard much of the blame of slavery charged upon the Irishman, but he did not see how the charge could be consistently sustained, and he thought no country had been so free from injustice to free labor as Ireland. The Irish had contributed much of that labor which has made great and glorious the power of the United States. And the country had, in turn, been beneficial to them, for they were allowed and enjoyed privileges and facilities which they could not obtain in their native land; there they were to have their talents and abilities recognized."

"The speaker here dwelt at some length upon the character of the Irish, and while admitting that they had faults, claimed for them their many virtues, and declared their most important relation to the nation and government of the United States, to be the civic and political relation. It was the highest, because it made them members of the body politic."

"Mr. Giles detected three grand ideas in our national government—supremacy of authority, unity of jurisdiction, and perpetuity of duration. He demonstrated its perfection, rehearsed its inducements for adoption by the foreign born, and referred to the confidence placed in it by them, as well merited. He also alluded to the claims the government had upon the foreign born, and while complimenting the many sacrifices they had made and were still making in the present struggle, he considered them well deserved."

"Mr. Giles closed with some well expressed views upon the war, his remarks being commendable, no less for their eloquence than their patriotism."

WAR RUMORS.

The latest from Virginia, that skirmishing had briskly commenced with the rebels. Lee has in line of battle at Buckland Mills, and that the conflict was considered imminent. That General Beauregard has been superseded in the command of the army of the Cumberland, and that General Grant takes his place. Matters remain quiet before Charleston. Upon the whole, there is a cheerful feeling here touching the movements of our armies, and the speedy triumph of our cause. The patience of a "united North" to crush the rebellion is likely to be realized. We must conquer by force of arms the rebels or be conquered by them. The job is easy, to subdue this rebellion, if we are undivided in sentiment through the loyal States. The call of three hundred thousand more volunteers recently made by the President, should be responded to. Governor Seymour of New York, has promptly met the response, and in his Proclamation of yesterday, urgently appeals to the patriotism of the citizens of that State, to come forward and support the Government in its present emergency.

Our readers are invited to bring forward their paper Stock. See advertisement of Geo. W. Wheelwright, 26 Water street, Boston. The price is again high. They had better not wait until it declines. Kindle your fires with shavings and sell your papers and the money will go a good way towards paying a year's subscription for a good newspaper.

GRAND MASS MEETING. The ticket holders in Perham's Exhibition in aid of the invalid Soldiers will meet at Faneuil Hall, Boston, on Wednesday evening, October 28th.

WORKING-MEN, ATTENTION! The Lecture this evening at the Town Hall, to which you are invited by a special call, which appears in another column, will be one in which you have a deep interest. Don't fail to be present.

Summary of Intelligence.

The President has issued a proclamation calling for 300,000 new troops. Volunteers will be received until the fifth of January, next, when the deficiency will be made up by another draft.

The venerable Josiah Quincy heads the list, and Edward Everett comes next in the subscription for a sword for General Banks.

The auditing of the accounts of the Internal Revenue Department, embracing a period of seven months and including several millions of dollars, showed only a discrepancy of two cents in the balancing.

The number of Provost Marshals, Assistant ditto, clerks, aids, helps, enrolling officers, engaged in carrying out the conscription act is set down as numbering altogether about 75,000. The number of conscripts secured is estimated at 60,000. The wages say that it would be better to draft that army, already under pay, of 75,000 office holders, and let the conscripts go.

Another Heart to Let.

A heart to let—a heart to let—

Who bids? who wants to hire?

A heart, which should your own forget,

Will not with grief expire;

I do not boast its value much,

'Tis filled with vagaries vain,

And, school'd beneath a practised touch,

Breathes back a practised strain.

Subject to change as torrid climates,

'Tis fond of you—or you;

—But then 'twill suit these "business times"

As well as one more true;

The cheapest chance you'll find by far;

'Till lease it "less than cost,"

Since constancy is "under par,"

And love is "labor lost."

A heart! come, bid, be not afraid—

'Tis quite a pleasing toy—

And just the thing for idle maid

To wear for idle boy.

"A bargain is this heart of song.

Bid loud—how much?—bid fast,

The lease is just one fortnight long,

Ding-dong—I cry "a heart to hire,"

Almost "as good as new,"

If after fourteen days you're

'Twill care not if ye do;

But warranted till no more—

Else 'twould the world amaze—

Ding-dong—who'll take this heart in store

For only fourteen days?

Strops.

CHEAT SOAP. One bar of common resin soap, one pound of soda, one ounce of borax. Dissolve the soda and borax in eight pints rain or soft water, add the soap,
and boil until dissolved, when you will have upon cooling ten pounds of good soap.

JUMBLER. Three cups of sugar, two of butter, three eggs, four tablespoonfuls of sugar cream, one teaspoonful of saleratus. Roll thin, sprinkle coffee sugar thickly on the top
before placing in the oven.

THE VALUE OF SILENCE. Talk is not the only valuable thing about a man. There is often a more potent influence than fluency.
Thus, when a pert young barrister once boasted
to a member of the bar that he had received twenty guineas for speaking in a certain law suit, the other replied—"I received double that sum for keeping silence in that very same case."

It is customary in Denmark, to surround
each grave with a row of cheerful shrubs,
at the fancy of the survivors; thus alternate thickets of roses and cypress, of lilacs and juniper, give the air of a garden to every churchyard.

A man proves himself fit to go higher, who shows that he is faithful where he is. A man that will not do well in his present place
because he longs to be higher, is neither fit
to be where he is, nor yet above it.

Some things come by odd names. The most uncommon quality in man is called "common sense;" a paper half a mile long is a "brief."

"When I am a man," is the poetry of childhood. "When I was a child," is the poetry of old age.

Men are generally like wagons; they rattle
prodigiously when there is nothing in them.

Economy is no disgrace; it is better living
on a little than outliving a great deal.

A pretty girl and a wild horse are liable to do much mischief; for one runs away with a fellow's body, and the other runs away
with his heart.

Let us be patient. A conflagration would no doubt cause a dawn, but better wait for the break of day.

A lady asked a pupil at a public examination of the Sunday school—"What was the sin of the Pharisees?" "Eating camels, marm," quickly replied the child. She had read the Pharisees strained at guests and swam down camels.

Be in peace with many; nevertheless,
have but one councillor of a thousand.

Miscellaneous.

The Gift of God.

Just one year ago to-day, Henry.

The lady said the words solemnly, and under her breath, so that you would have known at once, it was some great and heavy sorrow of which she was speaking—something so terrible in its experience that her heart shrank and faltered with the memory of the past.

I know it, Alice, dear sister, answered the gentleman, and his dark eye grew mournful with sadness as they looked into the bright grate fire, that was filling the pleasant room with its crimson glow. The thought had not been absent from either of our hearts
for a moment to-day, though neither had courage to speak of it.

What great mysteries, depths of richness,
of love and faith there are in that prayer?
and now he was speaking more to himself
than to his listener.

What prayer, Henry?

And the lady laid down her sewing, and looked with mournful fondness on her brother.
She was still young, and she had a fair,
sweet countenance, with azure eyes, and delicate features, and her voice had that soft, tender, low-running sound which always falls like healing upon the heart of a mourner.

Her brother was a man in the prime of his years, and though his face was strong and manly, it had some of the winning expressiveness of his sister's.

One year ago that day, the shadow of death
had darkened the fair house of the merchant, Henry Morford, and Ellen, the gentle and dearly beloved wife of his youth, had gone
from the shelter of her fair home on earth, to that upper homestead, whose titles were bought by the life and the death of the Son of God; that upper homestead, over whose immortal roof the winds never rise, and the rains never fall.

That old prayer, Alice, which our mother taught us, and which I said every day through my childhood, and away up into my youth and manhood, without dreaming what was in it, until God took away my darling, and then I knew what it meant: "Thy will be done!"

Alice Morford drew closer to her brother,
and the tears still on her cheeks, as she said:
Ah, Henry, it took me a long time to say that prayer from my heart.

And it cost mine many a sharp struggle, laying her head down on his knee, while he smoothed the bands of soft brown hair, for the brother and sister were orphans, and dearer than any thing in the world to each other.

But it is always so with God's words. We never comprehend what is in them, until some experience of our own touches the springs of some blessed passage, and then its doors flash
open, and our souls go into it, and behold! it is like a fair garden, filled with stately trees,
and the boughs of some are full of blossoms
which fill the air with fragrance, and the branches of others hang with golden and purple fruits, and there are songs there, and sweet flowing waters; and our souls are strengthened and healed.

Ah, go on, go on, Henry; for Alice looked up in her brother's face, and she saw the light that overflowed it, making it radiant,
was the light of the soul.

I thought I heard a footstep in the hall.

They must have forgotten to lock the front door, and the wind has blown it open, exclaimed Alice, lifting her head, as the blasts thicketed of roses and cypress, of lilacs and juniper, give the air of a garden to every
churchyard.

And just as the gentleman was rising, they caught the sound of a low, fluttering rap at the door. He opened it quickly, and a small child stood there, her face and hands blue with the cold, her little meekly clothed figure shivering, and her dark eyes full of tears;

altogether a half-frozen, pitiful little object,
the sight of which must have touched any heart, not exactly stone.

Come in, my child; what is it you want?

said the merchant, and he took the little one
in his arms, and set her down before the grate fire, and Alice looked on her with eyes full of surprise and pity.

Please, sir, can you tell me the way to the baker's? I've lost my way, and can't find it.

But such a little body as you ought not to be out on a night like this. How in the world did you get in here?

I saw the door was blown open, and so I came right in to ask you, for Mrs. Waters will be very angry if I don't get back with the yeast.

And who is Mrs. Waters? asked Alice, leaning forward, and removing the child's old,
soiled, brown hood from her head, and a mass
of beautiful golden, half-tangled hair fell about her face.

She's the woman I've lived with ever since mamma died; to take care of the baby, and to run of errands. She lives in the lower part of the house.

There was something in the little creature's
quiet, intelligent manner, and in her clear articulation, strangely at contrast with her miserable clothes; and the knowledge that she was an orphan went at once to the hearts of the gentleman and lady.

Come to me, and I will warm your hands,
said Mr. Morford, and he took the little pinched fingers in his own, and rubbed them tenderly.
Now tell us when your mother died?

Last spring, sir. She hired the front chamber of Mrs. Waters, and took in sewing—
that was a long time after papa died.

And what is your name?

Ellen Sargent, sir.

The gentleman drew the child close to him with a caressing movement, for she wore
the name that was sweetest to him on earth.

And you like to live with Mrs. Waters, my little girl, and is she kind to you, as your mother was?

Two great tears oozed out of the child's eyes and stood still on her thin cheeks.

Mamma loved me, she said simply.

And you don't think Mrs. Waters does?

She says I'm dreadfully in the way, and that it's quite too much to have other people's children left on one's hands; and all I'm good for is to take care of the baby, and run
of errands; for I ain't strong.

Poor, poor child. Your appearance tells your own story better than your words? said
the gentleman, and he gathered her up close to his heart.

She looked up to him with her dark, wistful
eyes, a moment, then the small, thin arms crept round his neck. I like you very, very much, murmured the child, and as the soft heat of the room crept through her chilled frame, the lids dropped over her eyes, and she fell into a sound slumber with her head carefully pillowed on the merchant's breast.

It was a delicate, sweet face which rested
there—notwithstanding it was wan and soiled; the gentleman and lady saw this, as they watched the child's gentle breathing.

We cannot let her go back to that woman,
brother.

No, Alice. We will keep her with us. I will go and see Mrs. Waters in the morning, and I think I can induce or compel her to give up the child. Of course she cares nothing for her.

Of course not, or she would not have been so barbarous as to send her out on such a night as this.

Poor little creature. My heart warms over her already. To think we shall have that dear name in our midst again. God must have sent us the child.

At last, the little girl woke up with a sudden start, and gazed around the room in terror and bewilderment; but kind tones soon
re-assured and comforted her.

Oh, you won't send me back to Mrs. Waters? I'm afraid she'll scold me, she moaned, and her face turned beseechingly from the brother to the sister.

No, my dear, answered Alice Morford, as she held before her the plate of tempting food which a servant had just placed on the table. You shall never go back to that base woman again, but stay here always, if you like. Come, now, cheer up, and try to eat
some of this nice cake.

The merchant was as good as his word.—
The next morning he had an interview with Mrs. Waters. She resided in an old brown, rheumatic house, not far from his residence.

She was a coarse, harsh, vulgar woman, with half a dozen brawling children, and the care of these, and an impenetrable husband, pleaded
some small excuse for the character of terragant, which was written as strongly on her face, as the heart can write itself in the features.

She had been somewhat alarmed for the safety of the little orphan, whom she had sent on an errand the previous evening, supposing the child knew the way, and attempted to excuse herself, when Mr. Morford reproached her with the cruelty of her conduct in allowing a child to go out on such a dark, bitter night, by saying her boys were absent, and they had no bread for supper.

She was quite willing to resign all claims on Ellen, saying spitefully, she thought it was bad enough for other people to die in her house, without leaving their children on her hands to support, and Mr. Morford was glad to escape from the sound of her voice, thanking God that he had rescued the little orphan
from such a home.

Ellen, said the merchant, and his voice dwelt with a caress on the dearly beloved name, you are to be my little girl now, and I am to be your father. Are you glad to hear this?

She came to his side, and looked up wistfully in his face. She wore a dark woollen dress, which had been hastily revived and rejuvenated from Alice's wardrobe, and her golden hair fell in bright curls about her face.

I shall like to be your little girl, she said,
nestling up to the gentleman, and you will love and take care of me, just as mamma used to?

Yes, lifting her on his knees, and kissing
the fair forehead, I will deal tenderly with you as a mother, my little Ellen.

And Henry, the child shall be unto both of us a blessed gift, the gift of God, said his sister.

Amen, answered Henry Morford, and then he repeated to himself those words of the Master's, "Inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

And again the brother and sister beheld
the beauty and glory and riches there are in these words, for the key had been given them to unlock their treasury and behold
the great jewels within.—Watchman and Reflector.

Letter from Philadelphia.

I well remember when the "Patriot" was started. It was then an experiment. But, it was one which succeeded. The paper has since passed through various mutations, but still maintains its existence and continues to do good. Long may it occupy its present field.

You may be pleased to hear from our old Quaker city. It differs in many particulars from your old Puritan characters. It was settled by different persons, and their descendants are still very different from those of your State. We have just had one of the most important elections ever held in the good old State of Pennsylvania, and the Republicans, as you probably know, have elected their Governor. It has been a severe blow to the Democrats.

No city has done more for our soldiers than Philadelphia. No regiment from New England has gone hungry through this city.
The ladies have done nobly; and, though they have spent so much time and money
since the war began, yet, they have not become "weary in well doing." They still continue to visit the Hospitals every day, and the blessings of thousands of the soldiers have come upon them.

Your correspondent has had the pleasure
of seeing many of the soldiers from your part of the country, and it has afforded him great pleasure, and they have seemed to be gratified.

We now have many soldiers and sailors here, and I visited a young lad yesterday
from Weymouth, who is in our Naval Hospital. He is sick with typhoid fever. I was pleased to find him recovering.

I wish you could see the Iron Clads now being built in this city, you would not doubt but that Charleston would be taken.

Times were never better here for people to make money. Indeed, the great trouble seems to be that so many have their noses in the public crib, that there are few who wish the war to end. This is bad. But, still, we are very nearly all hoping that the war will never end, till slavery ends. As the South began it, we all hope they will get enough of it. We are glad to see that the Government begins to realize that a negro is no better than a white man—and, consequently,
are willing that he should do a part of the fighting. It is a fact that our colored soldiers are ready to fight for the whites.

Yours, &c., Wm. M. CORNELL.

For the Patriot.

Educational.

Extract from the Report of the School Committee of Woburn.

The government of a school should be equable, firm, mild. Passion in a teacher is fire in a magazine. Teachers must bridle their tongues. All coarse, flat, rough expressions must be wholly avoided. Indulgence in them to any extent is reprehensible, indismissible. All railing of any scholar's physical defects, or mental peculiarities, is uncivilized, brutal, and is not to be suffered in the school room for a moment. All low and gross comparisons are to be avoided. A school, is a place of education, culture, refinement, not of barbarism. We consider any deficiency in refinement of speech and deportment in a teacher a much greater deficiency than to be unable to spell conscience or state a sum in proportion. Correct and refined pronunciation and speech are more important in a teacher than a knowledge of grammar, in an educational point of view.

It is useless to teach scholars rules of orthography, which are perpetually violated by the instructor.

Corporal punishment must sometimes be inflicted, but it must be resorted to only in extreme cases, and with great deliberation;
a sufficient time being permitted to elapse
after the offence to cool the passions and give opportunity for thought. It should never be inflicted, if possible to avoid it, in the presence or hearing of other scholars. It should never be inflicted in haste or anger.

The teacher who can govern a school well without resort to physical suffering has attained the summit of excellence.

Every teacher should strive to attain it.
But if scholars will not obey they must suffer
the penalty of their transgressions, and the way of transgression in the school room or elsewhere is hard.

Autumn Beauties.

THE FADING OF THE LEAF.

The woods have doffed their verdant hue, and are now decked in their glory. The mountains viewed in the light of our glorious Autumn sunset seem set all ablaze, as it were! Like the bush in Horeb, the woods seem to be on fire, but are not consumed.
To say our Autumn weather is beautiful,
gives no idea of the glory of the American fall, and the gorgeousness of our Autumn scenery. While the trees, in putting on their rich dress, assume all the colors of the rainbow, the mellow haze of the atmosphere softens all these bright colors, and presents a scene more glorious than poet can describe or painter portray.

"The fading of the leaf" and its fall are not produced by frost, as is commonly supposed. Leaves were designed to last only for a limited time, and then to be thrown off, or else perish and decay on the stem, after having fulfilled their office. In our deciduous trees and shrubs, the leaves of the season are mostly developed within a short period, and they all perish at nearly the same time. They begin to languish, and assume their autumnal
tints, or even fall, before the early frosts.
Some leaves are cast off, indeed, while their tissues have by no means lost their vitality;
others die and decay on the stem without falling, as is the case with endogenous plants.

Truly, the heavens declare the greatness
of our Creator, and the earth's teeming products loudly speak forth the goodness of the Heavenly Father, which, in such rich profusion scatters our pathway with choice and inestimable blessings. "He crowneth the year with his goodness," and maketh the earth to rejoice in his presence.

To the thoughtful, pensive mind, these are the sweetest days of the circling year.—
While the autumn breezes waft their soft zephyrs around us, and invigorate and strengthen the drooping spirits with their refreshing gales, they seem to whisper the solemn lessons of mortality, which, like nature,
in this interesting and instructive season of the year, is subjected to ripen and mature,
fade and die.

Rambles about Salem.

SALEM, OCT. 19, 1863.

To a person who has the least love for antiquity this fine old town presents numerous attractions. I came hither last week and have enjoyed every hour of the time since.
Yesterday was one of Autumn's most glorious days. Nature had on her richest robes of scarlet and green and purple and crimson, while warm, sunny skies drew un-wonted numbers to the various sanctuaries
in the city. The old quaint looking "Tabernacle," the house of the "Seven gables," and many other relics of the past, have been removed since my last visit—a score of years ago. Yet many still remain. This morning, in company with George A. Ward, Esq., of the Historical Society of New York city, I visited the house erected by his honored ancestor, George Curwen, in 1642, on the corner of Essex and North streets. This building, celebrated for the trial of "Salem Witches," was framed in England of red oak, and is still in excellent preservation, although nearly two and a quarter centuries old. The apartment in which the examination in 1692
took place is occupied by an apothecary;
and around the wall, and on the beam above are advertisements of "Sarsaparilla," "Ayer's pills," etc. reminding me of similar metamorphoses which I have noticed in the homes of European celebrities. A thousand pities!
But the remorseless hand of progress "cuts down all, both great and small." In the City Clerk's office we were allowed to examine the old, time-worn documents, the death warrants and other papers connected with the history of the Witch delusion. The veritable pine taken from the persons of the bewitched were also shown. From the Court House, a mile's walk, or a ride in the horse cars, brings the stranger to the famous Gal-
low's Hill, where the condemned witches,
twenty in all, were executed.

A rustic stand now takes the place of the gibbet. From this high elevation may be had a charming view of the city, harbor and bay, with the surrounding towns. An hour or two in the Marine Museum, Plummer Hall
and Essex Institute, a visit with my old friend, Rev. Dr. Felt, the Historian, have left the pleasantest memories. But no more at present.

Stray Buds—No 24.

"We behold their tender buds expand,
Emblems of our own great resurrection;
Emblems of the bright and better land."

BY WILLIE F. GILCHRIST.

DREAMS.

When night has settled on the peaceful earth, and the season of rest and quiet has come to weary mortals, then the trials and cares of life, with all their coarseness and reality, are thrown to the winds, and rising from its earthly sorrows the soul flies to other and brighter scenes; and for a brief period roams
amid the blissful scenes of dream-land; lingers by its fountains, dwells in its fairy castles, rambles in its cooling groves, and takes a glimpse of Heaven. Freed from its bonds, it wanders at pleasure, and weaves fantastic
fancies around the brain of the unconscious sleeper. The lonely wanderer again treads
the streets of his native city; sits within his early home—gazes his dear ones once again;
the care-worn sailor quickly traverses the ocean's wave, and seeks his cottage, and is wrapped in the embrace of his fond wife and darling boys; the convict, leaving bonds and fetters far behind, stands a freeman once more, upon the soil of his native land, hurrying defiance to the haughty oppressor; the mother
once again clasps to her bosom the darling babe, who has slept for many a day beneath the grave-yard mould; the wife be-holds her intemperate husband as she first knew him; handsome and generous, and her heart thrills with joy. To these dreaming mortals how swiftly speed the hours; and ere they have fairly tasted of Fancy's sweet delights, the blush of morn puts shadowy dreams to flight; and all awaken to the stern,
cold reality; awaken to grasp the world by the throat once more, and struggle for existence;
sighing that dreams, like fame, should be so fleeting.

Sweet dreams come to the sleeper's brain,
In this the still summer night;
The wand'rer to his home again,
Returns with joy and fond delight.

A Candid Boy.

What did your mother say my little man?
Did you give her my card? asked an inexperienced young gentleman of a little boy whose mother had given him an invitation to call upon her and whose street door was accordingly opened to his untimely summons by the urchin.

Yes, sir, I said the urchin, quite innocently,
and mother said, if you were not a natural born fool, you wouldn't come on Monday morning, a time when everybody was washing.

At this juncture mamma, with a sweet smile of welcome, made her appearance at the end of the hall, when, to her surprise, Mr.
Varisoph, the visitor, bowed.

What in the world does the man mean?
inquired the mother.

I dunno, replied the urchin, guess he's forgot nothing.

"Naked Truth."

The eccentric John Holmes used frequently in his addresses to different juries to explain the meaning

three months to brand one of the finest quality, and I saw some hats which looked like fine linen, and are valued at fifty dollars apiece, even here.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, October 31st, 1863.

Town Teachers' Association.

The Teachers of Quincy met on last Monday evening at the Coddington School House for the purpose of forming an Association for mutual improvement and for the promotion of the educational interests of the town.

There were nineteen Teachers present. A Constitution was adopted, and the following Board of officers was chosen:

President:—G. B. Putnam.
Vice President:—Seth Dowling, Jr.
Secretary:—Alfred Bunker.
Treasurer:—L. P. Forbush.

Directors:—E. J. Conine, G. N. Gage, N. M. Dow, A. A. Holbrook, L. M. Fuller.

This Association is to hold semi-monthly meetings; the exercises of which are to be discussions, select readings, essays and papers.

It is believed that many advantages will result to the teachers and the youth they have in charge, from the association of so many whose position and interests naturally lead them to seek out the best methods for guiding the youthful mind aright.

HORSE RAILROAD EXTENSION. At a meeting of the Roxbury City Government, held on Monday evening last, a communication was received from Geo. Eaton, Esq., President of the Quincy Horse Railroad, stating that the Company intend to apply to the Legislature to extend their track to Braintree, Weymouth, and thence through Roxbury, and to use horses or "Dummy" engines on the cars.

ANOTHER LIQUOR CASE. On complaint of Isaac Singleton, George D. Follet of this town was convicted before Justice Adams, of liquor selling, on Tuesday last, and sentenced to pay a fine of fifty dollars with costs, and six months in the House of Correction. He appealed and gave bonds in the sum of two hundred dollars for trial in December.

LECTURE. The lecture to Working-Men, by Rev. D. F. Goddard, announced for last Saturday evening, on account of the storm, was postponed until to-morrow, Sunday evening, at the same time and place. See notice in another column.

PERSONAL. Lieut. Thaddeus Churchill, late Sergeant in the 33d Regiment, arrived home a few days since, on a short furlough. He has received a commission from the President, as Second Lieutenant, third regiment, (colored) United States Army, and ordered to report at Morris Island, Charleston, (S. C.). It will thus be seen that he has entered the regular army, and may remain for life.—May his deeds be chivalrous and his life full of honor and glory.

A NEW ORGAN. The Universalist Society of this town, having during the present week caused their old organ to be removed and a new one placed in its stead. It was built by Mr. Samuel S. Hamill of East Cambridge, and its superior qualities are to be tested this evening, at seven o'clock. We learn that a general invitation is extended to the public to be present, and judge of its merits.

BOSTON THEATRE. This house has been crowded during the present week to hear the usual routine of Shakespearean plays, and those of other eminent authors, performed by that masterly tragedian, Edwin Booth. His style is natural and powerful, and his present engagement has been one complete success. He is to continue one week longer.

Rev. T. B. Thayer, of Boston, will preach in the Universalist Church, Weymouth Landing, to-morrow, at 10 1/2 A. M., and 2 P. M.

KERSHAW & HAYWARD'S EXHIBITION. Comprising forty-three Tableaux in the Life of Christ, and twelve Views in Modern Palestine. Illustrated by Three Large Panoramas. Painted on twelve thousand feet of canvas, by the celebrated artists, Robert and William Pearsons, of New York city. The Panorama exhibit 7244 Life-Size Figures.

This painting, as a work of art, is one of the great achievements of modern times. To the Christian and Biblical scholar, it awakens new emotions, as the canvas faithfully reflects some hallowed scene, as recorded in the Sacred Writings;—and to the lover of art, beauty and excellencies of the highest order. The artists are indebted to the creative genius of the Masters of the old school—Raphael, Michael Angelo, Vermet, West and others, for the imaginary scenes in the life of Christ, and the views of Palestine, to sketches taken in the Holy Land, which are pronounced truthful and correct. The press is loud in its praise and universally recommends it to the attention of the public.

The exhibition in this place, will open at the Town Hall, on Wednesday and Thursday next, Nov. 4th and 5th.

Matinee for School Children, Thursday afternoon.
Evening exhibition, admission 15 cents.
Afternoon, for Churches and Schools, 10 cts.
Afternoon, the doors open immediately after the close of the Public Schools. Evening, doors open at 7, commence at 7 1/2.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Oct. 29, 1863.

The past week has been quite wintry, evidently affecting business in many branches. There is quite a stir for winter clothing, and the unfortunate consumers of fuel, who have neglected to obtain their supply will be called upon to pay twelve dollars the ton for coal, and not much under that mark for wood per cord. Family stores are beautifully high; butter thirty cents; cheese fifteen cents; sugar, not of the best quality, fifteen cents; ordinary tea one dollar per pound, and all kinds of food and raiment in the same proportion, with still an upward tendency in prices. As an offset to these evils, business continues good, and mechanical labor commands good prices.

The week has been very quiet as to war news. But we have sensation reports this evening that a riot had broken out in Richmond, resulting in the liberation of all the Union prisoners in that city; that Lee was retreating rapidly to Richmond, and that a large Federal force was marching to Petersburg; that the bombardment had again been renewed and fire opened by our forces from Forts Gregg and Wagner; the last rumor may probably be true. Skirmishing continues at Chattanooga. It is reported that General Hazen with two thousand men attacked the rebels on Lookout Mountain and drove them from their position.

Volunteering for the army will soon commence here with much energy. The bounty to good soldiers will probably reach $500.

The quota now due from Quincy appears to be forty-nine, which if not obtained by voluntary enlistments, the deficiency will have to be made up by draft after the fifth of January next. It becomes the duty of every loyal man to encourage by all means voluntary enlistments, and to save old Massachusetts the necessity of any further draft.

The State election of Tuesday is likely to pass off very quietly with a small vote—there being no great issues at stake.

The Farewell.

The following communication, we regret to say, from a pressure of other duties, was overlooked at the time of its reception. We now cheerfully lay it before our readers.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

I take this method to address the public through the columns of your paper, to express my grateful acknowledgments for the liberal manner in which I have been the recipient during my short visit home—in their friendly greetings, as well as for their pecuniary aid. Before this reaches the public ear, I shall be well on my way to my post of duty; hoping to serve them and our Country's cause more faithfully for their kind sympathy and generous benefaction.

LORING A. FRENCH.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT. The New York train on the Old Colony and Newport Railway run over and frightfully mangled a man on Saturday evening last, at a point near Wollaston Station, in this town. Deceased was a United States sailor, and fell from the train while it was in rapid motion, he probably being in the act of passing from one car to another.

COUNTERFEITING THE CURRENCY. It has been ascertained that of the 50 cent postage currency there are nine different counterfeiters; of the 25's and 10's, two each; and of the 5's one. Besides this there is much mutilation of the currency, the fragments of which are pasted together.

WHAT A PITY. The dry goods dealers and jewelry merchants in New York are complaining of having too much business. What a suffering community that must be; and all suffering in consequence of the war.

PECUNIARY ADVANTAGES OF THE DRAFT. A Washington dispatch says that the receipts of money paid by drafted men now amount to nine millions, which, it is expected, will be increased by one or two millions more. The whole of this sum is to be appropriated to recruiting under the new proclamation of the President.

CONFEDERATE COURTNEY. Those who send money to their friends in prison at Richmond are notified by the Confederates that greenbacks will be confiscated, but gold will be delivered to the prisoners, and they will be allowed to expend it or exchange it for Confederate money. Greenbacks are tabooed because of the contempt put upon rebel paper at the North.

CARPETS.—A great trade is carried on through these times of high prices, by the New England Carpet Company, of Boston. See their advertisement in to-day's paper.

STREETS PAVED WITH SILVER. The Virginia City (Nevada) Bulletin says it is absolutely no figure of speech to say that the streets of that place are paved with silver, for it is a literal fact that they are. Thousands of tons of rock, which in other countries would pay well to extract the silver from, are used to level and macadamize the streets. Rock that will not pass through the screens at the quartz mills is carried on to the roads, though some of it in any other locality would be considered rich.

Deserters.

On examination of the "Rebellion Record" just prepared under the direction of the Town Clerk, George L. Gill, Esq., we find the following names as deserters.

Seventh Regiment: James Mulloy, January, 1863.

Ninth Regiment: Thomas Kirvain, William McIntire, Daniel O. Mahoney, Daniel Dasy, Patrick O'Neill, August 28th, 1862.

Eleventh Regiment: Henry A. Wood, August 20th, 1862; *Peter Ryan, November 1st, 1862.

Twenty-Eighth Regiment: Patrick Dorsey, August 24th, 1862.

Thirty-Ninth Regiment: George D. Groves, September 14, 1862; Cornelius Horgan, May 2d, 1863.

* Re-enlisted in Company 1, 7th Regiment, United States Infantry, (regulars), Nov. 4, '62.

THE LECTURE. At a meeting of the "Republicans of Quincy," held on the 21st inst., it was voted that the Moderator, Charles Marsh Esq., and Granville B. Putnam, Secretary, be requested to invite Capt. John L. Swift of the 3d Mass. Cavalry, to deliver his lecture entitled "The Campaign in Louisiana," before the citizens of Quincy. The invitation was extended and accepted, and agreeable to public notice a "Grand Mass Meeting" was convened in the Town Hall, last evening. The speaker was introduced to the audience by Charles Marsh, Esq., and for an hour and a half highly entertained them.

Capt. Swift was born an orator and with such a theme, he could but interest his hearers.

It was vain to attempt a report of this lecture. Those who listened to it can congratulate themselves that such was their privilege. The lecturer was loudly applauded throughout the evening.

POLITICAL. The Democrats in the East Norfolk District, held a Convention Tuesday, at Randolph, and nominated Daniel Howard, Esq., of Randolph, as their candidate for Senator. The following District Committee was chosen for the ensuing year: John Chamberlin, of Quincy; Thomas Hollis, of Milton; Benjamin Ryan, of Braintree; Samuel Curtis, of Weymouth; John A. Hill, of Stoughton and Isaac N. Linfield, of Randolph.

NEW LIVERY STABLE. Mr. John Hall it will be seen by reference to our advertising columns, has leased the premises recently occupied by Messrs. Roby & Shaw, on Hancock street, where he will be happy to receive the orders of his friends. Fast teams and pleasant board for horses guaranteed.

PERHAM'S MASS MEETING. The meeting of the ticket holders in Perham's Enterprise, will positively take place on Wednesday evening next.

IMPORTANT TO SOUTHERN CORRESPONDENTS. Major General Foster has promulgated the following rules for letters going South:

1. No letter must exceed one page of a letter sheet, or relate to other than purely domestic matters.
2. Every letter must be signed by the writer's name in full.
3. All letters must be sent with five cents postage enclosed, if to go to Richmond, and ten cents if beyond.

4. All letters must be inclosed to the commanding general of the department of Virginia and North Carolina, at Fortress Monroe, marked on the outside "For flag of truce." No letter sent to any other address will be forwarded.

All letters sent to Fortress Monroe without a strict compliance with these rules, except for prisoners of war, will be transmitted to the Dead Letter office.

Mr. G., our respected correspondent, it appears has been writing with a quill from the wing of Cupid. He has exchanged the sterile life of celibacy, for the more congenial one of matrimony. ## Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The apple trade of Western New York this year is said to be very extensive. Fall fruit brings one dollar per barrel, the purchaser furnishing the barrel. Winter apples will be higher. West of Genesee river the yield is immensely large.

The ceremony of lowering the national ensign on board the Russian ships is very impressive. The ship's crew and officers are all on deck, the band plays national airs, and while the heads of all are uncovered the Russian flag is lowered from its position.

The draft was rather severe in New Hampton, N. H.; it took the only physician in town, two of the Selectmen, the principal teacher in the literary department of the Seminary, all the theological students who graduated in July last, and six in the class in theology at the present term.

There are now in New York harbor no less than sixty-two war vessels, carrying four hundred and forty guns—a larger force than that of the entire United States navy before the commencement of the war.

The election in Massachusetts takes place on Tuesday next, the 3d of November.

The sales of government cotton in St. Louis and Cincinnati since last spring amount to about $1,500,000.

The Treasury department has recently sent seven or eight million dollars to the West, for the payment of the troops.

The cod fishers are in luck this season. Fish sells by the cargo at over $5 per quintal, and cod oil is worth $34, per barrel.

Seven little girls, after a month's preparation, held a fair recently, at a private residence on Milton Hill. The proceeds were $204 54, which are to be contributed to the treasury of the Sanitary Commission.

The emigration from Europe to America has been large this year. One hundred and nineteen thousand emigrants have arrived at New York since January last.

The Maine Farmer says the potato business is active, and they are coming into the market freely, price forty-five cents for quantities, and fifty cents for small extra lots.

CAUCUS. All voters of Quincy, who support the present State and National Administration, are requested to meet at the Lyceum Room, SATURDAY EVENING, Oct. 31st, at 7 1/2 o'clock, to nominate a candidate for Representative from this town, being the Sixth Norfolk District. Also to choose a Town Committee, and to transact any other business, that may come before them.

DENTISTRY.

THE undersigned have associated themselves together in the practice of Dental Surgery, at the old office of Dr. S. Stocking, No. 19 Tremont Row, Boston. We are prepared to do the best of work in every department of our profession, and on the most REASONABLE TERMS. We shall give special attention to filling Decayed Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth on gold and silver, we shall bestow special pains in mounting whole and half sets on Vulcanized Rubber base—a mode of adapting artificial teeth to the mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base being less expensive than gold and silver, brings the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We flatter ourselves that an experience of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer them. The use of Either will be continued in our practice, and administered in the most judicious and scientific manner.

Poetry.

Things that Never Die

The pure, the bright, the beautiful,
That stirred our hearts in youth;
The impulse to a wordless prayer,
The dreams of love and truth,
The longing after something lost,
The spirit's yearning cry,
The strivings after better hopes—
These things can never die.

The timid hand stretched forth to aid
A brother in his need,
The kindly word in grief's dark hour,
That proves a friend in deed,—
The plea for mercy, softly breathed,
When justice thunders high,
The sorrow of a contrite heart—
These things shall never die.

The memory of a clasping hand,
The pressure of a kiss,
And all the trifles sweet and frail,
That make up life's first bliss,
If with a firm, unchanging faith,
And holy trust and high,
Those hands have clasped, and lips have met,
These things shall never die.

The cruel and the bitter word,
That wounded as it fell;
The chilling want of sympathy,
We feel but never tell;
The hard repulse that chills the heart
Whose hopes were bounding high,
In an unfeeling record kept—
These things shall never die.

Let nothing pass, for every hand
Must find some work to do;
Love not a chance to waken love,
Be firm, and just, and true;
So shall a light that cannot fade,
Beam on from on high,
And angel voices say to thee,
These things shall never die.

To dose who for de justice fight,
You gib de land to honest men,

Wid freedom come de joys ob life,
And little Darkie go to school.

Please take in due consideration;
And Darkie will fore-bee pray,
And fight too when you bid him come.

Bear witness all de world—and Hall—
And all de folks dat may come after,
More 'specially dat Cock and Bull!

Anecdotes.

A little girl about four years old, and a little boy about six, had been cautioned in their strife after hen's eggs not to take the next egg; but one morning the little girl reached the nest first, seized on the egg started for the house. Her disappointed brother followed, crying:
Mother! Susy has been and got the egg the old hen measures by.

Dr. Franklin says that "every little fragment of the day should be saved." Oh, yes, the moment the day breaks, set yourself at once to saving the pieces.

At a Christening, while a minister was making the certificate, he forgot the date and happened to say, let me see, this is the thirtieth.

The thirtieth! exclaimed the indignant mother; indeed, it is only the eleventh.

In faith, captain, said a son of Erin, as a ship was coming on the coast in inclement winter weather, have ye a Farmers' Almanac on board!

No, I haven't. Then, he jabbers, replied Pat, we shall have to take the weather as it comes.

A Western editor noticing the name of a Mr. Boot to Miss Leather, very rationally remarks that they are going into the boot making business.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
"SARSAPARILLA," IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

HELMHOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION,
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND,
Fluid Extract Buchu,
A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the
Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and
Dropsical Swellings.
This Medicine increases the power of Digestion,
and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY OR CAL-
CULOUS DEPOSITIONS, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS, are reduced, as well as
pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.
ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS
Indisposition to Exer- Loss of Power,
tion, Difficulty of Breathing,
Loss of Memory, Dryness of the Skin,
Weak Nerves, Trembling,
Horror of Vision, Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
General Lassitude or Flushing of the Body,

this medicine invariably removes soon follow:
IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC
FITS,
Insanity and Consumption.
Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,
but none will confess. The records of the insane
Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably
does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,
Old or young, single, married, or contemplating
Marriage—in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Scarcity of regularity, Pains, or Suppression of the monthly Evacuations, Ulcerated or Scirrhous
state of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, or Whites, Sterility,

posure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing an cure, and curing Syphilis, Irregularity, Pains, and Suppression, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling
POISONOUS, DISEASED, AND WORN-OUT MATTER.
Thousands upon Thousands who have been the victim of Quackery, and who have paid Heavy Prices to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful Astringents, been dried up in the system, to break out in aggravated form, and
perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmhold's Extract Buchu
For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS.
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long

Blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, itching, and burning, and restores a Clear and erties are preserved to a greater extent than

night?" "Oh no, sir," replied the confiding
little thing. "I've got on mother's hood!"
Fashion is the race of the rich to get away
from the poor, who follow as they can.
Oh! whistle, daughter, whistle, and you shall have a cow; I never whistled in my life,
and I cannot whistle now. Oh! whistle,
daughter, whistle, and you shall have a man;
I never whistled in my life, but I'll whistle if I can.
A distinguished clergyman being requested
to open the services with prayer, but not having been invited to preach, declined, saying,
that "as his friend was going to do the mowing he might wet his own scythe."
Mr. Beecher says there are many persons who think that Sunday is a sponge with which to wipe out the sins of the week.
The mother of a little fellow who was about taking a ride in the Hartford horse cars,
asked him as he scrambled in, "Why, aren't you going to kiss your mother before you go?"
The little rogue was in such a hurry that he couldn't stop, and hastily called out, "Conductor, won't you kiss mother for me?"
Men who lie for vile purposes generally
find that they have lied to no purpose.
A vain man's motto is, "Win gold and wear it;" a generous, "Win gold and share
it;" a miser's, "Win gold and spare it;" a profligate's, "Win gold and spend it;" a gambler's, "Win gold and lose it;" a wise man's,
"Win gold and use it."
A man may generally expect a domestic breeze when his wife begins to put on airs.
The nicest thing in bonnets is—the wearer's face, of course.
Over the left—the cant phrase implying falsehood, has been abandoned for the more emphatic and significant expression of over the wires.
Sometimes a girl says no to an offer, when it is as plain as the nose on her face that she means yes. The best way to judge whether she is in earnest or not, is to look straight into her eyes, and never mind her nose.
Life's pleasures, if not abused, will be new every morning and fresh every evening.
Man, said Adam Smith, "is an animal that makes bargains. No other animal does this; no dog exchanges bones with another."

Little words of kindness,
Little acts of love,
Little deeds of mercy,
Sparks caught from above,
Little friendly dealings,
Charity for all,
Would our spirits brighten,
And our hearts enliven,
Little loving tokens,
Little gentle ways,
Little smiles for each one,
Lengthen out our days,
Little things we all know,
Sum our little life;
Let us study kindness,
And our joy is rife.
Little holy blessings,
Little thoughts in prayer,
Little aspirations,
For the loved one's there,— Little things they may be,
Little things have weight,
And united, truly—
Would be very great.

BOUNTIES. An amended circular has been sent out from the Provost Marshal General's office, by which it appears that to every recruit who is a veteran volunteer, a bounty and premium, amounting to four hundred and two dollars, will be paid, and to all other recruits, not veterans, three hundred dollars. These are for the old organizations. The object is to encourage volunteering, as those who are drafted receive only one hundred dollars bounty. Men enlisted under this order will be permitted to select their regiments, which, however, must be one of the old regiments in the field.

GREAT BRITAIN AND THE PIRATES. The correspondent of the New York Evening Post says our government intends to make England pay for the losses incurred by our merchant ships from pirate gunboats fitted out in British ports. The State Department is recording the exact money loss through this agency of the English pirate ships. Not a merchant vessel is destroyed, but the fact is recorded, and so far as is possible, the value of property is ascertained and written down.

LITTLE THINGS. People who are unaccustomed to studying economy in their little arrangements, have little idea how easily money may be saved, and at the same time comfort secured by a little attention to a little economy in little things. In illustration, take the little article of metal tips worn on the toes of little shoes. It is asserted that by this article alone, the snug little sum of over six million dollars is annually saved to those who use them, and at the same time not a little amount of comfort and protection added to some three million pair of little feet. So with many other little things.—Tribune.

CARPETS. Those wanting to furnish or re-decorate their dwellings with Carpets, should read the advertisement in our paper of the New England Carpet Company.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Nov. 5, 1863.

Among the local items of interest may be mentioned the formal transfer lately imported from Europe to the Music Hall in this city of the great organ. The Bostonians may well feel proud of this instrument, whose architectural proportions are splendid. It was said the music produced an electric effect upon the audience, and the cheers which shook the building, but imperfectly expressed their enthusiasm. This costly instrument of the Music Hall Association is stated to be one of the best organs in the civilized world, and it attracted great attention in Europe before its importation. Edwin Booth is playing at the Boston Theatre to crowded audiences. He ranks as one of the best tragedians of the age. The Boston Museum, also, draws great houses. Morris, Brothers & Co., at the Opera House, and the Buckleys, find plenty of customers. Perham's Mirror of the Rebellion at the Melodeon, is on exhibition, and is very liberally patronized. The business record of the week will compare favorably with the last; but the worth of gold at $145, has a bad effect to the purchaser, on prices. For it is a fixed fact, that the premium on gold and silver is the great spring of prices. A return to specie payments by the Government and banks, would correct this reckless speculation in price, and enable a poor man to get as much for one dollar, as in many cases he pays twice that sum now. Recruiting under the late order of the President for three hundred thousand more volunteers, is going on actively. The quota for Massachusetts is 15,126. If this number is not raised by voluntary enlistment, a draft will be ordered to supply the deficiency, as stated in our last. Under the general Order of the State just issued, the men to be raised by this call, are to be enlisted in the United States service, for the various companies and regiments now in the field. The bounties will be fifty dollars from the State, in addition to three hundred and two dollars from the United States, to new recruits, and four hundred and two dollars to those who have served at least nine months. An effort is now making by the city government of Cambridge, to induce Governor Andrew to call an extra session of the Legislature, taking in consideration the Soldier's Bounty. As the law is now construed by many, no city or town is authorized to pay a single dollar for bounties. Under the new call for volunteers, the Provost Master General is authorized and will appoint, the Mayors of cities and Chairman of the Selectmen of towns to act as recruiting officers for their several cities and towns to recruit the quotas assigned them to their several municipalities. Making them de facto Deputy Provost Marshals, with full powers. The quota for Milton is twenty-one; for Dorchester one hundred and twenty-eight; for Braintree thirty-nine; Weymouth one hundred and twenty-one; towns in your immediate neighborhood.

Spirit of the Boston press on the election. The Advertiser is quiet and unexciting over the result of the State election of Tuesday, acknowledging the vote as small, but expressive of a great change of public sentiment as to sustaining the Government in putting down the rebellion; the Courier is rather ascetic—considers it but a temporary victory—not half of the vote of the State thrown; the Traveller regards it as a "clean sweep," and considers the change of feeling as to war measures as remarkable and even wonderful; the Boston Post alludes to the result with the usual good sense of its editors; the Journal and Transcript are jubilant; the Boston Herald in its heading of yesterday, says the Union party is successful; Governor Andrew elected by fifty thousand majority—the Democrats are defeated. It says:

"Returns from one hundred and ninety-six towns give Andrew a majority of 32,819, which will undoubtedly be increased to fifty thousand. The entire Senatorial delegation in the next Legislature will be Republican, against five Opposition last year. The House will also be nearly of one political character, two hundred and four Republicans being chosen to only twelve Democrats, with thirty-six Districts to hear from. The County officers elected are all Republicans."

P. S. Governor Andrew has issued a Proclamation, convening the Legislature of Massachusetts at the State House in Boston, on Wednesday next, November eleventh.

THE QUOTA OF RHODE ISLAND. The Providence Press learns that Rhode Island has now in the service about one thousand soldiers in excess of former quotas. This will leave but two thousand to be raised under the new call, and it is the opinion of those well qualified to judge, that this number will be obtained by volunteering before the 5th of January.

FACTS CANNOT LIE.—It would be easy to fill a column of this newspaper with testimonials in favor of Grace's celebrated Salve, but its merits are so universally known that publicity is almost needless. The proprietor feels happy to know that his Salve is now in almost every home, not only in New England, but in the Middle and Western States. It is the remedy for cuts, bruises, burns, scalds, boils, piles, salt-rheum, and all eruptions of the skin. The fact of its having cured all these and other inflammatory diseases of the cuticle cannot be disputed. See advertisement in another column.

REMEMBERED. We were kindly remembered by the Hook and Ladder Company at their late monthly meeting, by being made the participant of the good cheer which usually accompanies such occasions. We feel very grateful for the notice. The Company has our best wishes. They have many noble fellows in their ranks: V-z and many others whom we could mention. A long and prosperous career to the Hook and Ladder Company, is our motto.

COTTON COMING. The New Orleans Era of the 10th ult., says that on the day previous, by three boats, three thousand three hundred and seventy bales of cotton were brought to that city from the vicinity of Natchez.

THE EXHIBITION OF Kershaw & Hayward's Panorama of Scenes in Holy Land, etc. at the Town Hall, on Thursday afternoon and evening, drew large audiences, who appeared to enjoy the treat. We found a place among the crowd, and felt well paid for the visit. It is a work of great merit, and must be seen to be appreciated.

VALUATION OF NORTH BRIDGEWATER. We are indebted to Franklin Ames, Esq., Chairman of the board of assessors, for the following valuation statistics of this town:—
Total number of polls, 1475.
Total tax on polls, $295.00.
Total value of personal estate, $516,996.
Total value of real estate, $1,530,554.
Total tax for state, county, and town purposes, including highway tax, $30,377.88.
Rate of taxation, $1.30 on $100.
Total valuation, May 1st, 1863, $2,037,550.
Total number of dwelling houses, 1037; horses, 356; cows, 390; acres of land taxed, 12,054.—Gazette.

HARVEY SICKLER, Esq., the able editor of the Tunkhannock (Pa.) Democrat, publishes the following in his issue of 30th October, 1861:

"We deem it due to Messrs. J. C. Ayer & Co., and the public, to make known our experience with the use of their EX-SARSAPILLA in our family, by stating the circumstances under which it was taken and its effects."

When our only child, now in his third year, was about eight months old, a sore appeared first in small pimples on his forehead over his nose. These rapidly increased and uniting formed a loathsome, virulent sore, which finally spread over his forehead and face, not even when his eyes were closed. We called a skillful physician, who administered the usually prescribed remedies. A solution of nitrate of silver was applied until the mass of corruption which covered his entire face turned jet black. The sore again and again burst through the scorched and artificial skin formed by this solution. Meanwhile many remedies were employed without any apparent benefit. For fifteen days and nights he was constantly held by his parents to keep him from tearing open with his hands the corrupt mass which covered his face.

Everything having failed, we were induced by the high recommendations of Ayer's SARSAPILLA for the cure of Scrofulous disease, to give it a trial. In his treatise on Scrofula, Dr. Ayer directs a mild solution of Iodide of Potash to be used as a wash while taking the SARSAPILLA, and it was faithfully applied. Before one bottle of SARSAPILLA had been given the sore had lost much of its virulence and commenced to heal. Another bottle effected an entire cure, and the general predilection that the child must die was contradicted. His eyelashes which came out, grew again, and his face is left without a scar, as smooth as anybody's. It is unnecessary for me to state in how high esteem we hold Ayer's SARSAPILLA.

mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other pre-

being less expensive than gold and silver, brings
the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We flatter ourselves that an experience of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer them. The use of

Poetry.

For the Patriot.

Lines on the Death of Frank G. Chubbuck.

The circle is broken—the first link is gone
From the chain which has bound them together
so long.

Oh God! that the bitter words now must be said:
One brave manly boy—ay, the youngest—is dead!

He left home and loved ones, to answer the call For patriots and freemen—true hearts, one and all.

To rally for Liberty, Freedom and Right—
To guard our fair banner from insult and slight.

Two sons in the army—ay, would not that do?
Must this one—the youngest—be given up too?
'Twas hard, oh, so hard, to see him go away,
Yet his country was calling, and how could he stay!

But, alas! the sad tidings which came like a dart,

So suddenly, cruelly, piercing the heart
Of the dear ones at home, ever praying for him,
That "Our Father" would shield him from danger and sin!

Did Heaven then turn a deaf ear to their prayer?
Is there nothing now left them but utter despair?
Oh, list to the answer—"Thou knowest not now
What I do, but hereafter, thou surely shalt know!"

Blessed promise! and ye who are mourning below,
Bowed down in your darkness, your sorrow and
woe,

Remember that He who has caused you to grieve
Has done it in mercy—will ye not believe?
A. A. H.

Hasty words.

Full oft a word that lightly leaves the tongue,
Another's breast unconsciously has rung;
And were the wound but present to the eye
We'd mourn the pain that solace might defy.

Was it want—perhaps a thoughtless jest?
An idle ripple of the vacant breast?
But tiny shafts may yield a venomous death
What need to speed them, but a little breath.

We toy with hearts, as if the thousand chords
That vibrate to the touch of hasty words,
Could jar out discord all the living day
Nor any tension cause them to give way.

Oh, strike them gently! every human breast
Is by a secret load of grief oppress'd;
Forbear to add a note of timeless war,
Where discords ever are so prone to flow.

Honor to Whom Honor is Due.

Honor him whose hands are sowing
Seeds of harvest in their time—
Reverence those whose thoughts are growing
Up to ultimate sublime.

All the progress of the ages
May be traced back to their hands—
All the illuminated pages
Of the books, into their plans.

Every worm beside you creeping,
Every insect flying well,
Every pebble in earth's keeping,
Has a history to tell.

The small homely flower that's lying
In your pathway may contain
Some elixir, which the dying
Generations sought in vain.

In the stone that waits the turning
Of some curious hand, from right,
Fiery atoms may be burning,
That would fill the world with light.

Let us then, in reverence bowing,
Honor most of all mankind,
Such as keep their great thoughts plowing
Deepest in the field of mind.

Anecdotes.

My lad, said a gentleman to an urchin who was passing by him, have you seen anything of a cane with black marks upon it, lying in the road as you came along—I dropped one a moment ago.

No, sir, replied the urchin, shrugging his shoulders, but mother's got a cane that makes black marks on my back; I don't know but that's it.

Little Archie was cautioned about holding his fork, as it came in close proximity to his eye; his mother telling him that he might put his eyes out and be blind. He gave it a three year old consideration, and a bright idea struck him.

Then, mamma, said he, triumphantly, I could have a dog.

Don't you think my son resembles me? inquired an apothecary, as he introduced his greasy-faced boy to the witty Dr. H.

Yes, replied the doctor, pretending to scan the physiognomy of each—yes, I think I see your lineaments in his countenance.

A London professor lectured recently on adulterations of food. He handed round coffee, which was pronounced excellent, then told the audience that they had been regaled
with a mixture of bullock's blood, hogs',
sheep's liver, dried, and old coffee-grouts.
He gave them capital porter, too, made of spirits of wine, gum arabic and burnt sugar.

An Irishman, illustrating the horrors of solitary confinement, stated that out of one hundred persons sentenced to endure this punishment for life, only fifteen survived it!

"I See Beautiful Objects."

"What do you see, father?"
"O, I see beautiful objects!"

Father! the pearly gates unfold,
The asphodels, the streets of gold,
Are bursting on thy sight;
The angel bands come singing down,
And one has got thy starry crown,
And one thy robe of white.

Poising above on silvery wing,
They're waiting thy freed soul to bring
To its new home above;
There, folded to thy Saviour's breast,
How sweet, how full will be thy rest
Beneath his eye of love.
I would not hold thee longer here,
Though well I know that many a tear
For thy dear sake will flow,
The morning dawns upon thy sight,
How long, how dark has been the night!
Father! dear father, go.

Old Maid.

Marje! Marje!
I don't care, Deb—I will, and so, see if I don't! said a little girl, elevating first one, and then the other of her snowy shoulders, while Deborah, her old nurse, secured the loops of her white dress. If we've got to have a cross, hateful, screw-faced old maid in the house, I'll torment her all I can. I'll stick pins in the back of her chair; I'll tip over her plate at dinner; I'll put things in the path, to make her stumble when she walks in the garden—I'll be just as bad as I know how. This threatening speech was delivered with various emphatic pantomimes, which made it doubly effective.

Marjory Ellis was fatherless and motherless. She lived with her dotting old grandfather, in the brown-gate cottage, that stands the very last on the road leading from Stanton to Greendale. She was, in the broadest sense of the term, a spoiled child. I doubt much whether she had ever been refused anything during all the six years she had lived with her grandfather, and Marjory was now twelve. There was no other children at the cottage, so the little girl carried it with a high hand. She was a bright, inquisitive, impetuous child, with a great many good impulses and warm feelings, but her heart was like a garden that required much weeding.

It was with anything but feelings of satisfaction that Marjory had heard her grandfather's announcement, two days before, that he had received a letter from Jessie Mann, an old friend and schoolmate of her mother, stating that she was travelling through the upper part of the State, and would, if convenient and agreeable, make them a short visit. Her grandfather had at once written the lady an urgent invitation to come to the cottage, and he should expect her the latter part of the week.

Now Marjory had conceived an intense aversion for old maids; as the two or three with whom she had been brought in personal contact, stood, in her view, as the type of that shamefully maligned class of individuals; so the anticipation of Miss Mann's visit seemed to arouse all the belligerent propensities of her nature, and she determined to circumvent every effort that lady, to command or tyrannize over her. Marjory had already settled in her own mind what sort of a person she must be—tall, thin and angular, with a loud, sharp voice, square, pale lips, and general expression of countenance which reminds one of a north-east wind in March.

It was Saturday afternoon when Miss Mann arrived. Marjory heard the stage stop, and immediately hurried out by the back door into the orchard, her little red mouth set in an expression of most indomitable obstinacy. She did not return until supper time. Deborah met her at the door. Come right into the parlor, Marje! she said. The lady's been enquiring for you half a dozen times; how could you run off so?

Because I wanted to, was the satisfactory reply; and the saucy, wilful child brushed past Betty, and, in no very conciliatory mood, entered the parlor.

The lady, who was standing at the table, examining some nest engravings thereon, turned round hastily, and there was a tremendous eagerness in her voice as she asked: Are you really Annie's little girl? Come to me, my child.

She was pale, and on the whole, plain, this ogre of Marjory's fancy—with soft, dark hair folded heavily about her cheeks, with large, serene, gray eyes, and a mouth, that most significant feature in a woman's face, not small, but full, tender, and one that dropped naturally into smiles. And Marjory, with her wondering blue eyes fastened on the lady, went up to her.

How much, how very much she is like her mother! This was said half to herself, half to Marjory's grandfather, who just then came into the parlor; and Miss Mann pushed away the short, curly hair from Marjory's brow, and gazed on her with a long, eager tenderness, that went at once to the little girl's heart, and she quite forgot Miss Mann was an old maid.

Yes, said Grandfather Ellis, our Marje is all Platt, every inch of her; she will be as much like Annie and Charles, when she grows up, as one human being can be like two others.

Miss Mann did not answer; she bent down and kissed Marjory, and with that kiss all the little girl's antipathy to her mother's friend vanished at once and forever.

Did you love my mamma? she asked wistfully; for her young, fair, gentle mother was the sweetest, holiest memory that Marjory held.

I guess I did love her, my child. You see I lived only a quarter of a mile apart, and were almost inseparable companions, when we went to the district school. Then, after our family moved to Ryegate, we used to make each other long visits two or three times every year. I remember seeing you once, too; it was a long, long time ago, and you lay in a wicker cradle, in a new white dress, and a pair of the daintiest red morocco shoes. Ah, me! how proud your mother was of you, and how you lifted up your white arms, and crowded at me! Oh, poor Annie! Here Miss Mann fairly broke down into a sob, and Grandpapa Ellis pulled out his large silk handkerchief, and rubbed his nose very hard and fast. Marjory was, as I said, an impulsive child—her loves were as strong as her dislikes. She slipped her hand into Miss Mann's, and this was with her a sign and a token. After this there was nothing the little girl enjoyed so well as walking with Miss Mann through the orchard, or by the ryefields, or down by the spring where the mint grew, cool and fragrant on the moist ground.

And this lady always had such long delightful stories to tell her of her mother; of the days when they used to go berrying and nutting in the woods, and the rides they used to have on the top of the hay, in vacations.

Deborah, said Marjory, confidentially, Miss Mann isn't a bit like an old maid. I'd be willing to be one myself, if I could be just like her.

It was surprising, too, how soft and gentle the little girl's manners became, in less than a week after Miss Mann's arrival; for if the truth must be told, these had been somewhat hoydenish before.

One day Miss Mann and Marjory sat sewing together in the little parlor, when Grandfather Ellis came in suddenly, holding something very tight in one hand. Guess what I have here for you, Marje? he said.

I can't, grandpapa. O please give it to me! cried the impatient girl.

It's a letter, pussy, opening his hand and revealing it.

A letter! a letter! clapping her hands, and pirouetting round the room. I never had one in all my life. Who could have sent it to me? Grandfather Ellis put on his large silver glasses, and looked at the address. It's from California, my child, he said. It must be from your Uncle Charles.

At that moment the work slipped from Miss Mann's fingers to the floor. She bent hastily, and raised it up; but it Marjory had not been too much engaged to observe her at that moment, she would have seen she had grown pale—oh, so very pale!

Well, Marjory opened the letter, with a pleased fluttering at her heart, and read it slowly, very slowly, for she was not accustomed to the odd, scrawling hand of Uncle Charles.

It was a very kind, loving letter, which Marjory's Uncle had written to his "dear little orphan niece," as he called her, and it brought the tears to her eyes, when he spoke of her mother—his blue-eyed sister Annie, who had reached first the green shores of the beautiful land, whither he hoped they were all following her.

The gentleman also told his niece that he hoped to see her before another June had ripened the strawberries on the hills of Stanton; and he intended to bring her something very nice, made out of real California gold.

Oh, what a good uncle I have got, said Marjory, after she had twice read the letter to her interested auditors. I wonder if he will know me. You know it is so long since I saw him last.

Yes, he's been in California nearly five years, said Grandfather Ellis; he's got into some government office, and they do say he's made quite a "fortin" there. Charlie always was a clever fellow. Let's see, you used to know him well, Miss Mann.

Yes; I knew him well when he was a young man, was the lady's rather laconic rejoinder, and she bent very steadily over her sewing.

His wife was a little beauty, but she was a delicate sort of a creature, that looked as if a smart wind would blow her away. I always thought it was her death that sent him off; for you know he set great store by her, continued the loquacious old farmer.

Yes, responded the soft voice of Miss Mann, Charles was very fond of her, and she deserved all his affection.

You knew her, then?

Oh, yes, I met her at Annie's, before and after she was married.

Just then somebody called to see the farmer, and this discontinued the conversation; but Marjory's tongue ran faster than ever, as she confidentially told Miss Mann all she should write about, in her reply to Uncle Charles. And I shall tell him all about your visit here, and how much I like you, and how I wish you would stay always, said the little girl.

And Miss Mann drew her to her, and kissed her forehead silently; but Marjory did not see that the lady's eyes were full of tears.

That night Marjory took some strawberries and cream to one of her neighbor's little boys who was sick, and on returning she sought all over the garden for Miss Mann, but in vain.

At last she went up stairs, and very softly to the lady's room. The door was ajar, and she sat by the window, for it was growing into night, and the stars were throbbing slowly into the summer sky. Marjory saw she held a letter in her hand; yes, it was certainly her Uncle's letter, and suddenly the lady leaned down, and kissed it very fondly, murmuring, Oh, Charles! Charles! and the little girl heard distinctly two or three sobs.

She stole noiselessly away. I wonder, mused Marjory, if Uncle Charles ever did anything to make dear Miss Mann unhappy. Well he'll be here next summer, and I'll tell him all about it then.

Marjory said nothing to any one else on this subject; and a few days afterwards Miss Mann left. The house seemed very lonely without her, even to grandpapa and Deborah, but Marjory felt her departure far more keenly than any one else. But she was partially consoled by a promise which Miss Mann obtained before she left, that Marjory should visit her next summer.

The next June, when the strawberries began to blush on the hills of Stanton, Uncle Charles made his advent.

He was a very fine-looking man, in the prime of his years, with a heavy moustache. Much travel had made his complexion several shades darker than when he left, and a good many gray hairs were straying among his brown locks; but his beaming eyes, and his warm, genial smile—oh, nothing could change these!

Marjory's present proved to be a beautiful gold locket, enclosing a most excellent likeness of her uncle, to which was attached the daintiest gold chain. Marjory was quite beside herself with delight at this gift.

One day the little girl's uncle took her to ride to the river, about four miles from her house, and as they went slowly down the road cut through the forest, with the tall, fragrant oaks and maples throwing cool shadows all about them, Marjory, looking suddenly in her uncle's face, asked him: Did you ever know Miss Jessie Mann, uncle?

Oh, yes! smiling down upon her. She used to visit our house a great deal, and Annie and she were just like sisters, and for many years I loved Jessie as well as if she had been mine.

Did you, uncle, and did you never say or do anything to make her unhappy? Make Jessie Mann unhappy! Why, what do you mean, child?

And then Marjory drew up very close to her uncle, and told him what she had seen and heard that night that she stole up so softly to Miss Mann's chamber.

Mr. Platt listened very attentively to all his niece said, but he did not answer a word; and after she had finished, he only tapped his boot meditatively with his riding whip.

But a suspicion was dawning in the gentleman's mind. He had gone back to the days of his early manhood, and he saw the sweet face, and heard the ringing laugh of Jessie Mann, just as he used to.

Then he remembered that night in the late spring, when she and his sister stood together with him, under the white blossoms of the apple tree, and he told them first of his betrothal to her whose fair head was now lying, under the June roses, and he remembered, too, when he turned to his companion, saying very lightly, because his feelings were very deep: Now, girls, don't you congratulate me? Jessie had suddenly fallen down on the grass.

Annie and he were very much alarmed as they raised her, but she said it was only a slight faintness—it would soon pass—she was accustomed to it, and so their fears were allayed. What if—what if—

Marjory, at last the gentleman's voice broke the long silence, didn't you tell me you were to visit Miss Mann this summer.

Yes, grandpapa says I may go next month. And would you like me to accompany you? She stood up in the carriage, this impulsive little Marjory, and clasped her hands.

So the next month, the little girl and her uncle went to Miss Mann's home. She lived with her aged parents in a pleasant little cottage, just in the suburbs of the city; and there was a deep yard in front, dark with yew, and cedar, and larches. Miss Mann seemed quite overcome at sight of Marjory, or her uncle; the little girl could not tell which, for she grew very pale, and grasped the door handle, as though she would have fallen; but a moment afterwards she was her own sweet, thoroughly possessed self, and welcomed them very warmly.

The week Marjory passed here was a very happy one; and Uncle Charles seemed to enjoy it vastly, too. They all went riding and sailing, and walking; and he and Miss Mann talked constantly of times before Marjory could remember—but she was never tired of listening.

The night before they were to leave, the little girl went into the parlor, and being very tired, with a long walk she had taken that day, threw herself down on the sofa and dropped to sleep.

At last she was aroused by voices entering the room, and half as in a dream she heard Uncle Charles say: And to think, Jessie, that I should never have known, never have dreamed of this life-long devotion to me, if Marjory had not told me what she heard and saw that night. I owe my little niece all the brightness of the future, to which I am looking forward.

And then, softly through the silence beat the low tremulous tones of Jessie Mann: And I—oh, Charles, what do I not owe her! God has sent me at last the dream of my youth.

And God helping me, my Jessie, it shall be fair and pleasant as the dream was then; why! what in the world! what's here!

It's only I, said Marjory, sitting up and rubbing her eyes.

The newly betrothed pair felt very tenderly towards the little girl. Uncle Charles placed her between himself and Miss Mann, on the sofa, and then he said to her: Marjory, how would you like to have me bring you another aunt? It was so dark they could not see each other's faces; but Marjory was by no means a dull child. She leaned forward to Miss Mann. I know what he means, she whispered. Oh, I am glad—so very glad!

So she won't be an old maid any more, was the conclusion of Marjory's story to Deborah, who listened with much interest to the announcement of Miss Mann's engagement! However, do you know, Deb, I don't dislike old maids as much as I did before I knew her.

When you can get hold of a good one they're "fast rate," I must say, was Deborah's ocular remark; for she participated somewhat in Marjory's former dislike of the class.

And to think that I am going to the wedding, and the little girl's bright head fluttered about the kitchen. I shall have a new white dress, and the most beautiful pair of gaiters; and afterward I'm going to make them a long, long visit.

My goodness! exclaimed Deborah, as she sprinkled some sugar over a large bowl of blackberry cherries, she was preparing for supper.

Yes; and here Marjory's voice dropped into a low confidential tone, and she drew close to Deborah's side, and when I grow up I intend to live with Uncle Charles and Aunt Jessie, all my life, and be myself an old maid!

What made Paddy's Head Ache.

When Mr. Dodge, the celebrated ecclesiastical physician, was lecturing through the State on the laws of health, and particularly on the evils of tea and coffee, he happened to meet one morning at the breakfast table, a son of Erin. Conversation turned on the Doctor's favorite subject as follows:

Perhaps I should be unable to convince you of the deleterious effect of tea and coffee? I don't know, said Erin, but I'd like to be there when you do it.

Well, said the Doctor, if I convince you that they are injurious to your health, will you abstain from their use.

Sure an' I will sir.

How often do you use coffee and tea? asked the Doctor.

Morning and night, sir.

Well, said the Doctor, did you ever experience a slight dizziness of the brain on going to bed?

I do, indeed, I do.

And a sharp pain through the temples, in and about the eyes, in the morning.

Troth, an' I do, sir.

Well, said the Doctor, with an assurance and confidence in his manner, that is coffee and tea.

Is it indeed? Faith, an' I always thought it was the whiskey that I drunk.

The company roared with laughter, and the Doctor quietly retired. He was fairly beaten.

They Were Always So.

Every once in a while some bitter old bachelor or stingy husband vents his spleen on the extravagance of women in dresses, just as though they are any more in that respect to-day than they were a thousand years ago. It is a privilege which the dear creatures have always enjoyed and it would be a shame to deprive them of it. We must confess we are fond of seeing women elegantly dressed, and of hearing the rustling of silks, catching the perfumes of their robes as they pass by us; therefore, we are not of those who will constantly berate them for what is called their extravagance, when it is well known it is all done to elicit the admiration of that creature called man. We have pledged ourselves, as true knights to defend the cause of the ladies, and when we see them ruthlessly attacked, we are bound to run a tilt in their favor. Let them have their silks and their feathers, and laces, and make themselves attractive as possible. We like their plumage as we do themselves and we do not wish to see them assailed in their rights and privileges.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF NORTON.

"Again there may be schools with which the parents will not find fault, if their children like, and which, without questioning or knowing, are pronounced good. But a school may be imperfect which gives perfect satisfaction to scholars, if it is begotten through inordinate desire of the teacher to please them, his allowance of their indifference in study or his carelessness of order."

How many scholars, who, if they had their choice to spend their time in play or in study, would choose the latter! That is a morbid and unsafe public sentiment which appoints the pupil the sole judge of what a school ought to be. If a teacher can find out that such is the school a district wants, if he can throw his conscience to the winds, he may treat his scholars to novelties and nice times, and come out a very paragon of perfection!

A teacher may be very superficial in his instructions; very skillful on examination days, and have brilliant social qualities and personal popularity; but these are no criteria by which to judge of his merits. A teacher may please his pupils, and they may know little and care less about what they learn or neglect to learn, but it does not follow that he keeps a good school.

A lady teacher making many friends among new acquaintances, may mistake her favorable reception and social position, for an approval of her abilities as a teacher, and forgetting those higher qualifications necessary to success, her school may, after all, be of a very indifferent, or even an inferior character.

Again, paradoxical as it may seem, schools sometimes go wrong, when a teacher does right. There are scholars whom persuasion and argument fail to reach.

It is not possible that the doctrine of moral suasion may have obtained too much in such cases? What treatment would a moral suasionist propose? One offers expulsion. But "it is not better to save a limb than to amputate it?" Will you send a willful lad apprentice when Solomon's receipt may save him? Another says "don't press the scholar to study overmuch." But good lessons cannot be learned without hard study. Solomon says "much study is a weariness of the flesh."

How can it be made a pasture for turbulent, unmanly or idle boys and girls? The truth is the degree of punishment must be measured by the degree of obstinacy. A teacher errs when he announces before hand that he never inflicts corporal punishment or commits himself in teaching to any special hobby. Practical expedients in discipline and instruction rightly adapted to meet the varied cases as they occur, are indispensable requisites for every good teacher.

How Near We are to Death.

A writer in the Independent thus discourses on our nearness to death:

When we walk near the powerful machinery, we know that one single mis-step and those mighty engines would tear us to ribbons with their flying wheels, or grind us to powder in their ponderous jaws. So when we are thundering across the land in the railroad, and there is nothing but half an inch of iron flang to hold upon the track. So, when we are at sea in a ship, and there is nothing but the thickness of a plank between us and eternity. We imagine that we see how close we are to the edge of the precipice. But we do not see it. Whether on the sea or on the land, the partition which divides us from eternity is something thinner than an oak plank or half an inch of iron flang. The machinery of life and death are within us. The tissues that hold these bearing powers in their place are often not thicker than a sheet of paper, and if that thin partition was pierced or ruptured, it would be just the same with us as if a cannon ball had struck us. Death is inseparably bound up with life in the very structure of our bodies. Struggle as he will to widen the space, no man can at any time go further from death than the thickness of a sheet of paper.

How to Select Flour.

1. Look at the color; if it is white, with a slightly yellowish or straw-colored tint, buy it. If it is very white, with a blueish cast, or with black specks in it, refuse it. 2. Examine its adhesiveness; wet and knead a little of it between your fingers; if it works soft and sticky, it is poor.—Flour from spring wheat is likely to be sticky. 3. Throw a little lump of dry flour against a dry, smooth,

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Nov. 14th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

More Soldiers.

The new call for three hundred thousand additional troops has been issued. The quotas of the States and towns have been announced, and Quincy is called upon to furnish forty-nine. Not a very large number when we consider the good material with which our town is so amply supplied. The Governor has called an extra session for the purpose of taking such steps as may enable the men to come forward without resorting to the draft. It is to be hoped that the quota of Massachusetts will be filled by voluntary enlistments. Bounties and extra pay will be offered as the Legislature, when convened, shall determine; and if such means fail, we shall have, of course, to draft. The men are needed, and the Government would be false to its trusts, if by some means, they are not obtained.

The Congress of the United States will come together in December, when the present Conscription law will be materially altered. It is proposed to abolish the "Three hundred dollars exemption clause," against which so great an outcry has been made, so that every drafted man will have to go; whether he will be allowed to furnish a substitute or not, we cannot say, but presume he will, as the Government wants men, and if they can get them, it matters not whether a man goes by himself or by a substitute.

Those who have furnished substitutes or paid their three hundred dollars, under the last call, will, in all likelihood, be exempted. Those who have been drafted and exempted for some illness or inability of any kind, will be liable to a new draft, for the reason that such inability may have ceased to exist, and if it has not, they can be exempted a second time. The causes for exemption will be much diminished. The fact that a man's little toe over rides his big brother, or that his big one turns repulsively from his next neighbor; or that his nose turns up or his nose turns down, will no longer exempt him from serving that country to whom he looks for protection, and to whose fostering care all his prosperity is due. Congress, now, will not hesitate to take such measures as will fill up our army, for the whole country has spoken out in thunder tones that the war must go on; that the rebellion must be crushed, and that the Union must be preserved.

There is no lack of patriotism among our people, and the reason why our ranks are not more readily filled, is, that the demand for labor is so great at home, that men do not feel that they ought to leave a certain property, and go away for the small compensation that the soldier receives, and endure all the hardships, deprivation and danger, which must attend an army-life. Let us then try to offer such inducements in the shape of bounties, extra pay, State aid, &c., as will make his act of patriotic duty, only a personal not a pecuniary sacrifice. Men say that it is not for personal comfort and safety that they care, but only for those who are dependent upon them that they are anxious. If we can relieve them on that point, we doubt not, that volunteers would come forward in such numbers, that we should have no necessity for resorting to the draft. At any rate let us try the experiment.

GOING SOUTH. Nearly 800 conscripts and substitutes at Long Island embarked on board the steamer Forest City on Tuesday, destined to reinforce the 34, 4th, and 7th New Hampshire regiments at Morris Island, S. C. They are under the charge of Col. Michael J. Donahoe, of the 10th New Hampshire regiment, with a guard of fifty men, twelve men being in handcuffs for attempting to desert. It is stated that between 10,000 and 12,000 men have been sent from this camp since it was established in the summer. But few now remain, who suffer somewhat from the cold in their airy quarters.

WILD GESE. Our young friend and soldier, Benjamin R. Pierce, after some months' practice at shooting rebels in Texas, tried his skill at a flock of wild geese yesterday morning, when lo! a good fine goose dropped to the ground—the ball passed entirely through his body.

PROSPEROUS. We are pleased to learn that the Orthodox Society of this town, talk of building a new church. So much for a good pastor.

CLOTHING. It is with pleasure that we recommend those who may wish to replenish their stock of clothing to the establishment of Messrs. L. D. Boise, & Co. 134 Washington street, Boston. This firm by strict attention to business, and fair dealing, have made hosts of friends.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Nov. 12, 1863.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS.—OTHER MATTERS.

The money market for the week past, has been somewhat stringent and disarranged, but the supply of currency is again growing abundant for all objects of trade or speculation on moderate terms. The Government finances are said to be in a highly satisfactory condition, by the skillful management of the Secretary of the Treasury. A steady movement continues in trade, and merchandise is advancing in prices, with a lively business. The limited stock of many kinds of goods, particularly cottons, will prevent any decline in prices. The foreign trade shows an increase of imports, and a decrease of exports, compared with last year, which is not a good sign. Labor of all kinds continues in good demand, and "strikes" are getting common throughout the country. These are always unpleasant features in business, but "the laborer is worthy of his hire," and it is but fair that his pay should keep pace with the prices he pays to keep soul and body together. The successful movements of part of the Federal army of the Potomac in the early part of the present week, driving the rebels nearer Richmond and taking some fifteen hundred prisoners, seems to be followed with the more recent news that "all was quiet on the Potomac." Later advices show that the position of our army in Virginia has not been greatly changed of late. Our forces lay in array of battle, near Brandy Station, but Lee declines to fight them. Intelligence from our armies of the Southwest representing them in good condition, and ready for a fight, is cheering for the Union cause. A movement is contemplated on Mobile, which bids fair to result in the capture of that city. Once in possession of Charleston, Savannah and Mobile, and the game is up against the rebels. All accounts, even from secession sources, go to show that the South are becoming exhausted by the evils of civil war, and would be glad for peace at almost any terms. As all apprehension is dispelled of foreign intervention, the sentiment grows stronger every day, that this war must soon end in the complete triumph of the Federal cause. The North is becoming a unit in its support of the Government for putting down the rebellion; a consummation devoutly to be wished.

For a few days past the weather has been very pleasant for November, and the city is very lively, both in business matters and amusements. The extra Session of the Legislature is a prominent event of the week, something will probably be done, and that too on a liberal scale, to encourage recruiting under the late urgent call of the President. The Senate and House in a Committee of the Whole, have had the subject of raising the Massachusetts quota under serious consideration to-day. No definite plan is agreed upon. It now seems more probable, that the monthly pay of volunteers will be advanced twenty dollars rather than any material increase of bounty. The recent action of the Vermont Legislature, increasing the bounty to volunteers one hundred dollars, and giving to drafted men in the service seven dollars per month extra pay, and their families all the benefits received by the families of volunteers, is favorably entertained here. Mons versons.

THE OLDEST AMERICAN NEWSPAPER.—The New Hampshire Gazette published at Portsmouth, completed the one hundred and seventh year of its publication with its issue of October first. The Gazette was started in 1756, and is the oldest newspaper in America.

THE FRIEND IN THE HOUSE. The "Shadow in the House," is the title of a recent novel. We prefer to speak of the Friend in the house, which Grace's Salve assuredly is. Its composition is the result of years of study. It is soothing, penetrating and of a wonderfully healing nature. In all cases of burns, scalds, flesh wounds, old ulcers, felioms, and all eruptions of the skin resulting from impure humors, it is a sovereign remedy. With this friend in the house, accidents may be easily remedied. Try it, it will prove a friend in need. 25 cents per box. See advertisement in another column.

Army of the Potomac.

For the following incident connected with the important charge made on Fredericksburg Heights, in May last, by Gen. Hooker's division of the army of the Potomac, we are indebted to Captain H. A. Oakman, of Company E, who was in active command on that occasion.

The recent brilliant action of Gen. Sedgwick's corps, recall to mind the gallant service of that corps in the storming of Fredericksburg Heights in Gen. Hooker's operation, May 3d, 1863. The bravery of a Quincy Boy in that assault deserves especial mention. The Seventh Massachusetts Regiment led the charge. In going up the steep ascent of Mary's Heights, the Color Sergeant fell and was obliged to relinquish the colors. Corporal M. C. Hatherston, of Company E, seized the colors, and not losing hold of his rifle, but with bayonet fixed, rushing through a storm of bullets, succeeded in entering the enemy's works before the rebels had left their guns, and planted the colors of the Seventh on the rebel redoubt. The first colors that entered the rebel works at Fredericksburg Heights on that memorable day.

KERSHAW'S EXHIBITION. It is truly refreshing to have an entertainment in our village which is really attractive to sensible people. We have altogether too many puppet shows and Yankee nonsense, for pocket and profit both. Things which are fine and useful are seldom treated to. But last week we had an exhibition which was grand. It was worth attending. We mean Kershaw's Panoramas, presenting more than forty scenes in the life of the Saviour, and a dozen views of Modern Palestine. The paintings were large and splendid. They covered twelve thousand feet of canvas. This beautiful work was executed by two celebrated American artists, Robert and William Pearson, of New York. Several of the Bible scenes were copied from the old Masters. As a work of art, these paintings are admired among persons of good taste,—furnishing a rich feast for the sight. The exhibition was highly instructive. It was a pictured commentary of the sacred life of Christ. It brought great facts to the mind through the eye, which do not come by the ear, with half the force. Such an exhibition exerts a sacred moral influence, which cannot be entirely lost, even upon the most thoughtless. These scenes and the ideas they illustrate so vividly, will come back to them in their quiet hours with an elevating and religious power. We need more entertainments of this kind, which will induce the people to look upon the sublime history of the Redeemer, if they will not hear it.

This exhibition comes highly recommended by gentlemen who have travelled in the Holy Land, and can testify to the correctness of the views.

We were glad to see the Hall so well filled. We hope Messrs. Kershaw & Hayward will favor us with another visit.

LEAVES FOR ALBUMS. We were presented a few days since with some beautiful leaves of all kinds and colors, gathered from the forest and garden, and neatly pressed and pasted on gilt edge cards. They look very pretty and being of the right size can be easily arranged in albums and will look quite tastefully. They are also fit mementos to send our dear friends in the army. Those wishing to purchase or examine some specimens can do so by calling at the Post Office or at Miss Reed's Store. They are the work of a young lady of this place.

Rev. Mr. Knowlton, of South Boston, will preach in the Universalist Church, Weymouth Landing, to-morrow at 10 1/2 A. M. and 2 P. M.

"HARD TIMES COFFEE." The only objection we have against it is that it takes so much time to cook it—which is one-half hour; but after it is made and brought on to the table, it will be found an excellent article. Children who dislike pure coffee are fond of it, and nervous and dyspeptic people find they can use it without any bad effect. We know of some of our most wealthy families in the city of Boston and vicinity who are now using it. See advertisement.

You can find a good assortment of splendid double soled Balmors, for Ladies' wear, of Calif or Cloth, at Cummings' Boot and Shoe Emporium. Also a good variety of all other kinds. Please give him a call.

THE STOUGHTON SENTINEL. The newspaper world has had a new accession to their ranks, during the past week, from the press of the Messrs. Woods, Stoughton, Mass.

The Sentinel is printed weekly, on a medium size sheet, fair type, and is a neat, interesting family newspaper. Its advertising columns are well filled—a flattering indication—which gives it quite a business appearance. We wish the publishers every success in their new enterprise, and hope to hear from them weekly.

SOUTHERN COMMODITIES. Many of the vegetable products of the South has been successfully experimented on at the North of late years. Tobacco has become quite a staple commodity in the New England States. The culture of the sweet potato, has also received attention. Mr. W. Gardner Prescott, of this town, raised some fine ones, during the present season. The yield, he says, was equal to the ordinary kind, without any extra labor.

DEATH. We are sorry to announce the death of our former townsman, Mr. Lemuel Dwell. He died at Augusta, (Ga.) on the 23d ult., of Typhoid Fever, at the age of 66 years. He was buried with Masonic honors by Social Lodge No. 1 and Webb's Lodge No. 166 of that place.

CHANGE OF TIME. As we were going to press, we were waited on by Mr. Gay, the Depot Master, and informed, that there would be a change in the running of the cars on the O. & C. P. R. Railroad on Monday next, but that he had not the details with him for this day's paper. The travelling community will please, therefore, to regulate themselves accordingly until our next issue.

TO BE SOLD. The Methodist Church, on the corner of Sea and Canal streets, in this town, will be sold at auction on Thursday next.

Summary of Intelligence.

In settling up accounts between the government and the State of New Hampshire it has been discovered that our granite neighbors have been owing Uncle Sam $10,000 since the war of 1812.

Coal that is shipped to Cincinnati on speculation is confiscated by a municipal committee, and distributed where it will do the most good, the shipper being simply reimbursed for his expenses.

Port Sumter was entered by a venturesome party of Union soldiers on the night of the 2d inst. They mounted the ruins and peered inside before being discovered; though greeted with a volley of musketry, the party got away safely with a small cargo of bricks as trophies.

Three hundred and twenty-one thousand barrels of flour and ten millions five hundred thousand bushels of wheat have been received this year at Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The Portland Press says that a large proportion of the members of old regiments from Maine have signified their intentions to the government to re-enlist for the war.

It is understood at Washington that President Lincoln is trying to make arrangements so that provisions can be forwarded to our starving soldiers imprisoned at Richmond.

The inconveniences of crinoline have been found so great in the Staffordshire potteries, that the principal manufacturers, Messrs. Copland, Messrs. Minton, and others have forbidden the use of crinolines on their premises during the hours of work. In one shop alone the losses by breakage of articles swept down by them amounted to £200 a year.

The United States Marshal has confiscated and sold the N. Orleans Commercial Bulletin. Nearly half a million of dollars will probably come into Maine for her surplus potato crop of this season.

Arrangements are being made on the Kennebec, Penobscot, and various other rivers, lakes and ponds, in Maine, to secure a large quantity of ice the coming season. About $100,000 was realized from the sale of ice in that State last year.

The farmers around Dayton, Ohio, made a grand demonstration in that city on Saturday last, bringing in 325 loads of wood, 28 days of flour, and 60 wagon loads of farm produce for the families of volunteers. They promise to repeat the donation at New Year's.

Poetry.

Brother's Fainting at the Door.

Yonder comes a weary soldier,
With faltering steps across the moor,
Mem'ries of the past steal o'er me—
He totters to the cottage door.
Look, my heart cannot deceive me,
"Tis one we deem'd on earth no more,
Call mother, haste! do not tarry,
For brother's fainting at the door.
Chorus—Kindly greet the weary soldier,
Words of comfort may restore.
You may have an absent brother,
Fainting at a stranger's door.
Tell us, brother, of the battle,
Why you were numbered with the slain,
We who thought you lost forever,
Now clasp you to our arms again.
Oh may others share the blessing,
Which heaven kindly keeps in store;
May they meet their absent loved ones,
Ay, e'en fainting at the door.
Chorus—Kindly greet, &c.

The Newspaper.

Lo! where it comes before the cheerful fire,
Damp from the press its smoky curls aspire
(As from the earth the sun exhales the dew,
Ere we can read the wonders that ensue;
Then eager every eye surveys the part
That brings its favorite subject to the heart;
Grave politicians look for facts alone;
And gravely add conjectures of their own;
The sprightly nymph who never broke her rest,
For tottering crowns, or mighty lands oppress'd,
Finds broils and battles, but neglects them all
For songs and suits, a birthday or a ball.
The keen warm man o'erlooks each idle tale
For "monies wanted," and estates on sale;
While some with equal minds to all attend,
Pleased with each part, and grieved to find an end
To this all readers turn, and they can look,
Pleased on a paper, who abhor a book,
Those who ne'er design'd their Bible to peruse,
Would think it hard to be denied the News;
Sinners and Saints, the wisest with the weak,
Here mingle tastes, and all amusements seek;
This like a public inn, provides a treat
Where each promiscuous guest sits down to eat;
And such this mental food, as we may call
Something to all men, and to some men all.

The Evening Hour.

Eve is the hour of bliss,
When angry passions cease,
And toil and turmoil are exchanged
For harmony and peace.
Eve is the dreamy hour,
When the child of fancy sees
An eye in every star, and hears
A voice in every breeze.
Eve is the poet's hour,
When lofty thoughts take birth,
And the soul is wafted far beyond
The gross desires of earth.
Eve is the lover's hour,
The hour that wakes soft sighs,
Sweet words, fond fancies, vague wishes, all
The spirit's mysteries.
Eve is fond memory's hour,
When the mental eye looks back
Through the mist of parted years to trace
Sweet childhood's happy track.
O blessed evening hour!
To every son of earth
Thou bring'st repose, and rest and peace,
Calm joy, and quiet mirth.

Anecdotes.

Friend, said a shrewd Quaker, to a man with a drove of hogs, hast any hogs in thy drove with large bones?
Yes, replied the drover, they all have.
Hast any with long heads and sharp noses?
Yes, they all have.
Hast any with long ears, like those of the elephant, hanging down over their eyes?
Yes, all my drove are of that description,
and will suit you exactly.
I rather think they wouldn't suit me, friend,
if they are such as thou describest them.
Thou mayst drive along.

A political candidate out West came upon
"a poor white man," who had a vote to give,
if he did have to do his own milking. The candidate, Jones, asked him if he should hold the cow, which seemed to be uneasy, and the old man consenting very readily, he took her
by the horns and held her fast till the operation was done.
Have you had Robinson (his rival) around
here lately? he asked.
O yes! He's behind the barn, holding the calf!

I say, Brown, what a close shaver Jones is,
why he'll squabble about a penny!
Well, what if he does! said Brown; the less one squabbles about the better.

A violent Republican in Hartford, met a Democratic coal dealer on the street, and asked the price.
I suppose your coal is loyal? queried the radical.
Well, its black enough—if that's what you mean, rejoined the other.

THE ALL SUFFICIENT THREE
The Great "American Remedies," Known as "Helmhold's," GENUINE PREPARATIONS, VIZ.
HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT "BUCHU,"
"SARSAPARILLA,"
"IMPROVED ROSE WASH."

HELMHOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION,
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu,
A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel and Dropsical Swellings.

This medicine increases the power of Digestion,
and excites the ABSORBENTS into heat-ful action, by which the WATERY OR CAL-
CULOUS DEPOSITIONS, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as
pain, inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

FOR WEAKNESSES

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse of the
ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:
Indisposition to Exer- Loss of Power,
tion, Difficulty of Breathing,
Loss of Memory, Dryness of the Skin,
Weak Nerves, Trembling,
Horror of Disease, Backache,
Dimness of Vision, Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude, Flushing of the Body,
the Muscular System, Eruption of the Face,
Hot Hands, Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which
this medicine invariably removes soon follow
FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by these "direct diseases?"

Insanity and Consumption.
Many are aware of the cause of their suffering,
but none will confess. The records of the insane
Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion. The constitution, once affected with Organic Weakness, requires the aid of medicine
to strengthen and invigorate the system, which
does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Females,
Old or young, single, married, or contemplating
Marriage in many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the menstrual Excretions, Ulcerated or Stagnant
state of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, or Whites, Sec-rility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Decline or Change of Life.

No family should be without it.
Take no Balsam, Mercury, or Unpleasant Medicine for Unpleasant and Dangerous Diseases.

HELMHOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU,
CURES SECRET DISEASES
In all their stages; at little expense; little or no change of diet; no inconvenience, and no ex-posure. It causes frequent desire, and gives strength to Urinate, thereby removing obstructions, preventing and curing Stricture of the Urethra, allaying pain and inflammation, so frequent in this class of diseases, and expelling
OUT MATTER.

Thousands upon thousands who have been the victim of Quacks, and who have paid Heavy Fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the Poison has, by the use of Powerful and Striking, been driven up the system, to break out in aggravated form, and
perhaps after marriage.

For all Affections and Diseases of
THE URINARY ORGANS,
Whether existing in Male or Female, from whatsoever originating, and no matter of how long standing.

BLOOD! BLOOD! BLOOD!
Helmhold's Highly Concentrated Compound
Fluid Extract Sarsaparilla Syphilis
This is an affection of the Blood, and attacks
the Sexual Organs, Linings of the Nose, Ears, Throat, Windpipe, and other Mucus Secretions, making its appearance in the form of Sores, Helmhold's Extract Sarsaparilla purifies the Blood, and removes all Scaly Eruptions of the Skin, giving to the Complexion a Clear and Healthy color. It being prepared expressly for this class of complaints, its Blood-Purifying Properties are preserved to a greater extent than any other preparation of Sarsaparilla.

Helmhold's Rose Wash.
An excellent Lotion for Diseases of a Syphilitic Nature, and as an Injection in Diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation, used in connection with the Extract Buchu
and Sarsaparilla, these diseases are recommended.
Evidence of the most responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicine.

known to SCIENCE AND FAME.

The Better Land.

BY MRS. HEMANS.

"I hear thee speak of the better land,
Thou call'st its children a happy band;
Mother! oh, where is that radiant shore?
Shall we not seek it, and weep no more?
Is it where the flower of the orange blows,
And the fire flies glance thro' the myrtle boughs?"

"Not there, not there, my child!"

"Is it where the feathery palm-trees rise,
And the date grows ripe under sunny skies?
Or 'midst the green islands of glittering seas,
Where fragrant forests perfume the breeze,
And strange bright birds on their starry wings,
Bear the rich hues of all glorious things?"

"Not there, not there, my child!"

"Is it far away, in some region old,
Where the rivers wander o'er sands of gold?
Where the burning rays of the ruby shine,
And the diamond lights up the secret mine,
And the pearl gleams forth from the coral strand?"

"Is it there, sweet mother, that better land?"

"Not there, not there, my child!"

"Eye hath not seen it, my gentle boy!
Ear hath not heard its deep songs of joy;
Dreams cannot picture a world so fair—
Sorrow and death may not enter there.
Time doth not breathe on its fadeless bloom,
For beyond the clouds, and beyond the tomb,
It is there, it is there, my child!"

Straps.

TO MAKE CRACKERS. Take one egg, one pint of sweet milk, a tea-cupful of lard, a little salt, and enough flour to make a stiff dough. Rub the lard and some flour together then add the egg and milk. Add flour and knead well till it is a very stiff dough. Then add to this one half its size of light dough,
knead them well together, and set away to rise. When light roll out to one-eighth of an inch thick, cut in squares, prick with a fork and bake to a crisp.

During a marriage ceremony the bride was sobbing immoderately while the knot was being tied. What's the matter my young woman! asked the official. "Oh, sir!" replied the bride, "it's because it's forever."
"No, no," rejoined the person that's a mistake, it's not forever. Death puts an end to the engagement. On hearing this the bride dried her tears and was consoled.

In the bull fighting days, a blacksmith, who was rearing a bull pup, induced his old father to get down upon all fours and imitate the bull. The canine pupil pinned the old man by the nose. The son disregarding the paternal warning, exclaimed, "Hold him, Growler! boy, hold him! bear it, father, bear it;
it'll be the making of the pup!"

Swift observed upon an indifferent pleader
at the bar, that he was the most affecting orator he ever heard, for he never attempted to speak but he excited general sympathy.

Counterfeit virtues are often a more popular currency than the genuine.

Some men ought to have very clear con-
sciences—if straining would make them so.

A newspaper writer contends that a man
ought to show as much courtesy to his own wife as to his neighbor's. A debatable subject.

Jeremiah was telling how much he liked calves head for dinner, when the mistress exclaimed—"Oh you cannibal!"

Can't you trust me, Mr. Butcher, for a little meat this morning? No, you owe me
for that already on your bones.

John, said a doting parent to her gormandizing son, do you really think you can eat
the whole of that pudding with impunity?
I don't know, ma, replied the young hopeful, but I guess I can with a spoon.

Good temper is the philosophy of the heart,
a gem of the treasury within, whose rays are reflected on all outward objects; a perpetual sunshine, imparting warmth, light and life to all within the sphere of its vast influence.

"I do not say that man will steal, said a witness on trial, but if I was a chicken, I would roost high when he was around."

Miscellaneous.

Mr. Grumble's Cure.

Same old story over again—the coffee as cold as a stone, room at arctic temperature,
and every corner full of stifling smoke.

Mr. Grumble drew his chair up to the breakfast table as he spoke, with the face of a first class martyr.

The coffee can easily be heated, dear,
said Mrs. Grumble, a pretty, timid-looking woman, with soft blue eyes, and brown braids,
and I don't really think the room very cold.
As for the smoke, I am very sorry, but the man solemnly promised me to have the chimney repaired yesterday.

Of course he did—nobody ever keeps promises to us, groaned Mr. Grumble. If it had been Smith, now, the chimney would have been fixed long ago. Do give me a piece of beefsteak that is at least warmed through;

we're not cannibals that I know of, to eat our meat raw. But that's always the way—we never had a cook that understood how to broil beefsteak.

But, my dear—
Don't tell me—I know just how things should be done. Newspaper hasn't come yet, I suppose? No, of course not. I really wish somebody would enlighten me as to why my paper is always half an hour later than everybody's else. If that baby don't leave off crying, I shall certainly go crazy. What does it all mean?

I suppose it's teeth trouble it, sighed Mrs.
Grumble, leaving the breakfast table to walk up and down the room with her fretful little charge.

O, nonsense, said Mr. Grumble, sharply, charging at a slice of toast with his fork; you cosset it too much, that's all.

Mrs. Grumble thought of the general commotion into which the house had been thrown,
a month previously, when Mr. Grumble had the toothache—hot water draughts and mustard poultices, laudanum and oil of peppermint, alternating with the most sepulchral groans. But she only nestled the baby's velvet head against her shoulder, and said nothing—woman's way of disposing of a great many life-problems.

Now, then, where's my hat? demanded
Mr. Grumble, rising and looking around.
Very singular that that hat is never in its place!

It is just where you hung it yourself, papa,
in the library, said little Harry, from behind
his spelling book.

Children shouldn't talk so much, said Mr.
Grumble, tartly. My dear, that rent in my overcoat isn't mended yet—why did you not see to it?

I intended to, said his wife, apologetically,
but you know we had company last night,
and the baby slept so badly that I rose rather later than usual this morning, but—

Always some excuses handy, interrupted her liege lord. I really don't understand the reason that nothing is ever done in time in this house.

And he gave the front door rather an emphatic slam as he went out. While little Mrs. Grumble, instead of joining a Woman's Rights Convention, or rebelling against her husband's iron rule, just sat down to cry. O, those comforting woman's tears—how many heart-wounds are healed by their balmy drops.
Woman may lose all her privileges, one by one, but as long as she can cry, there is some consolation remaining to her.

Mr. Grumble wasn't a bad husband, by any means; he sincerely loved his wife, and believed himself to be a pattern of conjugal amability. Only he had, some way or other, fallen into the unconscious habit of fault
finding, and like many other individuals, whenever he couldn't think of anything else to do, he grumbled.

Crying again Bessie! exclaimed her brother,
coming an hour or two later. Now that's too bad! I suppose Henry has been treating you to another domestic growl! I've a great mind to tell him how uncomfortable you are made by his little eccentricities. Shall I Bess?

No, no! I wouldn't have you breathe a syllable to him for the world! eagerly exclaimed Mrs. Grumble, hurriedly drying her tears. Henry don't mean to annoy me—he has the kindest heart in the world, and I know he loves me!

I dare say he does, said young Mr. Carlton.
Only, if I were a woman, I should rather my husband would give me a good beating once a week with a hickory stick, than be fretting
and fault-finding, hour after hour, and day after day! Upon my word, Bessie, I think it's an oversight in our national constitution, that there is no law to punish married men who scold!

Don't talk so, Marcy, said Mrs. Grumble, earnestly. Henry isn't at all to blame, only baby's teeth are very troublesome, and I had an indifferent night's rest, and—

Oh, eye—I understand, said Marcy Carl-ton, significantly, smiling. My dear little, forgiving Bessie, you ought to be made a martyr of.

He sat a moment or two in deep thought,
then suddenly starting up, exclaimed:
I must be gone, or I shall be too late at the depot to meet Uncle Tompkins. Did I mention to you, by the way, that Uncle
Tompkins was coming down from Glen County to visit you?

Uncle Tompkins! I didn't know we had an Uncle Tompkins, Marcy!
Didn't you, dear? Well please prepare your best bedroom for company—the old gentleman is rather particular—grumbles a good deal in fact, but then you are used to that sort of thing.

But, Marcy, I don't quite understand—
Don't detain me now, Bessie. I will come round myself, with the old gentleman, and introduce him. Au revoir!

The moment the door had closed behind Marcy Carlton, Bessie put her baby in the cradle, and clasped her hands to her aching head, quite uncertain whether to take strychnine or to jump overboard from the nearest dock. What was Marcy thinking of? How could she exist with another growler domi-ciliated for nobody knew how long at her heartstone? But perhaps they might neutralize one another like two powerful poisons.
There was a spice of comfort in that reflection, at least; and Bessie Grumble wiped her eyes, and almost smiled!

What was Mr. Grumble's surprise, on coming home that morning, fully primed for a domestic tirade, on the subject of a pearl button which had drifted down from his shirt
bosom during the day, to find his especial
easy chair, and corner of the fire, occupied
by an asthmatic old man, whose head and face
were enveloped in layers of red silk handkerchiefs, and whose feet were in a tub of hot water. He stopped short, in amazement and horror.

This is Uncle Tompkins, Henry, said
Mrs. Grumble, who was busy warning a basin of gruel over the fire, and the old gentleman extended one finger without turning
his head, saying in a cracked voice:

I wish, Nephew Grumble, you would shut that door. Nobody ever remembers to shut
a door in this house. What's that noise up stairs? I beg, Niece Bessie, that your baby won't cry the whole time I am here. Is tea ready? I'll take a cup here by the fire.

What does this mean, my dear? ejaculated
Mr. Grumble, in a hurried whisper, and his wife, whose arm he had caught on her way to the kitchen, after more hot water for Uncle Tompkins, replied, in the same tone:
O, you mustn't mind my uncle, dear; he don't mean anything, only he is old and whimsical.

But a man has no business to make every body else uncomfortable in this sort of way, muttered Mr. Grumble.

Tea was brought on to the table at this moment—a little smoky, it must be confessed, and the muffins considerably charred by the too violent action of the heat; but just as
Mr. Grumble was opening his mouth to comment upon these facts, Uncle Tompkins fore-
stalled him, by exclaiming:

What stuff this tea is; one would suppose it was made of cabbage leaves. Cannot you give me a better cup, Niece Bessie? These muffins are as black as a cinder; is not there a decent slice of bread in the house? I'm a dyspeptic, and have to be very careful what I eat.

Mr. Grumble silently devoured his supper,
burnt muffins and all, secretly wondering
how long Uncle Tompkins meant to stay.
No sooner was the table cleared, than the irascible old gentleman began again:

Nephew Grumble, I wish you'd stop the creaking of your rocking chair—my nerves are so weak; and, if you could keep your children up stairs, their racket would not disturb me quite so much. I really do not know how I'm going to stand that baby's noise.

I do not think it is a very noisy baby, said
Mr. Grumble, meekly. Its teeth are very painful just at present.

Mrs. Grumble, who was stirring the fire,
in accordance with her uncle's petulant request, said nothing, but smiled quietly to hear her husband trying to extenuate the baby's sins.

Well, remarked Uncle Tompkins, all babies are noisy. And, by the way, Nephew, I wish you would oil the hinges of that squeaking door; and I don't like the smell of that big geranium in the window. Hallo! you haven't any top button on your shirt-bosom, nephew!

I hope my niece isn't a careless wife.
Not at all, sir, said Mr. Grumble, nervously; but the care of her child and housekeeping duties absorb a great deal of her time. The instant she finds leisure she will repair my clothes.

I don't see how a woman can spend her whole time keeping house and looking after a pack of children, observed Uncle Tompkins incredulously.

About nine o'clock, the old gentleman was ushered to the guest-chamber, accompanied by a procession of medicine-vials, tubs of hot water, woolen dressing gowns, and heated blankets for his feet, and his absence occasioned very general relief.

What an insufferable old egotist that is!
exclaimed Mr. Grumble, throwing himself with a sigh of satisfaction, into his favorite seat once more. My dear Bessie, how could you endure his eternal fault-finding?

I am accustomed to that Henry; it is the lesser men women are obliged to learn, replied Mrs. Grumble with a slight sigh.

Her husband pricked up his ears a little uneasily. Accustomed to it? What did she mean? It was not possible—it could not be possible—that he was like that odious old Uncle Tompkins. And yet he wished Bessie had not spoken in that way: somehow it made him feel excessively uncomfortable.

Day after day passed away, Uncle Tompkins growing more and more intolerable the whole time, while Mr. Grumble improved the occasion by making a sort of mental-looking glass of that worthy old gentleman.

Upon—my—word—said he to himself, I must have been a perfect nuisance all these years. Why didn't somebody tell me of it?

At length Uncle Tompkins went away.
flannel gowns, medicine bottles, red silk handkerchiefs, and all, and on the evening of the same day, Marcy Carlton arrived, from a temporary absence, nobody knew where.

So your uncle has been visiting you? he said, gaily, to Mr. Grumble.

Yes, said the latter, with a slight grimace.
What sort of a looking man was he?

Mr. Grumble was silent for a moment.

Do you know, exclaimed he, bursting into a perplexed laugh, I could not describe a single feature of his face. He was always enveloped, like an Egyptian mummy, in red silk handkerchiefs, something like that one you have in your hand. However, I'm heartily glad he's gone; with my permission, he will never set his foot in this house again!

No! said Marcy, archly.

The most intolerable fault-finder and com-plainer I ever met with—absolutely the most disagreeable man who ever cumbered the earth! I don't see how it is possible to take exceptions to everything as he did.

That's not an uncommon failing, I believe,
observed Carlton, demurely, smiling.

Very likely, said his brother-in-law emphatically; but his visit has been productive of at least one good effect—it has completely cured me of any tendency I might have had that way. I, for one, mean to leave off fault-finding.

I'm happy to hear it, Nephew Grumble, exclaimed a cracked voice. The victimized man started up in dismay, scarcely believing
the testimony of his senses, as Marcy twisted
the red silk handkerchief skillfully round his head, and bent himself nearly double with an asthmatic sound between a groan and a grunt.

Why, you don't mean to say that you are Uncle Tompkins! he exclaimed.

Pardon me, Henry, said Carlton, smiling,
but I saw that you had unconsciously become an habitual grumbler, and I judged that the best antidote was a faithful representation of your own failings. Was I right?

His brother-in-law was half inclined to be angry, but thought better of it.

Shake hands, Marcy, said he. You are an irreverent young scamp, but I forgive you.
At all events the cure is complete.

And so Mrs. Bessie found it.

A Custom Worth Adopting.

In Russia it is the custom to force persons arrested for drunkenness to clean the streets,
a very excellent use to put them to, since by this means they have fewer drunkards and cleaner streets. Something like this seems to have been adopted in one of our Western cities. An exchange says: "The streets of Cairo a few days ago presented an interesting spectacle. They were being cleaned by a squad of gamblers, whom the Provost Marshal had arrested and set to work as scavengers."

An Amusing Mistake.

A gentleman was going out, one day, in his carriage, to call with his wife, when he discovered that he had left his visiting cards.
He ordered his footman, who had recently
come into his service, to go to the mantlepiece in the sitting room and bring the cards
he should see there. The servant did as he was ordered, retaining the articles to be used as directed, and off started the gentleman sending in the footman with cards wherever the "not at home" occurred. As these were very numerous, he turned to the servant with the question, "How many cards have you left?"

"Well, sir," said the footman, very innocently, "there's the king of spades, the six
of hearts, and the ace of clubs."

"The duce!" exclaimed his master.

That's gone, said John.

For the Patriot. Educational.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF ASHBURNHAM.

First in order of nature, the infant mind
looks to the parent for instruction.

Next to the parent may be classed the teacher. A successful teacher must be progressive in his work.

In material nature we recognize progression as a pervading law: "First the blade,
then the ear, then the full grown corn in the ear."

The importance of this law is acknowledged in every condition of life. If we speak of the farmer, mechanic or merchant, as prosperous,
it is only another way of speaking of them as progressive men; men who, by study and observation, have become acquainted with Nature's laws, and use them to the subservience of their own interests. As with the material so with the mental world. This principle rests in the very soul of man, and speaks through every attribute of his nature.
And the man who does not make daily progress, who does not possess more of the essential properties of a true manliness to-day,
than he did yesterday, is not answering the end of his being.

The teacher who does not act in accordance with these teachings is not worthy the name.

If you can teach no better to-day than you taught last year, if your present work is not an improvement over the past, it implicates
you of sloth and inaction; and the mind cannot bear the inertia of either. If to-day you pitch your tent upon the plain, to-morrow it must be one day's journey nearer the plateau beyond.

Like produces like. As is the parent, so is the child. As is the teacher, so is the school.
The teacher must be inspired with a love of learning, and a love for his work. Whoever is thus inspired, may feel assured that his labors will be crowned with success. Whoever is not, may expect to see the word failure written as a record of his labors.

A Splendid Ornament to Broadway, N. Y.

It must be a pleasant thing for that venerable individual, the oldest inhabitant, to run back in recollection to the days when our now palace-beautified Broadway was in a much more crude condition than it is in these days of progressive utility. Such improvements have taken place within the past few years in the appearance of our favorite thorough-fare, that it seems as if some arch enchantress had produced the change by one motion of her magic wand.

All along that grand avenue, from Bowling Green to Union Square, are to be seen some of the most magnificent structures which ever sprung from the train of art and architecture. And imposing as they are externally, they are equally so within. Some of them are fitted up in a style which would draw tears of ecstasy and admiration from the eyes of the most extravagant Parisian whose life is devoted to the study of luxury and magnificence generally.

Recently a novel improvement has been ushered into existence on Broadway. We refer to the splendid new Temple of Pharmacy (the doors of which were for the first time opened to the public but a few days ago) of Mr. H. T. Helmbold, at No. 504 Broadway, and adjoining the Metropolitan Hotel. Ever since its opening day it has been favored with full houses, (to use the language of the dramatic critics,) its unique splendor daily and nightly attracting large crowds of admirers.

The entire building, which is 28 feet front, 235 feet deep and 5 stories in height, has been leased by Mr. Helmbold. The street floor has been most tastefully fitted up, the front half being used for the retail department and the rear portion for the wholesale business and as a laboratory. There is probably no drug store in the world more beautiful and luxuriously furnished than this new acquisition to our Broadway attractions.

Connected with the establishment is a reception room, which is intended for the comfort of those who are obliged to wait while the prescriptions which they desire to purchase are being prepared. This is something which has long been a desideratum which Mr. Helmbold has supplied. The room is furnished with costly lounges, chairs, sofas
and velvet carpet. Taking this new establishment altogether it deserves to rank as one of the magnificences of our city.—New York
Com. Advertiser, Oct. 31.

Get Married.

Tacitus, who is reputed to have known a thousand or two, says that early marriages make us immortal. They are the soul and chief prop of an empire. That man who resolves to live without woman, and that woman who resolves to live without man, are enemies to the community in which they dwell, injurious to themselves, destructive to the world, apostates from nature, and rebels against heaven and earth.

Proclamation for Thanksgiving.

By the advice and consent of the Council,
I do hereby appoint THURSDAY, the 26th day of November next, to be observed by the people of Massachusetts, as a day of Public Thanksgiving and Praise. And I respectfully but earnestly exhort all the people of this Commonwealth, whom this Proclamation shall reach, wherever they may be, whether on sea or land, within our quiet borders or abroad on distant fields of war, to consecrate that day, in the sight of Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, by heartfelt works of charity, by devout thanksgiving, and by joyful praise. "O, go your way into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise;
be thankful unto him, and speak good of his Name. For the Lord is gracious, his mercy is everlasting."

For all the innumerable mercies, for the infinite of blessings, by which the year has been crowned; for health and prosperous industry, for peaceful homes, for waving fields
of grain, for harvests rich with all the food of man, for all the bounties of the sea, the wealth of mines, the skill and thrift of every handicraft; for the great agencies of Nature herself, working as kindly helpers to the hands of men, and for all the fruits of their gigantic toil; for intellectual activity, and moral life; for every gift and fruit of reason,
of conscience and religion, bless ye the Lord,
and him only; praise him and magnify him
forever.

Let us reverently contemplate the wonderful providence which has led and guided the hearts and minds of this people, and is shaping and working out the destiny of this Nation. Even in time of war we are rejoicing in the growth of the arts of peace. Subjected to its temptations and demoralizing
influence, yet the virtues of forbearance, patience and charity are daily illustrating the social life of our people no less conspicuously than their loyal patriotism. Side by side with the march of armies, and the destructive engines of war, move the messengers of love,
with every solace for the body or the mind,
to soften the soldier's lot or alleviate the travail of mortality. Sometimes slowly, and with hesitating tide, but always surely; sometimes with a receding eddy, but always on an undercurrent of steady and majestic power,
has been borne the symbol of our Nationality.
The moral sight has been quickened, duty has grown clearer to the mind, and faith has grown warmer in the heart, as the revelations of trial and the discipline of a great suffering
have done their appointed work.

Blending the temper of forgiveness with an unflinching integrity of purpose; weeping with the bereaved who mourn the beauty of our Israel slain upon our high places; but catching the sublime spirit of those who have sealed their testimony with their blood,
may we fail not to implore on this, our annual festival, strength from above to exercise ourselves also in every heroic virtue for the vin-dication of right and the overthrow of wrong.

Let us trust that peace shall soon return to our borders, and a union of hearts and hands revive on the ruins of that injustice
and inhumanity which bred our sorrows; when all the inhabitants of the land will unite to sing, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel;
for he hath visited and redeemed his people."

JOHN A. ANDREW.

Pat and his Oysters.

An Irishman, fresh from the Emerald Isle,
on arriving in Boston was employed by a man
to do odd jobs about the house, run of errands,
etc. One day his employer wanted a half-bushel of oysters, so Pat was dispatched for them, but was absent so long that apprehensions were entertained for his safety. He returned at last, however, puffing under his load in the most musical style.

Where in the d—l have you been? exclaimed his master.

Where have I been? why, where should I be but to fetch the oysters?

And what in the name of St. Patrick kept you so long?

Long! by my soul I think I have been pretty quick, considering all things?

Considering what things?

Considering what things! why, considering the gutting of the fish, to be sure!

Gutting what fish?

What fish! why, blud-an-owns, the oysters, to be sure!

What do I mean? why, I mean, that as I was resting myself, and having a drop to comfort me, a gentleman axed me what I'd got in the basket. Oysters, said I. Let's look at 'em, says he, and he opens the basket
Och! thunder and praties! who would you these? he said. It was Mick Carney, says I.
Mick Carney, the thief o' the world! says he;
what a blackguard he must be to give them

you without gutting. And aren't they gutted? says I. Devil o' one o' them, says he. Musha, then, says I, what will I do? Do says he, I'd sooner do it for you myself than have you abused; and so he takes 'em indoors and guts 'em nate and clane, as you'll see, opening at the same time his bag of oyster shells.

Of course his employer swore some at the trick which had been played, but Pat was more wroth and promises to have ample revenge.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Nov. 21st, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THANKSGIVING. We are requested by the Governor and his advisers, to abstain from our usual vocations on Thursday next, and with united hearts, raise our grateful voices to heaven for the manifold blessings with which we have been visited the past year. We shall cheerfully abstain from labor on that day—and do all in our power to carry out the requirements of the recommendation. But there are some details in the customary bill of fare that we may be in particular need of. We believe that no Thanksgiving is considered a legal affair unless a turkey or its kind, graces the occasion. Now, this is an item, in our list of wants, that is not yet complete. If any of our friends, therefore, have a surplus of the article on hand, and will forward one to our address, it will put us in the best Thanksgiving humor, and give a zest to the other condiments—the merits of which we may report in a future number.

We premise thus much, not merely for ourselves, but that good cheer may abound, and the affections have full play.

THANKSGIVING AMUSEMENTS. The Quincy Brass Band—Francis P. Lord, Leader and Director—has taken this occasion to regale the citizens of Quincy with one of their musical entertainments, so popular with our people, at the Town Hall, on Thursday evening next. The Band will appear in their new uniform, and perform some of their choicest airs—embracing many new pieces of music, which, to the lovers of melodious sounds will be a rich treat. After the Concert, dancing will commence, accompanied with appropriate music. I. P. Fuller, prompter.

Refreshments will be on hand for those who wish. Secure seats early as it is expected there will be a rush.

ST. PATRICK'S SOCIETY. This Society propose spending next Wednesday evening in a social dance, at their Hall, Hancock St. Mr. John Ring is one of the managers—a good time is therefore predicted. The Quincy Quadrille Band will be in attendance, so the best of music has been secured for the entertainment. When Patrick goes into the dance, it is with an energy and will that astounds the natives. He will put the Thanksgiving ball in motion, which will be kept rolling during the week.

SOLD AT AUCTION. The house and land belonging to Mr. Chas. T. Derry, situated on Brackett street in this town, was sold at Public Auction, on Wednesday last, to Wyman Abercrombie, Esq. for the sum of $675.

The Methodist Church and land, on the corner of Seab and Canal streets, was sold on Thursday last. Mr. Clift Rogers bid it off for $925 and informed those present, as he made the bid, that he wanted it for the Spirituists. And offered to put it in good repair and give any one the lease of it for ten years if they would keep Spiritual preaching in it during the time.

SOLDIERS RECORD. Colonel Samuel M. Quincy left Boston, on Monday last, to take his place on the staff of Brig. Gen. George L. Andrews, with the rank of Lieut. Col. He is to be Inspector General of the "Corps d'Afrique." Col. Quincy was obliged, from disability, occasioned by his wounds and imprisonment after the battle of Cedar Mountain, to resign the Colonelcy of the 2d Massachusetts Infantry. His many friends will be glad to learn that he is able to re-enter the service under his old commander.

Sergt. Charles H. Jameson and Thomas O. Connell of Co. K, 18th Regiment, were among the wounded in the battle of Rappahannock Station on the 7th inst., the former was wounded in the leg the latter in the hand and leg.

SENTENCED. In the Superior Court of Plymouth County, at its late session, William H. Totman, of Hingham, for an assault on Miss Frances Goodrich, of this town, was sentenced to one year in the House of Correction.

SUNDAY SERVICES. Rev. Mr. Thwing delivers a Second Discourse to-morrow morning at the Hancock Street Church, on the "Characteristics of Prophecy."

At the same place, at 7 o'clock, p. m. J. M. Skinner, an accredited agent of the American Temperance Union will give an address on Temperance. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends of this noble reform to be present.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Nov. 19, 1863.
THE WAR.

The war news of the week to the date of my writing may be summed up as follows:

The siege of Charleston continues; for two weeks ending November eighth, a bombardment on Fort Sumter was kept up by our monitors. So shattered is this ill-fated fortification, that only a corner now retains any resemblance to what it was; the remainder is a mere pile of pulverized masonry. From Chattanooga we are informed the campaign is over, and our position is safe. The two armies will probably occupy their time in reconnoitering and flanking. Both the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers are navigable to the seat of war, and all hazards of interruption to supplies for our troops are at an end. General Banks' expedition has safely trodden foot on the Texas shore of the Rio Grande, after losing two vessels in a northern. A boat's crew and seven soldiers were drowned while disembarking. General Banks' visit to the Lone Star State made quite a stir among the rebels. Fort Brown was evacuated and Brownsville set on fire by them. From the army of the Potomac we are told that Gen. Lee is still unwilling to fight, but in a strong position south of the Rapidan. While Gen. Meade is well situated north of that river, ready to give the enemy battle when they wish it. He has lately visited Washington, and on Saturday, as the story goes, held a consultation with President Lincoln, Mr. Stanton and Gen. Halleck. The two latter were in favor of putting the army in winter quarters immediately; but the President and Gen. Meade propose to take advantage of the completion of the bridge across the Rappahannock to endeavor to force a fight upon Lee at the nearest possible point of the Rapidan.

The action of the State Legislature the present week has been highly liberal to those who may volunteer their services under the late call of the President. The Act is not before us, which prevents us giving its prominent features, and we must defer the same until next week.

WASHINGTON. What is to be done with the people who visit Washington at the opening of Congress? Beef steak is 35 cents per pound, eggs 36 cents per dozen, butter 50 cents per pound, milk 20 cents per quart, etc. But rents! From $10 to $120 per month, it is said, is the price for a furnished room for a single gentleman.

THE COAL DUTIES. The New York Evening Post thinks that although it will gratify poor people to know that the owners of coal mines make from merely allowing coal to be dug from their mines, from $30,000 to $80,000 a year, yet, notwithstanding, the member of Congress who should bring in a bill to repeal the duty on coal, face boldly the opposition of those who are enriched by that duty, and carry the measure through Congress, would entitle himself to the thanks of every man in the country, rich or poor, with the exception of those who are the gainers by this public calamity.

THE UNION MONTHLY. This is the title of a new issue in periodical literature, published in Philadelphia, under the editorial management of William M. Cornell, M.D., LL.D., whose literary fame is not unknown to our citizens. The Union has already reached a large circulation, and its mission of love and good will, promise a wide field of usefulness. The following brief synopsis, which we copy from the editorial column of a late number, will give the reader some idea of the object and character of the work:

"The Union Monthly and Journal of Health and Education. Devoted to the Union of the Nation, national, educational, and the temporal and spiritual health of the army and navy, and to advance universal liberty."

Agents wanted, male or female, to sell this work, or to obtain subscriptions; good pay and no risk.

"We are for union in state, nation, church. The profits of the work will be donated to aid the sick and wounded soldiers and their families. All who wish to aid in so good a cause, will please send any contributions to our office, No. 33 South Fifteenth street, Philadelphia, for the work, or to send it to the soldiers. A number of benevolent persons have already contributed, whose names appear in this number. Here is a field to do good."

Edited by Wm. M. CORNELL, M.D., LL.D.

FASHIONS. Mme. Demore's "Mirror of Fashions," for the winter has been received. It is the only magazine published in the country devoted exclusively to fashions. It always contains the latest Paris styles, which make it a very desirable assistant to dressmakers and milliners, and is also an excellent guide to those who have to depend on themselves in making their own, and children's clothing. The price puts it within the reach of all who study economy in dress, as there is always something new and useful to be found in its pages. It is published quarterly at $1 a year. Ladies wishing to subscribe can do so, by leaving their names with us, and they can also see a specimen number by calling at our residence. Each yearly subscriber will receive a check which will entitle her to a selection of fifty cents worth of plain patterns to be selected any time during the year.

QUINCY HORSE RAILROAD. We are pleased to inform our citizens that the inconvenience which has attended the journey to and from the city, owing to the change of track, is now removed. The road is now in good condition, and everything looks inviting. The large and commodious stable now building near Field's Corner, in Dorchester, is nearly completed, at which place a change of horses will take place each trip.

PROMOTION. Lieut. William G. Sheen, of Company D, 39th Massachusetts Volunteers, who has for several months been connected with the Provost Department of Washington, is no longer a member of that regiment, having recently received a permanent appointment on the Staff of Gen. Martindale. Lieutenant Sheen was a favorite officer in the 39th, and he carries with him to his new position, the best wishes of the Regiment.

THE OLD FOLKS ARE COMING. Grandfather Baldwin, successor to Father Kemp, on whom the mantle has most happily fallen—will give one of those rich and unique performances, peculiar to these minstrels, at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening next. Those who have antiquarian proclivities—and, in imagination, would be carried back to the days of their Great, GREAT, GRANDFATHERS—and be familiarized with the habits, customs and peculiarities of the people of those times, should not fail to pay Mr. Baldwin a visit; he is a worthy representative of our venerated ancestors, and is supported by a most excellent company.

See card in another column.

THE ANKLE. This useful little article, first introduced to the public last winter, is destined to be very popular. It keeps the stockings dry and clean, also serves as a support to the ankle, and is quite an addition to an article of dress. They can be found at Cummings'.

THE TALLEST SUBSTITUTE yet received in New Hampshire hails from Newbury, Massachusetts. He stands six feet, four and a half inches in his socks, and is named Joseph E. Adams.

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON. Early in the morning of Wednesday next, Nov. 25th, there will be a nearly total lunar eclipse, which will be wholly visible throughout the continent of America.

CHEAP LIVING. Living in Cincinnati is cheap compared with prices here. Beef steaks sell at from eight to eleven cents a pound, beef roasts at ten cents, mutton at eight cents, chickens at thirty cents each, butter at twenty cents a pound, etc. Vegetables sell at equally reasonable rates.

BALLOU'S DOLLAR MONTHLY. We have the December number of this cheap monthly. It has as usual an abundance of excellent miscellaneous matter, good and entertaining stories, and some humorous sketches of the "Wing Fever," that has been so prevalent among the Ladies the past season. Published at 118 Washington street, Boston.

MONSIEUR TONSON, AGAIN. Our indefatigable and barber-ous neighbor, T. G. Emerson, has turned his scientific attainments to the development of resources, for the advancement of his profession. In addition to his celebrated "Hair Dye," which possesses the qualities of changing the most objectionable color, to a beautiful brown or black—restoring the grey locks of age, to a natural and permanent hue, by a safe, easy, and expeditious process, has also, introduced another article of equal merit—the "Indian Hair Balm," known the world over, for its excellent properties, for promoting the growth of the hair—imparting to it a beautiful and glowing lustre, and acting as an eradicant to dandruff, etc., etc.—no lady's or gentleman's toilet should be without it. For sale at the Emporium of Fashion, corner of Hancock and Temple streets.

WESTWARD HO!—Those who intend locating themselves on the plains of the far West, should not fail to provide themselves with a remedy for most of the minor accidents of life, by taking with them a supply of Grace's celebrated Salve. With that in the log cabin they may do without sending miles for a doctor, and save his bill into the bargain. The Salve is a sure cure for those nasty eruptions caused by the use of scrub oaks leaves. It also cures burns, scalds, flesh wounds, boils, and all skin complaints. 25 cents a box. See advertisement in another column.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS.

A BEAUTIFUL and appropriate article for a HOLIDAY GIFT, to Old or Young, is

The Craig Microscope!

Magnifies 100 Diameters or 10,000 Times.

Although of a high magnifying power, this Microscope is so simple that a child can use it—for it requires no focal adjustment; therefore it neither fatigues the eye, nor wears the patience, like other Microscopes.

The Microscope tells me that in the leaves of every forest, and in the flowers of every garden, and in waters, even rivulets, there are worlds teeming with life, and numberless as the glories of the firmament.—Chalmers.

Parents who wish to instruct and benefit their children as well as interest and amuse them, will here find the means of doing so.

The popularity of this Instrument is constantly on the increase. Its perfectness as a microscope, its power and its cheapness, are certainly wonderful.

This Microscope, in brass, is sent by mail, postage paid, for $2.25; or with 6 beautiful mounted Objects for $3; or with 24 objects for $5; or with 48 objects for $8.—postage paid. In hard rubber for 50 cents in addition to the above prices. MOUNTED OBJECTS, any number desired—from half a dozen to four dozen—different objects—can be had at the rate of $1.50 a dozen.

Also we have an interesting variety of Microscopic PHOTOGRAPHS,—among them is the Lord's Prayer, containing 268 letters on a space less than half the size of a Pin's head, but in the Microscope can be read distinctly. These are beautifully mounted on glass slides, and will be sent by mail on receipt of fifty cents each.

Illustrated Circulars, with lists of mounted Objects and Microscopic Photographs, will be sent on application.

Poetry.

Autumn.

The purple hills are wreathed
In misty, cloudy haze,
To herald the approach
Of autumn's golden days.

The crimson roses drooped
Beneath the chilly skies,
And all the lily-buds
Have closed their dreamy eyes.

The flowers have drooped and died,
The wild birds' song is still,
And shrouds of purple lie
On river, vale and hill.

Through all the painted woods
The Indian Summer flies,
And misty freighted barke
Are drifting through the skies.

A dusky spirit broods
O'er ocean, earth, and air,
And shadowy ghost-like forms
Are gliding everywhere.

I hear the mournful winds
Weil through the leafless trees,
And whispering echoes come Across the purple seas.

I hear a spirit-voice,
Like ripples of a stream,
It whispers to my soul—
"Life is a fleeting dream."

May-blossoms in the heart—
The morning blushes bright,
Snows drift across the May.
Then comes the dusky night.

Oh, 'tis a fitting type
Of all life's changing years!
Soon, soon our paths must lead
Across the shining spheres.

The Vacant Chair—Thanksgiving.

We shall meet, but we shall miss him,
There will be one vacant chair;
We shall linger to caress him,
While we breathe our evening prayer.

When a year ago we gathered,
Joy was in his mild blue eye,
But a golden cord is severed,
And our hopes in ruin lie.

At our fireside, sad and lonely,
Often will the bosom swell,
At the remembrance of the story,
How our noble Willie fell;

How he strove to bear our banner,
Through the thickest of the fight,
And upheld our country's honor,
With the strength of manhood's might.

Tree, they tell us wreaths of glory
Evermore will deck his brow,
But this soothes the anguish only,
Sweeping o'er our heart-strings now.

Sleep to-day, O early fallen!
In thy green and narrow bed;
Digress from the pine and cypress
Mingle with the tears we shed.

We shall meet, but we shall miss him,
There will be one vacant chair;
We shall linger to caress him,
When we breathe our evening prayer.

The Uncertainty of Earthly Things.

We build with years of toil and care
The fabric of our manhood's home,
And the winged lightning shatters there
Its labored walls and lofty dome.

We mould a goblet, and we dip
From crystal wells the wine of mirth,
When, as we raise it to our lips,
Lo! it shatters on the earth.

We are as travelers who would climb
Some dazzling peak of Alpine snow,
Which in the sunniest summer time
Hideth the yawning gulf below.

A darkness shrouds our journeying band;
We feel the treacherous footing glide;
Our comrades' pressure quits our hand!
We turn—he's missing from our side.

Anecdotes.

Said Joe to Bill—both were old bumsers,
and both were terribly dry:
Bill, if you'll treat, I'll tell you where you can get a whole new suit of clothes on six months' treat!

Will you, though? Now, no foolin' yer Billy.
True as preachin' I will, said Joe, and the parties took a drink at Bill's expense, when Joe, with a twinkling of the eye, said:

You go up to the recruiting rendezvous,
and tell 'em yer want a suit of clothes! They'll give them to yer on six months' treat!

Bill said his health was so delicate he couldn't list.

Did he not make several visits after the patient was out of danger? was the question of a lawyer in cross examining a witness called to prove a doctor's bill, in one of our courts a few days ago.

No, replied the witness, I thought the patient was in danger as long as he continued his visits.

An Irishman being asked by his master
what he did to the dog every day to make him
cry out as if cruelly treated, replied:
Cruelly trait him, yer honor? not I! I never could hurt a poor, dumb cratur in my life;
but yer honor bade me cut his tail, and so I cut only a little bit off every day, to make it more easy for him.

THE WORLD'S GREAT REMEDY

FOR SCROFULA AND SCROFULOUS DISEASES.

From Every Editor, or well-known merchant of Oxford, Maine.

"I have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and have seen the effect of it upon those who took it.
As fast as our people try it, they agree there has been no medicine like it before in our country."

Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Pustules,
Ulcers, Sores, and all Diseases of the Skin.

From Rev. John D. Stratton, Bristol, England.

"I add my testimony to that you publish of the medicinal virtues of your SARSAPARILLA. My son, aged ten, had an afflicting tumor in his ear, ear,
eye, and hair for years, which we were unable to cure until we tried your SARSAPARILLA. It has been well for some months."

From Mrs. Jane E. Rice, a well-known and much-esteemed lady of Danvers, (age May 21, N. Y.)

"My daughter has suffered for a year past with a
scrofulous eruption, which was very troublesome.
Nothing afforded any relief until we tried your SARSAPARILLA,
which soon completely cured her."

From Charles P. Gage, Esq., of the City of New York.

"I have used your SARSAPARILLA for a long time,
and it has cured me of a very troublesome
humor in my face, which grew constantly worse until
it disfigured my features and became an intolerable
affliction. I tried almost everything a man could do
of both advice and medicine, but without any relief
whatsoever until I took your SARSAPARILLA. It immediately made my face worse, as you told me it might for a time, but in a few weeks the new skin
began to form under the blotches, and continued
until my face is as smooth as any body's, and I am not without any symptoms of the disease. I can truly say, I enjoy perfect health, and without a doubt owe
it to your SARSAPARILLA."

"I have used your SARSAPARILLA for a long time,
and it has cured me of a very troublesome
humor in my face, which grew constantly worse until
it disfigured my features and became an intolerable
affliction. I tried almost everything a man could do
of both advice and medicine, but without any relief
whatsoever until I took your SARSAPARILLA. It
immediately made my face worse, as you told me it
might for a time, but in a few weeks the new skin
began to form under the blotches, and continued
until my face is as smooth as any body's, and I am
not without any symptoms of the disease. I can truly
say, I enjoy perfect health, and without a doubt owe
it to your SARSAPARILLA."

For the Patriot.
What I Saw in Boston.

'Twas Sabbath evening, calm and beautiful.
From the western sky the hallowed light
Was fading fast, and Nature seemed to rest.
The heavens grew bright with stars, that cast Abroad
Their pure effulgence on the tranquil night.
At length the moon the glimmering landscape
Did illumine with her celestial brightness,
Telling of purer worlds above the skies.
I stood beside the dying
O, 'twas fearful to behold the exit
Of that wretched soul! The half-raised curtain Showed me a scene unlike to that without.
There, tossing on a squalid couch, I saw
A female form in agony intense!
Up rolled her glassy eyes with meaningless glare,
And with extended arms she strove in vain
To drive away the hovering demons
That were haunting her delicious brain.
And ever and anon she shrieked aloud,
'O, see! they come! drive, drive them hence Away!'

And then she raved and tore her matted hair,
Till nature sunk and back again upon
Her pillow, overcome, panting she lay.
'Twas then, close to her bed, her little ones
Mute with astonishment drew near and gazed Upon her. There had been a time when she
With fondest care had taught their lips to pray,
And with them to the house of God had gone.
Say, what had wrought this change? Rumor by 'Licenced' vander sold.

The hours were on. Then came the messenger
Of death! He set his seal! She gave one groan
Of mortal agony and all was o'er!

Biddy Moloney's Cat.

Matthew Moloney, better known by the boys at the mill as "Father Mat," on returning from work one evening, was met at the gate by Biddy, his better half, in a high state of excitement.

Mat, says she, there's a strange cat in the cabin.

Cast her out, thin' an' don't be botherin' me about the baste.

Faiz, an' I've been strivin' to do that same for the matter of tin minnts past, but she's jist beyant my rache, behind the big red chist in the corner. 'Will yez beafter her helpin' me drive her out, Mat?

To be sure I will, but look to the constable she's for me hoose; show her to me, Biddy, till I tache her the respect that's due a man in his own hoose—to be takin' possession widout as much as by yer lave, the thafe o' the world!

Now Mat had a mortal antipathy for cats, and never let pass an opportunity to kill one.

This he had resolved to do in the present case, and instantly formed a plan for the purpose. Perceiving but one mode of egress for the animal, he says to Biddy:

Have yez a male bag in the hoose, me darlint.

Divil a wan is there, Mat. Yez tuk it to the mill wid yez to bring home chips wid, this morning.

Faiz, an' I did, an' there it is yit, thin. Well, have yez nothin' at all in the hoose that will tie up like a bag, Biddy.

Troth, an' I have, Mat: there's me Sunday petticoat; yez can draw the strings close at the top, an' sure it will do better nor lettin' the cat be laven' yez.

Biddy, darlint, yez a jewel to be thinkin' of that same; be after bringin' it to me.

Biddy brought the garment, and when the strings were drawn close it made a very good substitute for the meal bag, and Mat declared it was illigant.

So holding it close against the edge of the chest, he took a look behind and saw a pair of bright eyes glaring at him.

And it is there ye are, ye d—l? Be out o' that now; bad luck to all yer kin, ye thavin' vagabone ye. Be dad, an' ye won't have me hoose at all wid yer perlitte axin'! Yer self-will bates a pig's intirely. Biddy have yez any hot wather in the hoose?

Yis, I've a plenty Mat; the tay kettle's full of it.

Be after castin' the matter uv a quart thin' behind the chist, till I see how the shay d—l likes it.

Would 'im close, Mat; here goes the wather.

Dash went the wather, and out jumped the animal into Mat's trap.

Arrah, be the howly poker, I have 'im in, Biddy, says Mat, drawing close the folds of the garment; now, bad cess to yez, ye thafe, it's nine lives ye have, is it? Be after axin' me forgiveness for the thavin' ye have been doin' in my hoose, for I'm thinkin' the nine lives ye have won't be after savin' ye now, any way. Biddy, saize hold uv the poker, an' when I showlth the haythin, ye'll bate the daylight out uv him.

Mat threw the bundle over his shoulder, and told Biddy to play "Saint Patrick's day, in the morning" on it. Biddy struck about three notes of that popular Irish air, and suddenly stopped, exclaiming:

What smells so queer, Mat? It's takin' me brith away wid the power uv it. Och, murder, Mat, sure an' ye have the d—l in the sack.

Bate the ould haythin thin; yez'll never have a better chance. Bate the horns off 'im; lather 'im like blazes, me darlint!

Hugh, says Biddy, I'm faintin' wid the power uv 'im. Cast 'im off yez, Mat.

Howly St. Pather! says Mat, throwing down the sack. Biddy, the baste's a pole cat! Lave the hoose, or yez'll be kilt intirely.—Murder an' turf, how the haythin smils.—Och, Biddy Moloney, a purthy kittle uv fish yez made uv it, to be sure, to be mistakin' that little d—l for a harmless cat.

Mat, for the love uv God, if yez be convenient to the door, be after openin' it, for I'm nearly choked wid 'im. Och, Biddy Moloney, bad luck to yez for laving out Ireland, to be murderin' in this way! Howly Mary protect me! Mat, I'm clane kilt intirely! Take me out uv this!

Mat drew her out of doors, and then broke for the pump like a quarter horse, closely followed by Biddy.

Shure, that vilin bates the d—l, intirely; he's ruined me hoose an' put me out uv constate wid meself for a month to come. Och, the desavin' vagabone, bad luck to 'im, and Mat plunged his head into the horse-trough up to his shoulders.

Get out o' that, Mat, I'm narely blind, and Biddy went under water. Och, the murderin' baste, says Biddy, sputtering the water out of her mouth, me best petticoat is spilt intirely. Mat Moloney, d—l a thrap will I iver help yez sit for a cat again.

Don't trouble yerself Misthress Moloney, ye've played the d—l as it is. Niver fear me axin' a ha'porth of yer assistance. It's a nath'ral fool ye are to be takin' a baste uv a pole cat for a hoose cat.

Mat and Biddy went cautiously back to the cabin, from which the offensive quadruped had taken his departure. Things turned out of doors, Biddy's petticoat buried, the bed, which fortunately escaped, moved to a near neighbor, the stove moved outside, and for a week they kept house out of doors, by which time, by dint of scrubbing, washing and airing, the hoose was rendered once more habitable, but neither Mat nor Biddy have forgotten the STRANGE CAT.

A Reminiscence.
The following article, which we copy from the Transcript, where it appeared over the signature of "Sigma," who is well known to be Lucius Manlius Sargent, a former resident of Quincy Point, in this town, will have an especial interest for our readers, particularly those who knew and associated with him.

"The Rev. Benjamin Clarke Cutter, late rector of St. Anne's Church, in Brooklyn, New York, was the Rector of Christ Church, in Quincy, Massachusetts, where I then resided. A most amiable, Christian gentleman was he. He certainly possessed the happiest talent for converting sinners from their evil ways, rather by the employment of his moral suasion, which has been accounted so effectual, in the matter of temperance, than by holding the terrors of the law over the heads of his hearers, and operating disphoretically on the nervous system of his parishioners, by the administration of a couple of supersulphurated sermons, on every Sabbath day. He was not one of those expounders, described by Butler:

"Whose pulpit, drum ecclesiastic,
Was beat with fist, instead of a stick."

This good man, and valued friend, has gone to his reward; and I may speak of him without reserve. The expression of his countenance was remarkable for its benignity; and his enunciation was so clear and distinct, that every word told upon the ears of his congregation, with little effort to the speaker.

You have heard of Parson Barrock, who bawled himself into a bronchitis. His discourses were feeble productions; some of the parishioners are said to have left the church, because, for the noise he made, they were unable to lose themselves, of an afternoon. Howling, in a pulpit, is very disagreeable, certainly.

Riding one day, in the direction of the stone quarries, in Quincy, I saw my friend, returning, as I conjectured, from his parochial visits to some of his poor parishioners. As we drew nearer to each other, I perceived he had something in his hand, which I soon discovered to be a pair of chickens. Good morning, my friend, said I, what do you ask for your chickens?

You are not rich enough to purchase them, he replied.

He then proceeded to tell me their brief history. As he was passing the humble dwelling of a poor woman, whose husband had been very intemperate, she called after him, and holding up these chickens, begged him to accept them. I told her, said he, she could not afford to give away such a fine pair of chickens.

Mr. Cutter, said she, with a sad expression, you will hurt my feelings if you do not take them. I have fattened and picked them, for purpose for you. It is the only return I am able to offer, for the very great service you have lately done for me and my little children.

I am not aware, said Mr. Cutter, of having done you any service of late.

Sir, said the poor woman, you have reformed my husband.

There must be some mistake, said Mr. Cutter. I knew your husband was intemperate; but I have never said a word to him, on the subject.

I know you never have, said she; if you had, his pride is such, that it might have made matters worse. It is now more than two months since he left off. It has happened oddly enough, that often, when you have stepped in, to say a few kind words to us, he has been taking his dram, or taking down his jug, or putting it back again. About two months ago, just after you went out, he went to the door, and to my astonishment, poured nearly a pint of rum out of his jug, on to the ground, and said, Debby, rinse out that jug, with hot water; I have done. I can't stand that man's looks, any longer. If Mr. Cutter would look savage, I shouldn't mind it; but he looks so sad, and so benevolent, all the while, when he sees me taking a dram, that I know what he means, just as well, as if he preached it, in a sermon, and I take it very kindly of him, that he didn't give me a long talk. I know you will take the chickens, Mr. Cutter, said the poor woman.

It may interest some of your readers to know something of that little old church; some extracts, made forty years ago, from its records, are now at my elbow. The first meeting, within its walls, was held one hundred and thirty-five years ago, on Easter Monday, 1728. In May, 1726, an agreement was made, between Ebenezer Miller, of the first part, and Henry Turner and others, of the second; Miller to receive £100, to be refunded with interest, in one year, if, within that time, he should not be appointed minister of the Episcopal Church, in Braintree, by "the Honorable Society for propagating the Gospel in foreign parts." The £100 was then A. M. at our Cambridge, in the class of 1722. It was desirable to return him to his charge, as soon as possible. He was ordained deacon, by Edmund, Lord Bishop of London, June 29, 1726; priest, July 9, 1727; swore conformity to the Liturgy, July 24, 1727; made A. M. at Oxford, July 16, 1727; licensed to preach, in Massachusetts, July 24, 1727; appointed missionary to Braintree, by the Society for Propagating the Gospel, on August 26, 1727; made Private Chaplain to the Duke of Bolton, September 28, 1727. He then returned, and officiated in the church in Braintree, (Quincy) for thirty-six years till his death, February 11, 1763. He was once again in England, and received the degree S. T. D. December 8, 1747.

After Mr. Miller's death, with a brief interval, Mr. Edward Winslow of Stratford, Connecticut, took charge of this Church, and until August, 1777, when he left, for conscience' sake. The time had arrived when it became necessary to violate the oath of conformity or pray for the king and royal family, which Christians, of the High denomination, would not tolerate—so Mr. Winslow, who was a respectable and conscientious tor, relinquished his cure.

From 1777 to 1822, no clergyman was established over this church; and yet it was not one of the waste places in Zion. Mr. Miller and Mr. Winslow received £60 sterling per annum from the Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts. When it became impossible to pay for the king, according to the English Liturgy, that stipend was no longer supplied. For several years, Joseph Cleverly officiated as a Lay Reader after Mr. Winslow's departure. He was a graduate of Harvard, of the class of 1733. He died in 1802, at the age of eighty-nine years, and sleeps, near the scene of his labors, in the graveyard adjoining the site of the old church. He was a worthy man; and the good people would have had him cross the sea, and obtain ordination; but Mr. Cleverly was subject to a species of chronic hydrophobia, and could not be persuaded to encounter the perils of the deep.

Clergymen occasionally officiated in this little, old tabernacle. May 31, 1784, twenty-four shillings, per Sabbath, were voted to the Rev. Mr. Wheeler, to preach once, monthly, and three shillings to Major Miller for entertaining him.

One Sabbath morning, I was somewhat surprised, to notice upon the unpainted front of the pew which I occupied, the name of Arthur St. Clair. It had been scratched there with a nail, or some sharp pointed instrument. On the following Monday I stated this fact to President Adams, then, (1822) eighty-seven years old, and he told me that Gen. St. Clair, at one time, resided in that village, and occupied a house, belonging to the Athorp family, and, at the time of my enquiry, (1822) the residence of Mrs. Miller. I afterwards found the following entry on the records: Baptized, July 10, 1763, by the Rev. East Athorp, Phebe daughter of Arthur and Phebe St. Clair. Mr. Adams said that St. Clair was a very gentlemanly man and a scholar."

Gaining Strength.
A student in one of our State colleges was charged by the faculty with having had a barrel of ale deposited in his room contrary to course to the rules and usage. He received a summons to appear before the President, who said:

"Sir I am informed that you have a barrel of ale in your room."

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what explanation can you make?"

"Well, the fact is, sir, my physician advised me to try a little ale each day as a tonic, and not wishing to stop at various places where this beverage is retailed, I concluded to have a barrel taken to my room."

"Indeed. And have you derived any benefit from it?"

"Ah, yes, sir. When the barrel was first taken to my room two weeks ago, I could scarcely lift it. Now I can carry it with the greatest ease."

We believe the witty student was discharged without reprimand. At least he ought to have been.

The Breath of Life.

Whatever lives must breathe. Whatever shelters or feeds life must breathe also. As is the breath so is the life, for health is but a pulmonary function, and happiness a castle in the air. The blood, stifled with ill-supplied or incapable lungs, blackens and curdles; the hair, stifled beneath an impenetrable hat, dies and falls away; the skin, stifled by garments too many and too close, or smothered by its own unremoved excretions, yields its duty as guardian of the outposts of life and betrays the citadel to the enemy.

It utters its mute protest against rubber boots and air-proof coats, which, unless briefly and loosely worn, are portable death.—Houses, too, must breathe as well as garments. A breathless house is suicide made easy. The asthmatic complains of his labored breathing, but forgets that his house wheezes worse than he through its listed windows and doors. He shuts the casement because it admits cold; he turns the stove damper because it allows the escape of heat. How is his house to catch its breath with mouth and nostrils closed? Mamma folds her sleeping little ones in blankets and comfortable, and tucks them into their close cribs with impenetrable Marseilles, of a texture fit for a balloon; if the chicks are timid they draw the white drapery over their heads, shutting out any quantity of bugbears, but shutting in a veritable nightmare of exhausted and poisonous air. Warmth is essential to comfort, but pure air and rich blood are the healthiest heaters known.

Observe how Nature breathes. The earth itself floats in an air-bath forty-five miles in length. The soil must breathe or it will not bear. Not only must the plough let in the air from above, but a porous subsoil or frequent drains must give it an exit from beneath, or you win only grudging gifts from the smothered soil. Choose a flower-vaso of wedgewood ware, and without an opening at the bottom, and the rose folds its green calyx in despair about its stifled buds. Nay, let the pores in the stems and leaves become choked with dust, and the plant dwindles and dies, of voiceless, vegetable catarrh. The ocean breathes in the trade-winds and laughs in the shout of the tempest. Its slow beating pulses are the tides; mountain billows are the heaving of its lungs. The kiss of the breeze gives it health and purity; both are breezed by the leaden weight of a breathless calm, and

"Slimy things do crawl with legs
Upon the slimy sea."

Since then our life is but a breath, let it at least be strong and pure, and let us not attempt the futile experiment of seeking it in an exhausted receiver.

An Editor Said.
The editor of an English paper was recently presented with a stone, upon which was carved the following letters. The editor was informed that the stone was taken from an old building, and he was requested to solve the inscription. It read:

ST—

Eminent men were called in to consult upon the matter, and after an immense amount of time consumed, they were informed that the stone was—

"For Cattle to rub their tails against."

Three Things to Love.
Courage, Gentleness and Affectionateness. Three things to admire—intellectual power, dignity and gracefulness. Three things to hate—cruelty, arrogance and ingratitude. Three things to delight in—beauty, frankness and freedom. Three things to wish for—health, friends and a cheerful spirit. Three things to pray for—faith, peace and purity of heart. Three things to like—cordiality, good humor and mirthfulness. Three things to avoid—idleness, loquacity and flippant jesting. Three things to cultivate—good books, good friends and good humor. Three things to contend for—honor, country and friends. Three things to govern—temper, impulse and tongue.

Canteen.
The word canteen has had a curious history. It is perhaps the only word in our language which, originally English, passed into a foreign tongue, and was afterwards taken back in a modified form. As originally spoken by the Saxon, it was simply "tin can," but the Gaul, as is his wont, placed the noun before the adjective, and pronouncing the latter as a, brought it out as "cantin," pronounced canteen. Adopting a thousand other French military terms, the dull Englishman took back his own original word in a new shape, without any inquiries on the subject, and hence we now say canteen, instead of tin can.

The two Misers.

A miser living in Kufa had heard that in Bassora also there dwelt a miser more miserly than himself, to which he might go to school, and from whom he might learn much. He forthwith journeyed thither to the great master as an humble commender in the art of avarice, anxious to learn, and under him to become a student.

Welcome, said the miser of Bassora; we will straight go to the market to make some purchases.

They went to the baker.

Heat thou good bread?

Good, indeed, my masters, and fresh and soft as butter.

Mark this, friend, said the man of Bassora to the one of Kufa; butter is compared with bread as being the better of the two; as we can only consume a small quantity of that, it will also be cheaper, and we shall therefore act more wisely and savingly, too, in being satisfied with butter.

They went to the butter-merchant, and asked if he had good butter.

Good, indeed, and flavory and fresh as the finest olive oil, was the answer.

Mark this also, said the host to his guest; oil is compared with the best butter, and therefore by much ought to be preferred to the latter.

They next went to the oil vender.

Have you good oil?

The very best quality; white and transparent as water, was the reply.

Mark that, too, said the miser of Bassora to the one of Kufa; by this rule water is the very best. Now at home I have a painful, and most hospitably therewith will I entertain you.

And indeed on their return, nothing but water did he place before his guest, because they had learned that water was better than oil, better than butter, better than bread.

God be praised, said the miser of Kufa, I have not journeyed thus long distance in vain.

The Dutch Miller.
Mynheer Slauken owns a grist mill, and Peter Snyder owns one also, near by. Old Mynheer San Slauken was subject to fits of insanity, and when in one of these moods would assume that he was Supreme Judge, and would get upon his throne and call such persons as he might have in his mind to judgment, and would ask and answer the questions himself. The questions would be put with a sharp, strong voice, and the answer very whining and meek. Having one of his crazy fits one day, he mounted his throne, and as there had been a little competition in the grist-mill business he took occasion to call Peter Snyder to judgment, so he calls out:

Peter Snyder! No answer. Again very sharp: Peter Snyder.

Ah, Lord, here I ish: Vat you vant, Lord?

Do you own a grist-mill?

Ah, yes, Lord, I does.

Tell, Peter Snyder, do you ever take too much toll?

Ah, yes, Lord, ven nine vater I very low, and mine stones was very dull, I has taken too much toll.

Vell den, you may go to the left hand mit de gasta.

As he passed judgment upon his neighbor, he thought he would try himself.

Mynheer Van Slauken. No answer. Very sharp. Mynheer Van Slauken.

Ah, Lord, here I ish: vat you vant?

Do you own a grist mill?

Ah, yes, Lord, I does own a grist-mill!

Does you ever take too much toll, Mynheer Van Slauken?

Yes, Lord, sometimes I have taken too much toll.

Vell, Mynheer Van Slauken, vad did you do mit dat toll?

Ah, Lord, I has given to the poor. (After a slight pause.) Vell, den you can go to de right hand mit de sheep, but it is a dight shkeuze.

Splitting the Difference.
The author of the following atrocious libel on the sex, has occupied. A sharp look-out should be kept for him: A nice young man, not a thousand miles from here, after a long and assiduous courtship, found himself, one bright evening, the betrothed of a very pretty girl, the very pink of modesty. One night he was about to take his departure and after lingering about the door for some time, in a fidget of anxiety, declared and protested to Miss Nancy, that he could not and would not leave her until she kissed him. Of course, Miss Nancy blushed beautifully red, and protested in turn, that she could not and would not do that. She never had done such a thing, and never would, until she was married, so now he had it. The altercation became deep and exciting, until the betrothed buffed

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS.

A BEAUTIFUL and appropriate article for
a HOLIDAY GIFT, to Old or Young; is
The Craig Microscope!
Magnifies 100 Diameters or 10,000 Times.

Although of a high mag-
nifying power, this Microscope is so simple that
a child can use it—for it
requires no focal adjustment; therefore it neither
fatigues the eye, nor
wears the patience, like
other Microscopes.
The Microscope tells
me that in the leaves of
every forest, and in the
flowers of every garden,
and in the cells of every ruiet, there are worlds
teeming with life, and
numberless as the glories
of the firmament. Chal-
mer.
Parents who wish to
instruct and benefit their
children as well as interest and amuse them, will here find the means of
doing so.
The popularity of this instrument is constantly
on the increase. Its perfectness as a microscope, its power and its cheapness, are certainly
wonderful.
This Microscope, in brass, is sent by mail,
postage paid, for $2.25; or with 6 beautiful
mounted Objects for $3; or with 24 objects for $5; or with 48 objects for $8—postage paid.
In hard rubber for 50 cents in addition to the above
prices. MOUNTED OBJECTS, any number desired—from half a dozen to four dozen different
objects—can be had at the rate of $1.50 a dozen.
Also we have an interesting variety of Microscopic PHOTOGRAPHS, among them is the Lord's Prayer, containing 268 letters on a space
less than half the size of a Pin's head, but in the Microscope can be read distinctly. These are beautifully mounted on glass slides, and will be sent by mail on receipt of fifty cents each.

GRACE'S CELEBRATED SALVE.

This Salve is a vegetable preparation, invented in the 17th century, by Dr. Wm. GRACE, surgeon in King James's army. Through its agency he cured thousands of most serious sores and wounds that baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians of his day, and was regarded by all who knew him as a public benefactor.

Grace's Celebrated Salve cures Burns.
Grace's Celebrated Salve cures Scalds.
Grace's Celebrated Salve cures Flesh Wounds.

Grace's Celebrated Salve cures Ringworms.

And from Sores and Wounds of the most serious nature down to a common Pimple. It eradicates Pimples from the face, and beautifies the skin. There is no preparation before the public that can equal this Salve in prompt and energetic action for the speedy cure of external diseases as those who have tried its virtues testify.
Soldiers, Sailors, and Fishermen, will find this Salve their best friend.

It has none of the irritating, heating properties of other remedies, but cools, cleanses, and heals the most serious Sores and Wounds.
Every family, and especially those containing children, should keep a box on hand in case of accident, for it will save them much trouble, suffering, and money. All it wants is a fair trial to cure old and inveterate Sores.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Hunting the Deer.

BY F. M. ADLINGTON—WEYMOUTH.

Friend Sprague, I have heard you are fond of the Chase,
And that you are certain to win in the race;
Your picture has long had a place in my room,
And I often have said you would make a fine groom.

I like well the glance of your kind, manly eye,
And should think from you none but the guilty would fly;

That following the Chase you'd be first to the game,
And in future the Chase would be called by your name.

E'en so let it be, little Rhoda will smile;
To the top of her head, as she crowns you the while;

The hero in war, and the victor in love—
And blends in your 'emblem, the eagle and dove.

The heart of our nation must honor the man,
Who gallantly marched at the head of his clan;
Who school'd his kind heart to the battle's rude strife,
And pledged for his country his fortune and life.

My blessing be with thee, tho' little its worth,
No traitor could buy it, for traitors I loathe;
From cunning Jeff. Davis to that silly thing,
Who thought in Ohio to reign petty king.

* Daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury.
† Bridegroom. ‡ Rhode Island.

"List of the Killed."

Mothers who sit in dumb terror and dread,
Holding that terrible list,

Fearing to look upon you see mid the dead,
The name of the boy you have kissed—

Kissed e'en as those who in anguish and pain
Kiss precious faces of clay,

E'en as you would had you shudderingly lain
That dear one in grave-robes away—

I pity you, sitting with faces so white,
Striving to pry the blow;

I know how that name will torture your sight,
Can fathom the depth of your woe.

By the pang that rent my desolate heart,
By this crushing weight of despair,

I know how you too will shudder and start,
Reading that dear-learned name there.

I know you'll hush that passionate cry,
Thinking of him as he lies,

With beautiful face upturned to the sky,
Death veiling the glorious eyes.

"Fighting he fell! Does a feeling of pride Lighten your grief as you think

How brave was the boy that went from your side,
How he would not falter or shrink?

The mother's love triumphs. Men call women weak—

Ah, well, perhaps it is so!
I know there are tears e'en now on my cheek

For the boy that's lying so low.

I know that I start at each step on the stair,
With wistful glance turn toward the door,

Thinking, perchance, that my darling is there—
Peace, heart! he can come nevermore.

But still there's a thought that softens my woe—
Above there's a glorious light;

And one day I'll hear with rapturous glow
The name of the boy I have kissed.

Anecdotes.

Old Parson Rives, down in Tennessee, was sent by conference to preach to the negroes in a distant part of the State. He was a man of very dark complexion, but would never have been mistaken for a negro. Meeting one of the saucy overseers, the parson said to him:

"Perhaps you do not know me. I am Mr. Rives, the negro preacher."

"O yes, said the fellow, I knowed you was a nigger, but I didn't know you was a preacher."

A country parson in Cornish, New Hampshire, had a singular peculiarity of expression, always using the phrase, "I flatter myself, instead of, I believe. Having occasion to exhort his congregation during a revival, he flattered himself that more than one half of them would be damned! The contrast between the sincerity of the preacher, and the amazement of his auditors, may be imagined.

A gentleman called upon a physician, wishing him to attend his wife immediately, as she was dangerously sick; but the doctor did not incline to leave his bottle, whereupon the gentleman took him upon his back, and carried him out of the hotel.

Now you rascal, I'll cure your wife out of revenge, said the doctor, and he kept his word.

Well, essay, how do you like your school? O, so much!

That's right. Now tell me all you have learned to-day.

I have learnt the names of all the little boys.

A negro undergoing an examination in the Superior Court, when asked if his master was a Christian, replied:—

"No, sir; he is a Member of Congress."

THE peculiar tint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the constitutions of multitudes of men. It either produces or is produced by an enfeebled, vitiated state of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes impure, and the system is thrown into disorder and decay. The scrofulous contamination is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unwholesome food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children, and the third and fourth generation; indeed, it seems to be the root of all the diseases which attack the human system. It originates take various names, according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous affections. These all having the same origin, require the same remedy, viz. purification and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood, and these dangerous distempers leave you. With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most effectual antidotes that medical science has discovered for this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the disorders it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect upon this class of complaints, is indisputably proven by the great multitude of public testimonials and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil, or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tuberculous deposits in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases, Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole series of complaints that arise from impurity of the blood. Minute reports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be found the directions for its use, and some of the remarkable cures which it has made when all other remedies had failed to afford relief.

Those cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader may have access to some one who can speak to him of its benefits from personal experience. Scrofula depresses the vital energies and thus leaves its victims far more subject to disease and its fatal results than healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does greatly shorten, the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is superior to its rivals. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the most potent of Sarsaparilla in alterative power. ## The Leveler.

The King he reigns on a throne of gold,
Fenced round by his right divine;
The baron he sits in his castle old,
Drinking his ripe red wine:
But below, below, in his ragged coat,
The beggar he tethers a hungry note,
And the spinner is bound to his weary thread,
And the debtor lies down with an aching head.

So the world goes,
So the stream flows;
Yet there's a fellow, whom nobody knows,
Who maketh all free,
On land and sea,
And maketh the rich like the poor to flee.

The lady lies down in her warm white lawn,
And dreams of her painted pride;
The milk-maid sings to the wild-eyed dawn
Sad songs on the cold hill's side:
And the bishop smiles, as on high he sits,
On the scholar who writes and stars by fits;
And the girl who her nightly needle plies,
Looks out for the source of life and dies.

So the world goes,
So the stream flows;
Yet there's a fellow, whom nobody knows,
Who maketh all free,
By land and sea,
And forceth the rich and poor to flee.

I marry I don't want a man so small that I

to find him."

"Ah, Jenny," said a sympathizing friend
to a man who was just too late for the train,
"you did not run fast enough." "Yes, I did,"
said Jenny, "I ran fast enough, but I did not start soon enough."

Miscellaneous.

Home, when the Wife's Away.

BY HENRY WARD BEECHER.

My summer holiday was ended, but the family were to remain in the country till the frost opened the chestnut burrs and nipped
the boy's fingers. I concluded to board myself for a day or two. It was Saturday. I began to reflect upon the stores to be laid in for Sunday, and the method of preparing them. I have a little gas stove, invaluable for sickness, for pet suppers, and for returned gentlemen disposed to make their own tea.
With it I could boil and bake. To broil was beyond its skill—or at any rate beyond my knowledge of its capacity. So I rummaged the shops and alighted upon a gas-broiler, to be described hereafter.

I proceeded next to my grocer's, ordered six melons, as many tomatoes, and some bread. On reaching home, it occurred to me that butter was sometimes used with bread,
and that had been forgotten. I went back for it, and also procured half a dozen eggs.
On reflecting how the eggs were to be eaten,
pepper and salt came to my mind, and not a particle could I find in the well-cleaned castor. I looked into the store closet, behind the bottles, tore a little hole in every paper
package, found sage, summer savory, ketchup,
empty spice boxes, salt bags used for corks,
and nests of boxes of all sizes, fragrant of allspice, nutmegs, ginger, and cloves, but no salt—and no pepper likewise. After wasting time in order to save, back I go a third time to the grocer for salt and pepper. A few crackers, also, and a few herrings.

Next I reflected upon the poor elements of a solitary gentleman's dinner. Soup was out of the question. Roast, boiled, or fricassee was rejected. Fowls and fish were marked out. And only steak and mutton-chop remain. The quantity staggered me a little.
But as it was better to err on the opposite side to famine, I ordered two beefsteaks and five pounds of mutton chops. (Let the sequel be told.) As there was nobody in the house to receive them, I raced home to tend the door! I waited a full hour, and when at length the things came in, my patience had gone out.

Next I found that coffee must be bought,
then tea, (English breakfast tea, of course—
real Shou Shong—the only tea of thorough refinement, green tea being for un-learned drinkers.) Then I brought home in my own hands. At length my labors of preparation seemed over, and I began to contemplate results, when it flashed upon me that there was no milk in the house! This caused another journey. I hunted up a kitchen knife and fork, for every available instrument had been carried away, and the silver had been sent away, and was locked up in somebody's safe. Thus nothing was left for burglars, and nothing for me. In this round of investigation I gained an acquaintance with my own house, which forty years would not bestow. I found out all about the sideboard, the spoon drawer, its napkin drawer, its closet, and that secret drawer on each side, so cunningly arranged that no thing would suspect its presence until he found it out. Then the china closet was a perfect novelty, and held me in long investigation. I climbed to the top shelves of the store closet, saw fragments of dishes, various old acquaintances that disappeared long time ago. I searched the hall closet, and the kitchen closet, the closets between the two rooms full of drawers. I got down on my knees to look into lower closets tucked in under chests of drawers, and I mounted upon barrels to peer into high nooks and shelves, and in one case, the barrel playing me a mean trick, I came down both sooner and faster than I had intended.

But how shall I describe my experiences,
when all these preparations resulted in an actual meal? A long flexible tube was brought from the central gas fixture and connected with the pet stove. To boil the water for tea or coffee was easy. I had often done that. But I had forgotten how much tea should be put in for a morning. And the quantity was certainly enough! I watered, and watered, and was prodigal of milk and sugar, without being able to cover the bitterness of the draught. I noted the two principal faults of tea-making were too much tea, and too long steeping. It took me too long to drink, and longer to get over the effects of it,
and into sleep.

But this was all common-place, compared with my meat history. The broiler was very much like two iron pots soldered together, with a hollow handle attached. The gas came through the handle into the space between, and the lower section being perforated with a multitude of gas holes, when the gas
was let on the lower surface was covered with blue jets. The meat being placed on a tin dish, the blazing cover was placed on proper supports just over it, and shot its heat downwards. The juice, the odor and the fragrant fumes, attempting to escape, were driven back into the meat, and in my own case, such was the force of repression, that they were driven out of the plate and over to the dining-room carpet, (for all my exploits took place there.) Just as the meat began to sizzle and sputter, and while I was delightedly gazing at the process, the tube

slipped off the handle, the flame went out very suddenly over the meat, but not till the escaping gas from the liberated tube had caught fire and shot a flame across my hands,
that caused me to drop broiler, knife, and everything else, with astonishing celerity. I had no idea before how sorry I could be. The evil was soon repaired, but only to play off again the same trick, till I held the tube on to the boiler with one hand, and handled the meat with the other. I salted it, I peppered it, I turned it twice, the first time on to the floor, the next time on the dish, but with the same side up. The fork was a four-pronged.
I could not get hold only just so far as was needed to affect a disaster. At length I put out the gas, uncovered the meat, took both hands, and triumphantly reversed the obdurate meat.

It was with some pleasure, but not much pride, that I sat down to the repast. The bread was baker's bread. Of course it was dry, tough and tasteless. The tea I have spoken of. The meat was the grand dependence. It was serviceable. I could hardly cut it, and could not chew it. The tomatoes were good. The melons were not. But the whole dinner agreed with the theory of moderation in appetite, and the satisfaction which I lacked in eating I sought to gain by profitable meditations.

Facilis descensus est avari: sed revocare
gradum, etc. "It is easy to get dinner, but to wash up the things, this is the burden and toil." Virgil never spoke a truer word.

The water was hot. I found it out the moment I put my hand in, the same hand that the gas had flamed on. I reflected on the difference between dry heat and moist hot-ness.

I could not find the dish-cloth. The grease would not come off the plates. There was no soap. I rubbed with my hand, which only gave the grease a circular form on the plates.
At length I got a newspaper, and by vigorous rubbing got the ware into a presentable condition. The tea-cups were better served.
I found a napkin on the bottom of the spoon
drawer. It was a mercy!

There was no swill-bucket, and nowhere to throw the slops, and nobody that came for these superfluities in summer. The melon rinds, the tomato fragments, the inexorable
meat scraps, and the unmentionable sundries
of a man's cooking were heaped into the dishpan. There they stood. Another newspaper served to rub down the table. It was my last solitary meal. A week afterwards the fragments were found standing on the table
where I had left them; the lamb chops had been left and forgotten in the cupboard, and they had a way of making their presence and exigencies known. Indeed, my whole procedure in this case met with a disapprobation of the powers that be, nor can I say that they exactly suited me.

But I have now a profound sense of a man's dependence on woman for domestic comfort. Instead of thinking that housekeeping is easy—a mere nothing, I admire and revere the genius that conducts so intricate a campaign as must be every single day's housekeeping.

The Sanitary Commission.

Extract from the "Statement" of the Woman's Central Relief Association of New York.

The Commission was created by Government at the first outbreak of the rebellion for the purpose (among others) of economizing,
by systematic distribution, the spontaneous bounties of the people in aid of the national army. It possesses peculiar relations with all Government officials, and especially with the Medical Bureau. Its inspectors and agents are recognized everywhere throughout our lines as entitled to the confidence of Government, and as the only almoners of the people's bounty, who are officially bound to uphold military discipline, and who work in strict conformity to military law. They,
therefore, naturally enjoy peculiar facilities.
They obtain orders for transportation of supplies, even when it is necessary to refuse them to State agents, and to the representatives of local societies. They have been confidentially informed in advance at what point
a depot of supply could be most advantageously established for the benefit of the wounded in a battle about to be delivered, and have so acted on the information as to mitigate much suffering, and to save many lives.

It must be remembered that private charity,
patriotism and humanity, however munificent,
do far less for our soldiers than Government is doing every day. The work of State organizations and local societies, and that of the Sanitary Commission itself, is insignificant, compared with that of General Hammond, the wise and energetic head of the Army Medical Bureau. The main dependence of our soldiers for protection against disease, and for care when in hospital, is on the National Government, and its Medical Bureau.

The chief claims of the Sanitary Commission to public confidence and support is, that it works in strict subordination to that Department of Government, and seeks to supplement temporary and accidental deficiencies in its system of supply and relief. Government is the soldier's best friend. Next best is an agency that co-operates with Government, and helps it by applying private relief as far as possible through the machinery of Government.

Educational.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF SCHOOL
COMMITTEE OF SPRINGFIELD.

"Every necessary attention should be given
by teachers to the preservation of the health,
and, incidentally to the proper physical training of their pupils; by keeping the schoolroom neat and tidy, and regulating its temperature, and by proper ventilation, so that the pupils shall inhale only pure air.

Something too like military discipline, precision, and promptness may, to a certain extent, be adopted in the arrangements and exercises of our Common Schools, with much advantage to the schools themselves, and to the pupils individually; to the former in respect to their good order and systematic management, and to the latter, in the more efficient prosecution of their studies, and the promotion of habits, intellectual and physical,
of enduring value. But in regard to the propriety of introducing into our Common Schools (as recommended by some) a regular course of instruction and training in military tactics and gymnastic exercises, as a branch
of education, we do not think it practicable,
without operating to the exclusion of other studies which are deemed indispensable:

any in our opinion, does it come within the range of objects contemplated by our school law. And farther than this, we do not think it necessary for the obvious reason that the various sports and exercises in which the children and youth of our schools so generally and heartily engage, answer almost every purpose contemplated by the gymnasium,
in the promotion of health and vigor of constitution. If particular instruction is desired in either of these departments, it can readily be obtained at more suitable places than at the Common School.

Primary Schools in some respects form an exception in relation to this subject. The pupils of these schools, on account of their tender years, need greater indulgence, freedom and variety, in their school occupations, than those of more mature age. And in this view calisthenic and other like exercises may be introduced to a suitable extent with good effect, as well in relieving the monotony and wearisomeness of the ordinary routine of the school-room, as for promoting the health and improvement of the children in physical training. And for the same reason more time should be allowed them for pure amusement and recreation.

Abrupt but Suggestive.

A showily dressed woman, not bad looking, entered a handsome store along the promenade. She looked like the wife of a man who had suddenly made money by army contracts. Her 'harness' was good, but the weaver evidently was but lately accustomed to indulgence in finery. She entered the principal depot of a citizen, who among other proprietary articles, is the inventor of a celebrated hair tonic.

As she entered, proprietor was behind the counter, a matter rather rare for him, and with his hat on his head. He personally waited on her, asking with his best smile:
"What can I show you ma'am?"

"Why, your hair tonic,"
"Here it is, ma'am"—producing a bottle of the article.

"This is what makes hair grow, does it?"
"Yes ma'am; you'll find a little pamphlet inside the wrapper with many certificates
from people who have been bald."

"Humph! What's the price?"
"A dollar a bottle, ma'am—or six for five dollars."

Your certain it'll bring hair in?
It never fails unless the hair is destroyed
by disease!

Well, I've got a bald spot on the top of my head, I'd give five hundred dollars to have it covered again.

Proprietor said he had no doubt, the tonic
would accomplish the result and the lady ordered the half dozen to be sent to her house.

Proprietor took the address. As the lady turned to leave the store proprietor removed his hat, showing a head whose crown was innocent of covering. What is it, madam?

Why I swear if you ain't bald yourself,
Proprietor was about to rejoin, but the lady
continued:

I don't want that hair grease o' yours now.
I just believe you're a lying.

Proprietor attempted to explain, but the lady wouldn't listen. She couldn't be made to believe that a man could make hair grease
to restore people's hair when bald himself.
She left, advising him to grow a crop of hair
on his own head before undertaking to furnish a receipt to cover the heads of other folks.

The moral is, when bald people sell hair tonic they should keep their hats on.

Street Beggars.

"THE BEGGARS HAVE COME TO TOWN."

The description given in the old song seems fully realized now-a-days. There are multitudes of impostors going through this and other towns pretending to be "scalded sailors" or wounded soldiers, "poor widows," or something else, and making money by their "cunningly devised fables." It does not seem to break up their business when one of these rascals is arrested and several hundred dollars in gold or bank notes are found upon his person, as was the case the other day in Charlestown. The papers are full of warnings which should lead to the abandonment of the custom of giving money to wandering mendicants. Yet the evil continues unabated, and to a great extent,
traceable to the pernicious habit of indiscriminate alms-giving. When a straggler comes to your door hungry, feed him; if evidently suffering for want of clothing, give it, if you choose, a garment to cover his nakedness, but do not give money or food to be carried away, unless you have acquainted yourself with the real facts in the case.

It seems hard to close one's ears to a piteous story, but kindness to the honest poor compels us to refuse nine-tenths of those who are begging money from door to door. This is the result we have come to after years of observation and of labor among the poor of different cities.

Quincy has her street beggars as well
practised in lying as those in Boston or New York. Let two instances suffice. One female beggar told this story at our door: I live on
C— street, next door to the — church.
My father, whose name is — has a broken limb, and is visited by Dr. W. We are very poor, etc., etc. We took pains to look into this matter and found the story a tissue of falsehoods. The neighbors knew no such person in that locality. The physician had no patient of that name, nor any broken bones of any kind at that time under his surgical care. Another,
if possible, more touching story of suffering,
was repeated by another poor creature. Her name and residence were also given and a reference to Mrs. — near by. As she had "walked several miles," and her home
was a long way off, we offered to carry her home and carry with us some food for "her five little children." She appeared grateful, but before our horse was brought to the door,
she made an excuse, got out of the house and cleared! She found herself caught and best a hasty retreat. Calling on Mrs. — in whose family she had "formerly worked,"
we found that story a pure fabrication.

We could fill columns in narrating instances of imposition which we have discovered here and elsewhere. The worthy poor, almost without exception, will be found toiling and suffering in silence at home, while the dishonest and indolent are migratory in their habits. If we wish to discourage and dishearten the poorer class, we have only to continue the habit of indiscriminate alms-giving.
But if not, either investigate the facts or refer the applicant to some agent of those municipal or voluntary associations whose provi-
ence it is to relieve the wants of the worthy poor.

HARTFORD.

Little Trials.

It is the little trials of life which irritate the temper and destroy the equanimity of the mind; just as the continual falling water drops, one by one wears away the solid rocks.
Pride, sense of wrong, consciousness of the pity of others, may assist us to make great trials, and strengthen us to endure severe suffering; but the grace of God alone is sufficient for us, in the numberless petty annoyances which continually beset the path of daily life. Without it we are indeed weak to endure suffering, powerless to resist temptation.
The daily life of the Christian, may through watchfulness and prayer, be a silent abomination to the unconverted, and incontrovertible proof to the unbelieving, of the reality of his faith.

Retreat for Intemperate Women.

The necessity of making some special provision for the victims of intemperance, partly for the benefit of the individual and partly for that of the community, is beginning to attract general attention, and the subject in its various bearings has been brought before the Massachusetts State Board of Commissioners on Insanity, as among the matters deserving their serious consideration.

Aside from the question of establishing a public asylum for inebriates, the advantages of which would be more naturally confined to the middle and lower classes, it appears that there is as yet in New England no place
of refuge for intemperate women of good social position except the public and private lunatic asylums, which are unfitted, in the almost unanimous opinion of their superintendents, for the reception of such cases;
at many asylums, indeed, admittance being refused to them, alike in justice to the other patients and to the inebriates themselves.
The number of applications at the New York General Asylum at Binghamton far exceeds the possible capacity of the building, while the Washington Home in Boston, whose influence for good is already so extended, is for men alone.

In accordance with this apparent want, arrangements have been made by which there will be afforded to a limited number of self-indulgent women, whether addicted to opium or stimulants, the necessary elements for their cure; namely, voluntary seclusion from temptation, the strictest privacy if desired, a location in the immediate vicinity of the city and yet untroubled for purity of atmosphere and beauty of scenery. The house selected for the purpose is one constructed with especial reference to a comfortable residence during the winter; attendants will be provided of unexceptionable character, and but few patients will at present be received. For further information application may be made to the Secretary of the Commission, Dr. H. R.
Storer, at Hotel Pelham, Boston; to the other members of the Board being Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr. of Boston, and Dr. Alfred Hitchcock, of the Governor's Council, of Fitchburg.
It may be stated that the step now taken has the cordial approval and endorsement of His Excellency Governor Andrew, Judge Hoar of
the Supreme Court, Drs. James Jackson, Jacob Bigelow, John Jeffries, H. I. Rowditch, J. Mason Warren, Tyler of the Asylum at Somerville, Jarvis of Dorchester, and other
of our more prominent citizens.—Boston Medical and Surgical Journal.

Wounded and Killed.

It takes but little space in the columns of the papers, but oh, what long household stories and biographies are every one of these strange names we read over and forget—killed and wounded! Some eyes reads the name, to whom it is as dear as life, and some heart is struck or broken by the blow made by the name among the list. It is our Henry or our James, or our Thomas, that lies with his poor broken limbs at the hospital, or dead,
still, and with ghastly face, on the battle field.
Alas, for the eyes that read! alas for the hearts that feel!

He was my pretty boy, that I have sung to sleep so many times in my arms! says the poor mother, bowing in anguish that cannot be uttered. He was my brave, noble husband, the father of my little orphan children!
sobs the stricken wife. He was my darling brother, that I loved so, that I was proud of!
murmurs the sister, amid tears; and so the terrible stroke falls on the homes throughout the land. "Wounded and Killed!" Every name in that list is a lightning stroke to some heart, and breaks like thunder over some home, and falls a long, black shadow upon some hearthstone.

Natural if not Romantic.

A couple were engaged to be married recently in Chicago, and every preparation was made to celebrate the nuptials, but the bridgroom did not appear. A messenger, however, brought the news to the waiting
party that he had been drafted in New York, and could not leave. The reply of the young lady was worthy the occasion. With tear-drops glistening in her eyes, her heart ready to burst with grief, she turned to the company and said: "I don't keer a darn; there's plenty more men in the world any how!"

Badges of Honorable Distinction.

The secretary of war directs, for each battle in which every officer, non-commissioned officer and private of the invalid corps may have been engaged and borne an honorable part, a scarlet braid, one sixth of an inch wide, may be worn on the right arm, with a space of one sixth of an inch between each braid. This will become an honorable badge, showing the service the officer or soldier has performed, and will be as highly prized by the brave wearers as the ribbons and crosses so proudly worn by the veterans of European armies.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Dec. 5th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

FIRE. About ten o'clock, on Monday evening, the cry of fire was raised, and the bell of the Stone Temple, merily rang out the peal. On hastening to the spot, from whence the alarm originated, we found that the venerable frame, located at the corner of Temple and Hancock streets, and occupied by Messrs. Ditson & Crane, wholesale and retail grocers, T. G. Emerson, barber, on the first floor, and J. T. & W. V. Hayward, painters, on the second, was on fire, and our citizens exerting their utmost endeavors to encompass the flame and put a wet damper on it. The cause of the accident was traced to a defect in the chimney which occupied the centre of the building. It was fortunate that the discovery was made thus early; an hour later, and all there is left of this old relic would have disappeared in smoke; with a fair prospect of a serious and destructive conflagration, as the surrounding buildings were of like combustible materials. The destruction to property by water and wantonness was considerable. Mr. Emerson, in particular, has cause of complaint, for the ruthless manner in which some of his articles were handled and the mysterious disappearance of others. Messrs. Ditson & Crane were partially insured, at the Quincy Mutual—the others, unfortunately were not—and that the building was fully covered by insurance at an office in Dorchester. Mr. Emerson was not so badly scorched but that he resumed business the next morning. He has planted his pole in front of the premises recently improved by Dr. Clarke, on Temple street, where he will be happy to receive his friends, as on former occasions, until his return to his old quarters, which he expects will be within a few days. The Messrs. Hayward feel grateful for their miraculous escape.

The Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company have paid Messrs. Ditson & Crane the sum of $250, the sum estimated by them as their loss.

SAN ACCIDENT. We are sorry to learn that a bright, active, little boy, between four and five years of age, son of Capt. Charles L. Doe, of this town, accidentally fell backwards into a tub of hot water, while at play on Monday morning last, and was badly scalded. At the time of the accident his mother was in an adjoining room, and he, being so young, was unable to get out himself; thus remaining some seconds in the water—making his case more critical, but hopes are entertained of his recovery.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY. Once more we are sorry to announce that our esteemed citizen, John J. Glover Esq., of this town, has been the loser by the bold and daring acts of some rascals. It seems that on Thanksgiving evening, he drove his horse under the sheds, in the rear of the Town House, and went into the hall a few moments to witness the grand performance given by the Quincy Brass Band on that evening, not thinking of the grander one going on outside. The rogues were not only mean enough to take two robes—one an excellent wolf robe—but even took the blanket off the horse.

This makes the third time this person has been robbed within a short period. The first was on the evening of the last Presidential election; the second was on the night the President was inaugurated; and the last as above mentioned. The first two occasions, he was robbed from his own premises—his buildings being broken open, and a considerable amount, in harnesses, etc., was carried off.

THE OLD FOLKS CONCERT on Monday evening, at the Town Hall was well received by a large and fashionable audience. The fondest anticipations of the numerous company appeared to be fully realized. Grandeur Baldwin seemed highly gratified to see so many of the rising generation around him, and in his pleasing, patriarchal way, entertained them with scenes, rich in interesting reminiscences of our Puritan ancestors. So happy a beginning, we hope, will be an inducement for these talented minstrels to repeat their visit.

SKIN-DEEP BEAUTY. It is sad to observe what large numbers of their skin are using the noxious and worse than useless compounds called cosmetics. If any wish to have a pure, smooth, healthy skin, with all its pores healthily open, let them use Grace's celebrated Salve, which not only cures the skin when diseased, but seasonably treats and prevents it from becoming diseased. It removes tan and freckles from the complexion, cures chafing, and rubbed on the bald scalp induces a new growth of hair. It also cures flesh wounds, wens, burns, scalds, salt-rheum, ulcers, and all eruptive diseases. 25 cents per box. See advertisement in another column.

Nearly eighteen hundred men are employed at the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard.

Cotton continues to arrive at Memphis, and prices are falling.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Dec. 3, 1863.

THE SITUATION.

The actual position of our armies in Georgia and Virginia is at the present moment rather indistinct, but in a few days the mist will clear up and we shall have more definite accounts. In the mean time there is a strong excitement in the public mind as to the movements of Generals Meade and Grant; for if they succeed in their present campaigns as laid out in the programme the rebellion is at an end. General Grant's brilliant achievements at Chattanooga, whipping and driving Bragg from his strongholds, is officially known and therefore must be true. War meetings continue to be held in various parts of our State. Men of all political shades taking an active part in them. Most hopeful views are taken of the progress of our armies and of the recent magnificent victories. It is evident that the enemy is becoming exhausted, and that we soon shall see the beginning of the end, and the young men are eloquently urged to take their part, by recruiting, in the glorious deeds that are now being performed. While the people of the South are becoming divided on the war, the citizens of the loyal States are more united than ever in the support of their republican government, and with a firm purpose to restore the authority of the flag throughout the land.

CONGRESS.

The new Congress will meet at Washington on Monday. No difficulty is apprehended in the organization of the House, and a strong Union man will be elected Speaker. The President's Message on Wednesday will be regarded with great interest by the American people as foreshadowing the future policy of the administration in bringing the war to a successful close. It is the Session that precedes the Presidential election of November next, and the action of Congress during the coming winter, and spring will have an important bearing on the result of the national election.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Boston holds its annual election for city officers on the 14th instant. Mayor Lincoln is re-nominated with good prospects of success, though there are some who find fault with him. Thomas P. Rice Esq. a well-known citizen of Boston, and highly respected, has been put in nomination for Mayor by the Democratic party, but as yet has not accepted the nomination. The election will hardly turn on party lines as most of the issues are of a local character. Probably on the subject of sustaining the Federal government in putting down the rebellion and punishing all traitors to our glorious flag both candidates are of the same opinion.

LOCALS.—THE GREAT PACIFIC RAILROAD. Winter having made its debut with very mild weather, business in all branches of a domestic character continues active. The foreign commerce of Boston is not promising, growing less every month. Hereafter the prosperity of the New England States will be based on our inland and foreign commerce. A portion of the immense region between the Mississippi River and Pacific Ocean will soon be accessible to American enterprise; as the Pacific Railroad between Leavenworth in Kansas, to the borders of California, is now building at the rate of one mile a day. The immense track when completed from St. Louis to the borders of California, will be over two thousand miles in length, running on a parallel to about thirty-eight degrees north latitude, through Missouri, Kansas and Utah Territory.

There is good reason to believe that Utah will be found as rich in mineral resources as California, with which it is connected westwardly. A little drummer, Willie Johnston, thirteen years old, of St. Johnsbury, a drummer boy in company D, third Vermont Regiment, has received a medal for his heroic conduct in the seven days' fight before Richmond. On the retreat, when strong men threw away their guns, knapsacks and blankets that they might have less weight to carry, this little fellow kept his drum, and brought it in safety to Harrison's Landing, where he led the honor of drumming for division parade, being the only drummer who brought his drum from the field. When these facts were reported to the War Department by the division commander, Willie was presented with the star medal of honor by Secretary Stanton in person. Young Johnston's father is a member of the third regiment.

AMERICAN CRINOLINE. The manufacture of crinoline has attained such perfection in this country, that according to the New York Post, it has the preference all over the world. "American Crinoline" is the starting inscription in shop windows wherever you go in England. The manufacture of American Crinoline derives its success from the rapid and perfect manner in which the thread is wound around the slender bar of steel composing its principal material, and until foreign nations discover the secret of the process, the American article will continue to monopolize the market.

SKIN-DEEP BEAUTY. It is sad to observe what large numbers of their skin are using the noxious and worse than useless compounds called cosmetics. If any wish to have a pure, smooth, healthy skin, with all its pores healthily open, let them use Grace's celebrated Salve, which not only cures the skin when diseased, but seasonably treats and prevents it from becoming diseased. It removes tan and freckles from the complexion, cures chafing, and rubbed on the bald scalp induces a new growth of hair. It also cures flesh wounds, wens, burns, scalds, salt-rheum, ulcers, and all eruptive diseases. 25 cents per box. See advertisement in another column.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

A New York baker made a loaf of bread eleven feet long, twenty-two inches wide and ten inches thick, as a Thanksgiving present for a charitable institution for children. It comprised a whole barrel of flour, and weighed 290 pounds. The children considered it a "big thing."

San Francisco now ranks as the third city of the United States in the amount of duties paid upon imports. Its population is now near 103,000. The increase of children for the past year has been about 6000. The city has eighty private schools, attended by nearly 6000 pupils; 10,500 children attend the public and private schools.

A bale of cotton recently received by William Pollock, of South Adams, contained a stick of yellow pine weighing one hundred and thirty-six pounds, which at ninety cents per pound cost $163.40.

A carriage just constructed at Bridgeport, (Ct.) for General Sickles, is built in the campaigning style of Napoleon, and cost $2000.

Dr. Windship, "the strong man," now lifts daily a dead weight of twenty-six hundred pounds, and so says he means to get up to three thousand pounds, and stop there.

It is said that the rebels have 2,000,000 bales of cotton accumulated at Atlanta, Ga.

The editors of the Scientific American have received from California a piece of wood from a tree thirty feet in diameter, the annual rings upon which indicate the age of the tree to be 6,300 years.

Two marriage ceremonies were performed on a railroad train in Missouri the other day by a minister who then for the first time in his life took a ride in the cars.

There is a coal mine in England nineteen hundred feet in depth—the deepest one in the world.

A Berlin professor finds that Europe contains 272,000,000 of inhabitants. Asia 720,000,000. Africa 89,000,000. America 200,000,000. and Polynesia 2,000,000—total 1,283,000,000. Of this little crowd, about 32,000,000 die in each year, which is 7,761 a day, or 61 per minute.

A theatre is in full operation at St. Augustine, Florida. It was established by the 48th New York regiment while stationed at that point, and has since been carried on by the 24th Massachusetts. The building will seat some seven hundred persons, and the entertainments are said to be very popular with the towns people.

The first supply of notes for the National Banks will be distributed in a few days.

Coal at Hawley, Pa., retails for $3 per ton. The statue of Freedom, which is to be put above the great dome of the Capitol, weighs 15,000 pounds, and has now cost from $25,000 to $30,000.

The Government recently seized two millions of bushels of coal at Cincinnati, for the gunboats and transport.

In Cohasset, at the Methodist Episcopal Church, on the 24th ult., by Rev. B. L. Sayer, Mr. Samuel B. Burrell, of Weymouth, to Miss Flora A. Simpson, of North Cohasset, daughter of Warren Simpson Esq.

The above notice was accompanied with a handsome slice of the bridal cake, upon which Cupid sat enthroned mid a canopy of sweets. An emblem, we presume, of all unalloyed happiness. That this may be their lot is our sincere wish.

AMERICAN ORNAMENT. This article, for scalds, burns, cuts, chapped hands, tumors, and the thousand and one ails which human nature is heir to, which we had occasion to notice some time since, again claims our attention, from the circumstance that the manufacturer, Mr. Monk, is making every effort to meet the increased demand, and bring it more generally before the public. It may soon be had at the principal places of business in the County, accompanied with full directions for use, and a list of complaints for which it is peculiarly adapted.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK. The Dec. number of this excellent magazine—a Repository of the ladies for everything that is useful, entertaining and instructive, has been received. It is the closing number of the volume, and the attractions in the literary and pictorial departments for 1864, are we promised, will exceed those of any former year. We had thought Mr. Godey had arrived at the Ne plus ultra in such matters, but he knows his resources, and the public, therefore, may rest satisfied of their fulfillment. Now is the time to renew your subscriptions and form clubs.

A CARD. The Subscriber would return thanks to the Fire Department and citizens of Quincy for their noble exertions in saving his property from the destructive element on Monday evening last. The ready and willing acts of kindness on that occasion will longer be remembered by the subscriber, he hopes, than the evil deeds of those who pocketed his best razors, scissors, hair-oil, perfumery, &c., and have forgotten to return the same.

AND

NEW YEARS.

A BEAUTIFUL and appropriate article for
a HOLIDAY GIFT, to Old or Young, is
The Craig Microscope!
Magnifies 100 Diameters or 10,000 Times.

Although of a high mag-
nifying power, this Microscope is so simple that
a child can use it—for it
requires no focal adjust-
ment; therefore it neither
fatigues the eye, nor
overtaxes the patience, like
other Microscopes.

The Microscope tells
me that in the leaves of
every forest, and in the
flowers of every garden,
and in waters of every
rivulet, there are worlds
teeming with life, and
numberless as the glories
of the firmament. "Chal-
mure."

Parents who wish to
instruct and benefit their
children as well as interest and amuse them, will here find the means of
doing so.

The popularity of this instrument is constantly
on the increase. Its perfectness as a microscope, its power and its cheapness, are certainly
wonderful.

This Microscope, in brass, is sent by mail,
postage paid, for $2.25; or with 6 beautiful mounted Objects for $3; or with 24 diaphs for $5; or with 48 objects for $8—postage paid. In hard rubber for 50 cents in addition to the above
prices. MOUNTED OBJECTS, any number desired—from half a dozen to four dozen different
objects—can be had at the rate of $1.50 a dozen.

Also we have an interesting variety of Micro-
scopic PHOTOGRAPHS, among them is the Lord's Prayer, containing 268 letters on a space
less than half the size of a Pin's head, but in the Microscope can be read distinct. The pictures are beautifully mounted on glass slides, and will be
sent by mail on receipt of fifty cents each.

Illustrated Circulars, with lists of Mounted Objects and Microscopic Photographs, will be sent on application.

Poetry.

Pew Talk and Church Scandal.

That tall young fellow's here to-day!
I wonder what's his name?
His eyes were fixed upon our pew—
Do look at Sally Dame.

Who is that lady dressed in green?
It can't be Mrs. Leach;
There's Mr. Jones with Deacon Giles
I wonder if he'll preach.

Lead me your fan, it is so warm,
We both will sit to prayers;
Mourning becomes the widow Ames—
How Mary's bonnet flares.

Do look at Nancy Sloper's veil:
It's full a breadth too wide;
I wonder if Susanah Ayres,
Appears to-day as bride?

Lord! what a voice Jane Rice has got!
Oh, how that organ roars;
I'm glad we've left the singers' seats—
How hard Miss Johnson snores.

What ugly shawls are those in front?
Did you observe Ann Wild?
Her new straw bonnet's trimmed with black,
I guess she's lost a child.

I'm half asleep—that Mr. Jones!
His sermons are so long;
This afternoon we'll stay at home,
And practice that new song.

Grafted into the Army.

Our Charlie has gone for to live in a tent,
They have grafted him into the army;
He finally pucker'd up courage and went,
When they grafted him into the army,
I told them the child was too young—also!
At the captain's forequarters they said he'd pass,
They'd train him up well in the infantry class,
So they grafted him into the army.

O, Charlie, farewell, your brothers fell Away down in Alabama;
I hoped they'd spare a lone widder's heir,
But they grafted him into the army.

Drest up in his uniform—dear little chap,
They grafted him into the army;
It seems but a day since he sat in my lap,
But they grafted him into the army;

And these are the trousers he used to wear,
Them very same buttons, the patch and the tear,
But Uncle Sam gave him a brand new pair,
When they grafted him into the army.

O, Charlie, farewell, etc.
They have grafted him into the army;
A picket beside the contented field,
They have grafted him into the army.

He looks kinder sickish, begins to cry,
A big volun-teer standing right in his eye,
O, what if the ducky should up and die,
Now they've grafted him into the army?

O, Charlie, farewell, etc.
Love and Magnanimity.

I'm in love with a lady, who is fairer than May-day,
But December storms are not colder;
An rain'd forever unless I can have her,
And so have I forty times to-day.

She declines, I'm declining, none pities my pining,
Though grown so amazingly small, Sir,
That I am at most, but the shade of a ghost,
Quintessence of nothing at all, Sir!

Yet the flint-hearted fair says she should not care,
If I were as dead as a smothered herring;
With a heart like a feather she would go any weather,
And dance all the way to my burying.

Well, since I can't please her no longer I'll tear her,
But look out for some other pretty one,
Who, if not quite so killing, is a little more wing-

ing
To condescend kindly to pity one.

Anecdotes.

A clergyman was once sent for in the middle of the night by one of the ladies of his congregation.

Well, my good woman, said he, so you are very ill, and require the consolations of religion? What can I do for you?

No, replied the old lady; I am only nervous and can't sleep.

How can I help you? asked the parson.

O, sir, you always put me to sleep so nicely when I go to church, that I thought if you would only preach a little for me!

The parson made tracks.

Mamma, Lucy says this is my birthday, said a sunny-faced little boy a few mornings since.

Yes, Dicky, you are seven years old, replied the mother.

Will the stores keep open to-day, Mamma? Yes, my son, but school don't!

Magnifies 100 Diameters or 10,000 Times.

Although of a high magnifying power, this Microscope is so simple that a child can use it—for it requires no focal adjustment; therefore it neither fatigues the eye, nor weakens the patience, like other Microscopes.

The Microscope tells me that in the leaves of every forest, and in the flowers of every garden, and in the waters of every rivulet, there are worlds teeming with life, and numberless as the glories of the firmament.

Parents who wish to instruct and benefit their children as well as interest them, will here find the means of doing so.

The popularity of this Instrument is constantly on the increase. Its perfectness as a microscope, its power and its cheapness, are all attested.

This Microscope, in brass, is sent by mail, postage paid, for $2.25; or with 6 beautiful mounted Objects for $3; or with 24 objects for $5; or with 48 objects for $8—postage paid. In hard rubber for 50 cents in addition to the above prices.

Also we have an interesting variety of Microscopic Photographs, among them is the Lord's Prayer, containing 268 letters on a space less than half the size of a Pin's head, but in the Microscope can be read distinctly. These are beautifully mounted on glass slides, and will be sent by mail on receipt of fifty cents each.

Illustrated Circulars, with lists of Mounted Objects and Microscopic Photographs, will be sent on application.

DENTISTRY.

THE undersigned have associated themselves in the practice of Dental Surgery, at the old office of Dr. S. Stocking, No. 19 Tremont Row. We are prepared to do the best of work in every department of our profession, and on the most reasonable terms. We shall give special attention to filling Decayed Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth on gold and silver, we shall have on hand a large assortment of artificial teeth, and will be prepared to make a mode of adapting artificial teeth to the mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base being less expensive than gold and silver, brings the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We flatter ourselves that an experience of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer therefor. The use of Ether will be continued in our practice, and administered in the most judicious and scientific manner.

Heaven.

O, heaven is nearer than mortals think,
When they look with a trembling dread
At the misty future that stretches on
From the silent home of the dead.

'Tis no lone isle in a boundless main,
Nor brilliant but distant shore,
Where the lovely ones who are called away
Must go to return no more.

No, heaven is near us; the mighty veil
Of mortality blinds the eye,
That we cannot see the angel bands
On the shores of eternity.

Yet oft in the hours of holy thought,
To the thrifty soul is given
The power to pierce through the mist of sense
To the beautiful scenes of heaven.

Then very near seem its pearly gates,
And sweet its harpings fall,
Till the soul is restless to soar away,
And longs for the angel-call.

I know, when the silver cord is loosed,
When the veil is rent away,
Not long and dark shall the passage be
To the realms of endless day.

The eye that shuts in a dying hour
Will open the next in bliss;
The welcome will sound in a heavenly world,
Ere the farewell is hushed in this.

We pass from the clasp of mourning friends
To the arms of the loved and lost,
And those smiling faces will greet us then,
Which here we have valued most.

Scrap.

GINGERBREAD NUTS. One pound of flour;
rub into it a quarter pound of butter, quarter pound of white powdered sugar, one ounce of grated ginger, and the peel of a lemon. Bake in a slow oven.

LEMON PUDDING. The yolks of four eggs, four ounces of white sugar, the grated rind
and juice of a lemon, and four ounces of melted butter. Line a shallow dish with crust, and bake quickly.

NOT DECIDED. At a debating society, not long ago, the subject was—"Which is the sweeter production—a girl or a strawberry?" After continuing the discussion for two nights, the meeting finally adjourned
without coming to a conclusion—the old ones going for the strawberries, and the young ones for the girls.

Speak gently! Kind words and gentle looks cost neither silver nor gold; yet, gentle
as they are, they are of inestimable value.
Like some sweet note of heavenly music,
they always find a response in our hearts—
always touch some chord that will awaken
the angel host, even her wings may now be folded in the dust.

A physician gives very satisfactory accounts for the fact that mittens are warmer than gloves, for the same reason that four children
would be warmer in one bed than sleeping alone. It is the superabundance of color in the "mittens" that makes a young man's face
and ears so red when a young lady says no.

Benevolence does not measure its charities too nicely. The clouds never send down to ask the grass and plants below how much they need; they rain for the relief of their own full bosoms.

It is wiser to be always listening to profit
by what we hear, than to be always speaking to be heard, for he who never hears and never thinks must bring his knowledge to an end.

Nature has hid gold beneath the earth, as unworthy to be seen; silver has she placed where it is trampled under foot; means she not by this to inform us that gold is unworthy of our regard—that silver is beneath our notice?

Love, in a tiny form, may enter into the heart through a small aperture, and after it gets in, grow so big on what it feeds, that it can never squeeze out again.

A man is circumscribed in all his ways by God's providence, just as he is in a ship; for though he may walk freely upon the decks,
he must go whither the ship bears him.

The wife makes the home and home makes
the man.

Miscellaneous.

Miriam Grant.

I cannot meet you as a stranger, Miriam.
Let the past be forgotten, and tell me, how have you been these long years?

Well and happy.
I am very glad to hear you say that; but
as for me, I am a lonely old bachelor.

What! are you not married yet, Richard?
No; nor do I think I ever shall be. I made up my mind to that four years ago.

She remembers vividly and with some sorrow, the time to which he alludes. She has not forgotten the sudden faintness that came upon her, the morning after her wedding,

when she read Richard Dean's name in the list of passengers who had sailed that day for South America, and she knew full well who was the cause of his going.

Not but what she loved him. Oh! no;
to be the wife of Richard Dean had been the one hope of her life. Looking up to him,
now, as he stands by her side brings back
the scene of four years ago as if it were but yesterday, when walking on the beach, with the great ocean sobbing and moaning at their feet—Richard Dean had told her of his love, and what a great joy it would be to him if she would be his wife.

She was too happy to answer at first; but when he bent over her and looked in her face to see if he could read his answer there,
and drew her fondly to him, she whispered, I love you Richard.

They sat there a long time after that; and he pictured to her the happy home that should surely be hers; and how fondly he would cherish her through all the years that God should give them to live together. His voice had a low, musical tone as he said this; and it sounded as sweet to her ear as the musical anthem of the sea.

And she remembers what an unusual pal-lor was on the face of her invalid sister May,
as she entered her room that night, and,
sinking on a low ottoman at her feet, says, Miriam, do you love Richard Dean? She clasped her arms around the neck of her sister.

Oh, May.
There, there! I need not have asked you;
I might have known you did.

Oh! Miriam, it will kill me.
Why, May, darling, what is the matter?
Do you not think it is worthy of me?

Oh! not that, Miriam! there, let me hide
my face in your lap, and I will tell you. I, too, love Richard; I have loved him for many years, and it is this that is wearing my life
out, for he does not love me; it is you, Miriam,
he would have for his wife; but promise me you will never marry him. Oh! how could you, knowing it would be my death blow; for it will surely enshroud.

Even now there comes a slight shadow
over her at the recollection of that hour.

How the love for Richard kept pleading
in her heart; and how her sister's voice kept pleading: Promise me! promise me!

Oh! I cannot, May, she said, at last, or almost groaned, for there was a terrible struggle going on in her heart.

The pale face of May grew even more pallid; and the thin white hands that grasped hers so nervously, in her excitement loosened
their hold, and with a low cry, she sank fainting to the floor.

Then there arose in Miriam's heart a prayer for strength; and when at last the half lifeless girl came slowly back to consciousness,
she whispered to her, I promise May! but the words pierced her heart like a sharp sword. And so it was she accepted the hand of Nicholas Grant. But first she told Richard Dean that she could never be his wife;
and when he urged her to tell him the reason,
the happiness of her sister overpowered usiden delicacy—and she told him all. And then, when every word seemed to palsy her tongue, entreated him to make her his wife.

Never! Miriam. I do not, nor cannot love your sister.

But for my sake, then, Richard, if not for her; do it for my sake!

Oh! Miriam, it will be a dreadful sacrifice.
But you will, Richard; say that you will.
Yes!

Then she hastened to gladden the heart of May by telling her she should be Richard's wife. But she was too late; for May had heard all; heard from his own lips that he did not love her. It was too much for the poor girl in her feeble state of health, she dragged herself to her chamber, there to die.

And when Miriam came in, she raised herself by a feeble effort, and there was a wild look in her eyes as she said, You need not tell me, Miriam; I heard it all; Richard does not love me. I knew it before; but somehow, there has always been a hope in my heart that he would some time. But it is all gone now; the hope, I mean, and you may take back the promise, Miriam, for I am dying.

Oh! May, you must not die: live to be Richard's wife, for I cannot; my hand is promised to another. And so May died.

The tears are coming into Miriam Grant's eyes now, just as they did then; and Richard, noticing her emotion, leads her away
from the crowded rooms.

It grieves me to see those tears, Miriam!
and he closed the little, soft white hand that was resting on his arm with all a lover's tenderness.

Please don't Richard!
Pardon me, Miriam; I had forgotten for the moment that you were Mrs. Nicholas Grant. Do you know I start for Europe tomorrow?

Is it possible? Then I shall not see you again? There was a touch of sadness in the tone.

No! I suppose not.
Your stay is very short, Richard?

Yes. I have no business to keep me.
But you have friends!

I trust I have a friend whom I Yes; and one that will ways be your friend.

Thank you for this sweet assurance. I once thought—but there I am forgetting myself again.

CHAPTER II.

Time passed, and Miriam Grant was a widow. She loved her husband; noble as good, always so tender with her, how could she help it? and her terrible grief at his death was no mockery, although a good many envious tongues whispered that she only married Nicholas Grant for his wealth. People thought him wealthy; and so he had been; but it was the time of the great crisis
and old established houses were falling one after another, and among them was Nicholas Grant's.

This no doubt hastened his death for he could not tell the sad news to his young wife;
and so, after the sad had been covered over him, and she had come back, weary and broken-hearted, to her splendid home, strangers told her it must be sold to pay creditors, and that she was left penniless. But one week longer would she have a home there,
and in the meantime she must seek employment.

I am every sorry for you, dear, and the fashionable Mrs. Reeves lifted her cambric handkerchief to her eyes to wipe away an imaginary tear.

Mrs. Reeves had been her warmest friend
in her days of prosperity.

I did not know but you might want a music-teacher for Emily; I am trying to get a class. And Miriam's lips quivered in spite of herself, for it was something so strange and disagreeable to her to think of earning her own living, and no one to care for her,
no one to love her.

I do not think I shall let Emily take lessons this year; she is too delicate. But why don't you sew for a living?

I am not used to sewing, madam; I have no taste that way; I never could make a living by needle. Good morning. And Miriam Grant, drawing the black veil over her pale face, joins once more the busy throng that are threading the streets of the great city.

The steamer from California had just arrived. Pushing his way among the crowd of passengers, porters and hackmen, was a fine-
looking gentleman, about forty years old.

This way, sir, said a hackman, and as the traveller settled himself back in the carriage,
he wondered if his little pet niece, as he always called her, would recognize him. Ten years make great changes; but my little Miriam, I should know her among a thousand.
Yet, when, a moment after he was shown
into the splendid reception-room, and Miriam Grant entered, looking so pale and careworn, he would scarcely have known her;
but she sprang forward with a glad cry, and
he clasped her in his arms.

Miriam, my little Miriam what is the meaning of this? and he touched her sable robes lightly.

Oh! uncle John, I am a widow now.
Poor child! you have suffered so much,
and he stroked the soft brown hair tenderly.

And so you are going to earn your own living Miriam?

He said this after she told him of her troubles and misfortune.

Yes, Uncle John; I must do something.
We'll see about that; we'll see.

And Miriam did see, when, a day or two
after, he gave her a deed of the house.

Oh! Uncle John! And Miriam's arms were around his neck and her eyes were filled with tears; but not of sorrow as they had been so much of late—but joy—joy such as only they can tell who have been about to be cast out in the cold world, friendless and penniless, suddenly find themselves in possession of a good home and a true friend.

We will travel for a while, Miriam. I must see the roses coming back to your cheek
once more.

They had been in Paris but a day, when a visitor was announced, and Richard Dean entered.

At last! he whispered, as he clasped the lovely form of Miriam Grant to his bosom. I have waited long and patiently, darling; and you will be mine now—mine own.

There beat not two happier hearts that night, than those of Richard Dean, and Miriam Grant; and Uncle John looked on and smiled, for he was happy too.

The Sunset of Life.

When, toward the close of some long summer day, we come suddenly, and, as we think,
before his time, upon the broad sun, 'sinking down in his tranquility' into the unclouded west, we cannot keep our eyes from the great spectacle; and when he is gone, the shadow of him haunts our sight; we see everywhere,
upon the spotless heaven, upon the distant mountains, upon the fields, and upon the road
at our feet, that dim, strange, changeable
image; and if our eyes shut, to recover themselves, we still find in them, like a dying flame, or like a gleam in a dark place, the unmistakable phantom of the mighty orb that has set; and were we to sit down, as we have often done, and try to record by pencil or by pen our impression of that supreme hour, still would it be there. We must have patience with our eye, it would not tell the impression go; that spot on which the radiant disk was impressed is insensible to all other outward things for a time; its best relief is, to let the wander vaguely over earth and sky, and repose itself on the mist, snowy
So it when a great, good, and beloved man
departs, it may be suddenly, and to us,
who know not the times and the seasons, too soon. We gaze eagerly at his last hours, and when he is gone, never to rise again on
our sight, we see his image wherever we go,
and in whatever we are engaged; and if we try to record a word our wonder, our sorrow, and our affection, we cannot see to do it, for the "idea" of his life is forever
coming into our "study of imagination," into all our thoughts, and we can do little else
than let our mind, in a wise passiveness, hush itself to rest.

New Style.

An old gentleman, whose father attended
more to teaching his son the method of accumulating riches than knowledge, lived some time since in a town in one of the Eastern States. From application and industry, he had amassed a property of about twenty thousand dollars; although not able to either read or write, he never hired a clerk, but had all ways been in the habit of keeping his own books. He had invented some new characters for the purpose of conveying his ideas to himself and others; they were formed as nearly similar to the shape of the article sold as the nature of the circumstances would admit.

One day a customer of his called on him for the purpose of settling his account, the book of hieroglyphics was handed down, and our merchant commenced with "such a time you had a gallon of rum, and such a time a pound of tea—such a time a gallon of molasses, and such a time a cheese." Stop there, says the customer; I never had a cheese from you or any other person—I make my own cheese.

You certainly must have had it, said the merchant, "it is down in my book." The other denied ever buying such an article. After a sufficient number of pros and cons, upon recollection, he informed him that he believed he had purchased a grindstone about that time. "It is the very thing," said the merchant, "and I must have forgotten to cut the hole in the middle."

"Blue" White Letter Paper.

The practice of blueing the paper pulp had its origin in a singularly accidental circumstance, which not merely as an historical fact, but as forming an amusing anecdote, is perhaps worth mentioning. It occurred about the year 1790, at a paper-mill belonging to Mr. Buttonshaw, whose wife on the occasion in question, was superintending the washing of some linen, when accidentally she dropped her bag of powdered blue into the midst of some pulp, in a forward state of preparation, and so great was the fear entertained for
the mischief she had done, seeing the blue rapidly amalgamating with the pulp
that allusion to it was studiously avoided;
until on Mr. Buttonshaw's inquiring in great astonishment what it was that had imparted
the peculiar color to the pulp, his wife seeing that no great damage had been done, took courage, and at once disclosed
the secret; for which she was afterwards rewarded in a remarkable manner by her husband, who being naturally pleased with an advance of so much as four shillings per bundle, upon submitting the "improved"
make to the London market, immediately presented a costly scarlet cloak (somewhat more congenial to taste in those days, it is presumed, than it would be now) with much satisfaction to the sharer of his joys.

Growing at the Girls.

Some man who certainly feels like a cur,
thus growls about husbandry—"Young ladies are generally supposed to be, more or less, on the lookout for husbands. Nice dresses and pretty bonnets; music and dancing, and the polite accomplishments, in societies, where these are cultivated, and very much of what is called society, are supposed to have this object in view. But the supply of good husbands is not equal to the demand.

We see thousands of men around us whose married state is a constant marvel to us. We cannot conceive how they ever induced any woman to have them. The standard of hus-bandly virtues requires to be raised, and the market better supplied. Marriage, which develops all that is lovely in woman sometimes brings out the worst qualities in men.

Many a woman at forty exceeds the promise of her girlhood; but how few are the men who do not fall very far short of the hopes of youth."

Keeping a Diary.

If a man keeps no diary, the path crumbles away behind him as his feet leave it; and days gone by are but little more than a blank, broken by a few distorted shadows.

His life is all confined within the limits of to-day. Who does not know how imperfect
a thing memory is? It not merely forgets—it misleads. Things in memory do not merely fade away, preserving as they fade, their own
change their aspect, they change their place;
they turn to something quite different from the fact. In the picture of the past, which memory, unaided by any written record, sets
before us, the perspective is entirely wrong.

How capriciously some events seem, quite recent, which the diary shows are really far away; and how unaccountably many things
look far away, which in truth, are not left many weeks behind us. A man might almost as well not have lived at all, as entirely to forget that he lived, or entirely forget what he did on these departed days. But I think that almost every person would feel
a great interest in looking back, day by day,
upon what he did and thought upon that day
twelve months, that day three or five years,
the trouble of writing the diary is very small.

A few lines, a few words, written at the time,
suffice, when you look at them, to bring all (what the Yankees call) the surroundings of that season before you. Many little things come up again, which you know quite well
you never would have thought of again, but for your glance at those words, and still which you feel you would be sorry to have forgotten. There must be a richness about the life of a person who keeps a diary, unknown to other men. And a million more little bits and ties must bind him to the members of his family circle, and to all among whom he lives. Life, to him, looking back, is not a bare line, stringing together
his personal history; it is surrounded, intertwined, entangled with thousands and thousands of slight incidents, which give it beauty, kindliness, reality. Some folks' life is like an oak walking-stick, straight and varnished;
useful, but hard and bare. Other men's life (and such may yours sometime, kindly reader, ever be,) is like that oak when it was not a stick, but a branch, and waved, leaf-enveloped, and with lots of little things growing out of it, upon the summer tree. And yet more precious than the power of the diary to call up again a host of little circumstances and facts, is its power to bring back the indescribable, but keenly-felt atmosphere of those departed days. The old times come over
you. It is not merely a collection, an aggregate of facts, that comes back; it is something far more excellent than that—it is the soul of days long ago; it is the clear Auld lang syne itself! The perfume of hawthorn hedges is there; the breath of breezes
that fanned our gray hair when it made sunny
curls, often smoothed down by the hands
that are gone; the sunshine on the grass
where these old fingers made daisy-chains;
and snatches of music, compared with which anything you hear at the opera, is extremely poor. Therefore keep your diary, my friend.

Sleep.

It is a delicious moment certainly, that of being well nestled in bed, and feeling that you shall drop gently to sleep. The good is to come—not past; the limbs have just been tired enough to render the remaining in one posture delightful; the labor of the day is done. A gentle failure of the perceptions comes creeping over one; the spirit of consciousness disengages itself more and more with slow and hushing degrees; like a mother
detaching her hand from that of her sleeping
child; the mind seems to have a balmy lid closing over it, like the eye; 'tis closing—'tis closing—'tis closed. The mysterious spirit has gone to take its airy rounds.—Leigh Hunt.

THE MALAPERT.

The Malapert! You know not what I mean.
Reader, this is an age of improvement; we must live, and learn. Investigate, and you will find the subject about which I shall strive to give you a few ideas, is, in plain
"Saxon" language—"The Saucy."

In order to fully understand what we mean
by "Saucy," perhaps we should first inquire,
"Of what do good manners consist?"

A pleasant word here and there. A helping hand always ready to assist the unfortunate. A kindly, "No, I thank you," and "If you please," in return to the polite query of a friend, and respect for the aged.

These, and many other rules we find laid down in the book of etiquette, to be followed
for our mutual culture.

Would you not call a non-observer of these somewhat malapert?

What can be more discouraging to the poor man who has met with reverse, and seeks help from a more prosperous neighbor, to meet with the reply, "You should have looked out for number one, I do!" Surely, if we might not consider such a reply saucy, we might reasonably call it twin-aster—insolent.

No illustrations of the other examples are necessary, we are perfectly well aware that the old school politeness is the true one.

How many children we daily meet whose impudence is so marked that we turn away in fault. It is this waywardness, it is, not their
I have heard many teachers remark of certain scholars, "That boy shows his bringing up."

What did they mean?
Simply this. He is a petted child, allowed to do as he pleases at home; his sins winked at or wilfully passed over. Who wonders that he is saucy at school!

Such children now a days are called gentlemen and ladies! Young America is smarting! They are not saucy, only very spirited for their age.

'As the twig is bent, so is the tree inclined.'

The young person's character is modelled both by parent and teacher—but more especially the former. Should we not then pay great homage to those parents who bring up their children to follow the narrow path?

Said one to me a few days ago, "Some people have a very graceful way of being saucy, they speak so prettily that we think not to correct them, but pass it over with a laugh." And is it not too often true? I fear
so. What can be done to remedy it? Yes, we all plainly see, this is a malady not without cure.

How important, then, that we check it at its first appearance; for may it not leave us pitted, if we wait until the fever has raged to a great height, before we strive to quell it?

JOHN.

Happiness.

This forever looking forward for enjoyment, don't pay. From what we know of it, we would as soon chase butterflies for a living,
or bottle up moonshine for cloudy nights.

The only true course is to take the drops of happiness as God gives them to us every day of our lives. The boy must learn to be happy when he is plodding over his lessons; the apprentice when he is learning his trade;
the merchant while he is making his fortune.
If he fails to learn this art, he will be sure to miss his enjoyment when he gains what he sighs for.

For our Bachelor Friends.

The attention is invited to the following "Wait!" There are some sad sights in this world; a city sacked and burnt; a battle field after a great slaughter; a London in the midst of a plague; a ship burning at sea;
a family pining in starvation; a jug of mollasses spelt upon the pavement. All bad, it is true. But, to us, the saddest sight of all is an old bachelor wearing towards the end of his journey of life, his great duties undone.
Poor fellow! just look at him! his shirt buttons off, his stockings out at toes, not a son
or daughter, nor a relative to drop a tear,
close his eyes in death, or to leave his money
to—nobody, in fact, to care for him—"shun'd
by saint an' sinner." Were we such a man—or rather half a man—the mild reproving eye
of a widow or maiden lady would drive us mad! But there is still hope. Uglier and older men than any of our friends have married beautiful wives, who trained them admirably, and spent their money elegantly!

Novel Locomotive.

In a certain Sabbath School the superintendent made a powerful appeal to the scholars to be active and useful, and among other things, he told them that they should all be locomotives, each taking along its train to

What does this mean? said the astonished superintendent.

Why, said the boy, you said we must all be locomotives, and here I am with thirteen cars behind me.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, Dec. 19th, 1863.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

TO OUR PATRONS. We tender our patrons our unfeigned thanks, for the numerous favors bestowed on us the past year, in the way of advertisements and job work, and respectfully solicit a continuance of the same. We shall endeavor to make such additions to our establishment, from time to time, as may be required; and would assure our friends that no effort on our part will be wanting to give entire satisfaction.

As the season of the year has now arrived for an adjustment of accounts, and on examining our books we find many still indebted to us—a number of whom have been repeatedly requested to settle, without the slightest effect—to them it may seem but a trifle, to us it is a very important sum; as paper and our other materials, are so enormously high. A few of our subscribers, we are sorry to say, have received the "Patriot" since our commencement, thirty months ago, and have never once thought of paying for it; we shall therefore feel compelled after the 1st of January, to stop their papers, as our expenses are such, that we cannot afford to give them the paper until they pay.

WAR MEETING. Another large and glorious meeting was held in the Town Hall in this place on Wednesday evening last. H. Farnum Smith, Esq., presided, who after a neat and eloquent speech introduced to the audience Gen. Cowdin. The General entertained the audience very agreeably for some time, giving among other things his own experience—having been in seventeen engagements. Col. Frankel followed, with an enthusiastic speech, which called forth loud cheers. His regiment at Readville is nearly full, and he leaves for action in a few days. Hon. N. B. French, was next introduced to the Chairman. He is a beautiful speaker; and his rich and patriotic remarks, was highly appreciated and loudly applauded. The Band on this occasion appeared to do their best, and deserve much praise. Several went up and signed their names after the meeting was dismissed. The ball keeps moving and all that is wanted are a few more meetings.

QUINCY'S QUOTA. The quota of this town under the recent call of the President, is forty-nine. Of this number, we are happy to say that some fifteen or twenty have enlisted, and gone into camp at Readville. Some ten or twelve more have signed their names, but owing to business or consent of parents, have not left their civic pursuits for camp life, but will probably be coming week. We also learn that the members of the Quincy Brass Band, with the exception of one, are ready to go, if their services are required. If they go, our quota is full, or nearly so; and we would advise those who think of obtaining the large bounty now offered, to enlist at once.

AMPUTATION. Mr. John B. Bass, whose case we had occasion to allude to in our last, submitted to another amputation of his wounded limb on Thursday last. The operation was performed under the surgical skill of Dr. Cabot, one of the head Surgeons of the Massachusetts General Hospital. We are glad to hear that Mr. B. went through the operation heroically, and is doing well. He is now under the care of Dr. Woodward, of this town.

RECOVERED. We are happy to inform our readers that the property stolen from Mr. B. A. Hill, of this town, has been recovered, but the rogue has not been brought to justice. From what information we have learned, we think the thief will soon be arrested. The horse and buggy were found in a stable at Cambridgeport, where they were left by the rascal. After a hard search the robe was found in a Jew shop in Boston; where it had been purchased for three dollars and a half.

The Holidays are coming, and every member of your family will be expecting a gift of some kind. How much better to surprise them with a new pair of boots or shoes, such as you can find at Cummings', than to spend the money for foolish toys and trinkets.

RECAPTURE. The Chesapeake was recaptured on Thursday last, by the gunboat Ellis and Anna, at Sable harbor, about 22 miles from Halifax, N. S. all but three of the crew escaped. She has been narrowly watched, and her whereabouts was daily known, but the absence of gunboats, had caused the delay in her capture.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, Dec. 17, 1863.

PASSING EVENTS, ABOUT HOME.

Some branches of mechanical enterprise are getting dull; but trade operations quite active for winter. Money easy of access on good paper. January first, the winding up time is near at hand; large sums will of necessity change hands, as thousands will be honored by the presentation of their quarterly or yearly bills for payment. Monied corporations that declare dividends in January, will be found to have done a good business for the present year. For instance, the Boston and Worcester Railroad pay a semi-annual dividend of five per cent. The Old Colony and Newport Railway, three per cent, with an extra dividend of forty per cent. on each share. The Michigan Central Railroad pay a semi-annual dividend of six per cent, January first—and so they go.

The city election of Monday resulted in the choice of Mr. Lincoln for Mayor and the whole Republican ticket for Aldermen by a large majority. The Boston Herald of Tuesday comes down upon the minority like a "thousand of bricks." The stupidity of the Democratic managers, (says the Herald) is manifest in this contest, and must be anything but agreeable to them. They have run down the Democratic party in this city one half; and if they continue to act in the future as in the past, they will entirely annihilate the party in this City and State, and it will be numbered with the past.

The Sanitary Fair at the Music Hall is the all-absorbing point of attraction the present week. The crowd throngs every part of the building daily, and the scene at the Hall is one of the most animated and gratifying character. The sales at the tables on Tuesday run up to some $23,000, exclusive of the receipts for admission, and to the Tableau at Alston Hall. All the world and the great part of it, are coming in a strong current to the Music Hall. The number of visitors is from eight to ten thousand every day, with three hundred thousand more coming by and by. On one day hundreds of people were unable by reason of the crowd to obtain admittance. As this Fair is got up for the benefit of the poor soldier, the immense patronage indicated, tells how the heart of the whole community beats for those who are maintaining the cause of the Union in the tented field.

WAR NEWS.—CONGRESS.

The expedition of General Banks to Texas proves a glorious success. The Union party, which is very strong there, are leaving their places of concealment, and are flocking to the colors in the Federal army. Two regiments have already recruited since he landed in the State, and the good work is still going on. General Banks has lately visited Meador and was publicly entertained by the Mexicans with great respect and cordiality. The Mexicans sympathize strongly in our favor for the cause of the Union. To the time of my writing there appears nothing new from the army of the Potomac.

General Butler is active in his movements on the borders of Virginia and North Carolina. A portion of his troops has made bold and successful dashes upon the rebels. Matters at Charleston remain the same. Shells are occasionally thrown into the city. According to the rebel account, to Tuesday last, Fort Sumter is nearly destroyed by an accidental fire. Congress is getting rapidly under way in business. The Standing Committee of the House having been appointed by Speaker Colfax with much fairness. Measures are under consideration to increase the pay of the soldiers of the army eighteen dollars per month—to revise the Conscription in many points—striking out the Exemption clause by the payment of three hundred dollars. To reduce all persons subject to draft from twenty to forty-five years of age to six classes, &c.

A matter of the highest moment is developing itself in Congress—the re-admission of the seceding States into the Union. Besides the President's plan, other methods have been suggested. The question is in a nutshell, shall the rebel States be restored with or without the "peculiar institution" as they say elect. Hard as it may be to the people of the free States in favor of continuing slavery. The time has now arrived for blotting this evil from our land. The only just reconstruction that can now be adopted, is a return of the seceding States to the Union with free territory. Then would our Republic be glorious and its liberties perpetual.

SCISSORIZED. We have carefully examined all the orders from the office of the Provost Marshal of the United States, and Stanton's manifestos for the last six months, and find nothing in either to prevent any subscriber from furnishing an editor with a turkey for Christmas. We state this fact for the benefit of printers at large, and without any foul motives.

WE WISH YOU A MERRY CHRISTMAS kind reader. A merry welcome to that day, around which Christianity has entwined the sacred memorials of its faith. May it be a birthday of your fondest anticipations—and the advent of the Twenty-Fifth, find us all in merry mood—rich in this earth's wealth—with hearts open to the calls of humanity.

A REBEL SPY IN LIMBO. Lieut. Wm. G. Sheen, of this town, Adjutant of the Provost Marshal's office at Washington, arrived in Boston, on Sunday last, having in custody one Robert Boyle, who is to be consigned to Fort Warren. Boyle was arrested last March at Poolesville, Maryland, and was consigned to the Old Capital Prison, but was afterward exchanged. He was re-arrested soon after as a suspicious character, and ordered by the Secretary of War to be confined in Fort Warren during the war. While being brought here a month or more ago, he escaped by jumping from the cars near Kingston, Rhode Island. He was again arrested near Bladenburg on the 5th instant, and will now probably be kept in durance vile where he cannot escape.

PURCHASED AT A BARGAIN. Mr. Edward B. Souther purchased at auction on Saturday last all the property belonging to the Quincy Canal Corporation in this town, for the low sum of ten dollars, besides the debts, which amounts to about three hundred dollars, which he is to pay. The property is worth a much larger sum, but owing to certain conditions, such as keeping the locks in repair, etc., it was sold for a mere trifle.

SANTA CLAUS. As this venerable individual will have made his annual visit before we again make our appearance, we will take the liberty to inform him where he can be found. The important things he is expected to carry on this occasion. As the little folks are on this occasion, at Abbott & McLeellan's a large assortment of all kinds of toys are to be had; at Holden's, all kinds of valuable and useful articles, in jewelry and silver ware, also the famous Microscope; and for those of a more literary turn, can be found at the Quincy Bookstore, an excellent assortment of new and entertaining books, and those beautiful keepsakes, Photograph albums, engraving your town stores; do not go to Boston, when your wants can be so well supplied at home. We should return sincere thanks to Santa Claus if he would bring us a large list of new subscribers, good payers, ones we mean.

GENTLEMEN'S DINING ROOM. We take pleasure in calling the attention of those who visit the city, either on pleasure or business, to the excellent dining room, kept at No. 2 Wilson Lane. It is the oldest in Boston, and is sought by many to be the only place where a good dinner can be procured. Mr. PALER, its new and popular proprietor, has peculiar qualities required for a public caterer, which, together with his experience, fit him most admirably for his present position. The leading features of this establishment, and that which have given it such a popularity, are neatness and promptness. A cook of thirty years' experience superintends the culinary department, and epicures may rest assured that the various dishes desired will not fall short of their expectations.

PHILADELPHIA SATURDAY EVENING POST. The proprietors of this old and sterling paper, have issued their card for the campaign of 1864. The literary, business, and other features of this journal, adapting it peculiarly to the social wants of the domestic circle, have long been acknowledged, by a generous support for over forty years. The new volume will commence under the most favorable auspices. Some of the best writers have been engaged, whose contributions, partaking of the humorous and the grave, will enrich its columns. A new work, by that eminent novelist, Mrs. Wood, is in the course of preparation, and will appear in its earliest issues.

The subscription yearly, is two dollars, in advance; and to the getter up of clubs, very liberal inducements are offered.

Address Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

HAMS CURED AND SMOKED. This is the card of Mr. C. W. Perry, on Hancock street, at the sign of the "Ham." It has a significant import at this season of the year, to which we wish to draw the attention of the reader. Now there is no delicacy like a well cured Ham; that is not salt-bound, hard, and dry as a chip—with an odor that is sometimes offensive; but which has all its sweetness, flavor and juices preserved, properly seasoned, and when cut is as rosy as a cherry. This is Mr. Perry's method of curing, and we cheerfully recommend him to public favor.

TO PEDESTRIANS. Those unfortunate travellers, who are obliged to pass through the "Hollow," would find it to their advantage to practice still walking.

A nautical mile is 6,079 linear feet; the land mile is 5,280 feet.

A young Virginia lady just married, wealthy and industrious, spun and wove her wedding dress, and made her bridal outfit from her hat to her boots.

CHRISTMAS. Notwithstanding the frightful war raging, it is pleasant to see that the advent of the Prince of Peace, is not wholly forgotten.

We learn that the anniversary of the birth of our Saviour, will be celebrated at Christ Church, on Friday morning next, at 10 1/2 o'clock—and that appropriate services for Christmas Eve will be performed on Thursday evening, commencing at 7 o'clock.

Also, that High Mass will be administered at the Catholic Church Christmas morning.

JURORS. Messrs. John Crane and Alvin Rogers, of this town, have been drawn as Jurors for the Superior Court, Norfolk County, December Term.

Have you seen them? What? Why those things they call "Garterets." Cummings has them. They are very much like the anklets he had last winter—only more so. I mean to have a pair.

HO! FOR THE HOLIDAYS. A rare chance to purchase Christmas and New Year's presents. Messrs. Cushman & Brooks wholesale and retail dry goods dealers, Nos. 90 and 92 Tremont street, Boston, have since their removal, replenished their former stock, with large additions of new goods admirably adapted for Christmas and New Year's presents. Among which, may be found, not only every article in the dry good line, but a rich assortment of fancy articles suitable for a Cinderella outfit. Messrs. Cushman & Brooks buy at the top of the market, and sell at reasonable profits. Give 'em a call.

THE GREAT
American Tea Company
51 Vesey Street, New York,
Since its organization, has created a
New Era in the history of Wholesaling Teas in this Country.
THEY have introduced their selections of Teas, and are selling them at not over two
cents (22 cents) per pound above cost,
never deviating from the one price asked.
Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time
to the selection of their TEAS as to quality,
value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the Tea buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as
are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.
It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all
others.
The is no judge of Tea or of the Market—if his time is valuable—he has all the benefits of a well
organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.
This enables all Tea buyers—no matter if they
are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York
merchants.
Parties can order Teas and will be served by
us as well as though they came themselves, being
sure to get original packages, true weight and
taste; and the Teas are warranted as represented.
We issue a Price List of the Company's Teas,
which will be sent to all who order it; comprising HYSON, YOUNG HYSON, IMPERIAL GUN-POWDER, TWANKAY AND SPIN, OOLONG, SOUCHOON, OOLONG AND HYSON PEKOE, JAPAN TEA of every description, colored and
uncolored.
This list has each kind of Tea divided into Four Classes, named: 1. CARGO, high CARGO, FINE, FIRST; that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea trade.
We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over
two cents (22 cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who
have heretofore been paying enormous profits.

THE GREAT

American Tea Company

51 Vesey Street, New York.

THEY have introduced their selections of

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a

Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all

others.

It is no judge of Tea or the Market—if his

time is valuable—he has all the benefits of a well

organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional

Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior sales-
men.

This enables all Tea buyers—no matter if they

Youth and Age.

I often think each tottering form
That limps along in life's decline,
Once bore a heart as young, as warm,
As full of life thoughts as mine!
And each has had its dream of joy,
His own unequalled, pure romance;
Commencing when the blushing boy
First thrills at love by woman's glance.

And each could tell his tale of youth—
Would think its scenes of love evince
More passion, more ungarbled truth
Than any tale before or since.

Yes! they could tell of tender lays
At midnight penned in classic shades,
Of days more bright than modern days,
And made more fair than modern maid;

Of whispers in a willing ear;
Of kisses on a blushing cheek;
Each kiss, each whisper, far too dear
Our modern lips to give or speak.

Of passions too untimely crossed;
Of passions slighted or betrayed;
Of kindred spirits early lost,
And buds that blossom but to fade;

Of beaming eyes and tresses gay,
Elastic forms and noble brow,
Of forms that have all passed away,
And left them what we see them now!

And is it—this is human love
So very light and frail a thing?
And must youth's bright vision move
Forever on time's restless wing?

Must all the eyes that still are bright,
And all the lips that talk of bliss,
And all the forms so fair to sight,
Hereafter only come to this?

Then what are earth's best visions worth,
If we at length must lose them thus?
If all we value most on earth
Ere long must fade away from us?

Brighter Days in Store.

Heed not what the world may say,
Value not its smile or frown,
Though sorrow sends a dark'ning ray,
Or grief perchance may weigh thee down.

Look up! look up! and smile again,
'Twere useless folly to deplore;
And let this thought inspire thy heart—
There's brighter days in store.

What though the wealthy and the great
Cast scornful looks at thee,
And taunt thee with thy low estate,
What matters that?—let it be.

Though tempter tossed on life's dark tide,
You yet may reach the shore;
These words, then, echo far and wide—
There's brighter days in store.

Hope on, hope on; let smiling joy
Light up thy face again,
If cruel fate should cast a cloud,
O'er thee it falls in vain;

For years will pass, when endless time
Will be to thee no more,
With angels in that heavenly clime
There's brighter days in store.

The Penitent Drunkard's Lament.

A PARODY.

Oh, ever thus since childhood's time,
I've seen my small change all depart;
I never had a single dime,
But it was sure to take a start;
I never had a bit of tin.

To glad me with its silvery glow,
But that some friend would ask me in
To take a drink, and then 'twould go.
Now, too, the joy most like divine,
Of all I ever dreamed or knew.

To see these stamps and call them mine,
Oh, misery! must I spend them too?
They go—and never back will come!
Those three blue ones! and that red three!
Oh! may they not return! or rum
Will surely be the death of me!

Farewell to them! I'll take my 'smile'—
And on the whole, I'm glad they're spent!
I've conquered danger with my 'pile'—
And bravely used my last blue cent.
Better to take a good square drink,
And safety with an empty purse,
Than coast my stamps on danger's brink,
Feeling as bad, and a d—d sight worse.

Anecdotes.

Two sailors were sitting on the gunwale of their ship drinking grog. This is what and drink, said Jack, and fell overboard as he was drinking.

And now you have got washing and lodging, coolly remarked Tom.

Madam, said John Wilks to a lady to whom he wished to make himself agreeable, I am a plain man.

Exceedingly plain, sir, rejoined the lady. Even John Wilks was silenced.

Julius, was you ever in business?
Of course I was.
How do you know she is handsome, then?
Because the women are running her down so, said he.
O, the scamp.

Bob did you ever see Miss S?
No.
How do you know she is handsome, then?
Because the women are running her down so, said he.
O, the scamp.

This peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the constitutions of multitudes of men. It either produces or is produced by an encased, vitiated state of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their normal vigorous action, and leaves the system to fall into disorder and decay. The scrofulous contamination is variously caused by mercurial disease, low living, disordered digestion from unhealthy food, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vices, and, above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending "from parents to children to the third and fourth generation;" indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon the children." It originates take various names, according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become ulcerous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous affections. These all having the same origin, require the same remedy, viz. purification and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood, and these dangerous distempers leave you. With kelp, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most efficient antidotes that medical science has discovered for this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the disease it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised is known by all who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect upon this class of complaints, is indisputably proven by the great multitude of publicly known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from Tuberculous deposits in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases, Female Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole series of complaints that arise from impurity of the blood. Minute reports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S SASSAPARILLA ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be learned the directions for its use, and some of the remarkable cures which it has made when all other remedies had failed to afford relief. These cases are purposely taken from all sections of the country, in order that every reader may have access to some one who can speak in its behalf from personal experience. Scrofula depresses the vitality, and thus leaves its victims far more subject to disease and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does greatly shorten, the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend years in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SASSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in alternative power. By its use you may prevent yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders, and thus keep the font of eruptions that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the causes of disease, and vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar virtue this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which lurk within the system or burst out on any part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised much and did nothing; but they will neither be deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues have been proven by abundant trial, and there remains no question of its surpassing excellence for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same name, it is a very different medicine from any other which has been before the people, and is far more effective than any other which has ever been available to them.

A BEAUTIFUL and appropriate article for a Holiday Gift, Old or Young, is
The Craig Microscope!
Magnifies 100 Diameters or 10,000 Times.

Although of a high magnifying power, this Microscope is so simple that a child can use it—for it requires no focal adjustment; therefore it neither fatigues the eyes, nor wears the patience, of other Microscopes.

"The Microscope" is of me that in the leaf of the every forest, and in the bowers of every garden, and in waters of every rivulet, there is a world of things to be seen, and a world of wonders to be discovered. The "Craig" is the finest of the kind.

Parents who wish to instruct their children in the means of doing so.

The popularity of this instrument is constantly on the increase. Its perfectness as a microscope, its power and its easiness, are certainly wonderful.

"The Microscope" is, in brief, sent by mail, postage paid, for $2.50; or with 24 beautiful mounted Objects for $3.50; or with 24 objects for $5.00; or with 48 objects for $8.00—postage paid. In hand rubbed for presents in the above prices. Mounts 24 Objects, any number of dissections, from 1/2 to 1/4 of an inch, and in different sizes—can be had at the rate of $1.50 a dozen.

Also we have an interesting variety of Microscopic PHOTOGRAPHS, among them is the Lord's Prayer, containing 268 letters on a space less than half the size of a Pin's head, but in the Microscope can be read distinctly. These are beautifully mounted on glass slides, and will be sent by mail on receipt of fifty cents each.

Illustrated Circulars, with lists of Mounted Objects and Microscopic Photographs, will be sent on application.

TO FEMALES IN DELICATE HEALTH

DR. DOW, Physician and Surgeon, No. 7

Endicott Street, Boston, is consulted daily for all diseases incident to the female system.

Protruding Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Fluor Albus, Suppression, and other Menstrual derangements, are all treated on new and improved principles, and speedily relieved in a very few days.

So invariably certain is the new mode of treatment, that most obstinate complaints yield under it, and the afflicted person soon rejoices in perfect health.

Dr. Dow has no doubt had greater experience in the cure of diseases of women than any other physician in Boston.

Bearing accommodations for patients who may wish to stay in Boston a few days under his treatment.

Dr. Dow, since 1845, having confined his whole attention to an office practice for the cure of Private Diseases and Female Complaints, acquires no superior in the United States.

DENTISTRY.

THE undersigned have associated themselves together in the practice of Dental Surgery, at the old office of Dr. S. Stocking, No. 19 Tremont Row, Boston. We are prepared to do the best work in every department of our profession, and on the most REASONABLE TERMS. We shall give special attention to filling decayed teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth on gold and silver, we shall bestow especial pains in mounting whole and half sets on Vulcanized Rubber.

Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner, so universally popular as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base being less expensive than gold and silver, brings the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We flatter ourselves that an experience of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer them.

Either will be continued in our practice, and administered in the most judicious and scientific manner.

Above the broad banana stray,
And through the Brahmin's sacred grove
A thousand bright hued pinions play!

Thy wandering sons shall stretch their arms,
And thy rude chart of rock and hill
Seem dearer than the land of palms!

With wealth below!

es over a slow fire, stir to prevent burning
over; when it has boiled some time try it,
by taking some out in a saucer, if it is brittle and hard when cold, it is done. Flavor with lemon.

FILIAL DUTY. There is no virtue that adds so noble a charm to the finest traits of beauty, as that which exerts itself in watching over the tranquillity of an aged parent.
There are no tears that give so sweet and rich a lustre to the cheek of innocence, as the tears of filial sorrow.

An old darkey was endeavoring to explain
his unfortunate condition. "You see," remarked Sambo, "it was in this way, as far as I can remember: First my father died, and den my mother married again; and den my mudder died, and my father married again;
and somehow I doesn't seem to hab no parents
at all, nor no home, nor noffin."

Sunshine, heat, air, water, food, and exercise, are the chief necessities of life.
Every treasure, no matter how precious,
comes to us in an earthen vessel, and some day earth will reclaim its own; but the treasure remains, and what you have surrendered shall in due time be made good to you and more.

A crusty old bachelor says the talk of women is usually about the men. Even their laugh is but "he! he!"

A young lady down East advertises for the young man that "embraced an opportunity,"
and says that if he will come over to their town he can do better.

THE RED, WHITE, AND BLUE. The red cheeks, the white teeth, and blue eyes of a lovely girl are as good a flag as a young soldier in the battle of life, need fight under.

Praise is sometimes as hurtful as censure.
It is as bad to be blown into the air, as to be cast into the pit.

A hypocrite may spin so fair a thread as to deceive his own eye. He may admire the cobweb, and not know himself to be the epider.

Husband—"Susan, my love, this apple dumpling is not half done." Wife—"Well finish it then, my dear."

Boy fair, sell fair, and love the fair. By so doing, you will stand a fair chance of leading a fair life.

is better to be loved than feared.

Miscellaneous.

A Substitute Wanted.

The other day, Chief Engineer Dean of the Fire Department, called at the office
where I make shoes for a living, and, handing me a big white envelope, notified me that I was drafted, and must report myself
for examination, at Lawrence.

Now, I consider it the duty of every citizen to give his life, if need be, for the defence of his country; so on the morning of the eventful 13th, I put on a clean shirt and my Sunday clothes, and started for Lawrence,
to see if I could get exempted.

Lawrence, as all know, is situated on the Merrimack river, and its principal productions are mud, dust, and factory girls. The city proper—at least that part that I saw—consisted of a long, narrow entry, up one flight of stairs, adorned overhead with a frescoing of gas metres, and carpeted with worn out tobacco quids, and furnished with one chair, two settees, and as many huge square packing cases, marked "Q. M. D."

Scattered around this palatial entrance hall
were some forty or fifty conscripts, looking very much as if they expected to be exempted by reason of old age before the young man with the ferocious mustache should notify them of their turn.

Most of them, however, were doomed to disappointment; for, while they counted out
hours of delay, a door would suddenly open,
and the tall young person would single out a man and march him through the open doorway, to be seen no more.

By and by—that is, after several hours'
waiting—my turn came.
John Smith! shouted the door-keeper.

That's me, says I, and with a cheer from the crowd I entered a large, square room, where two persons sat writing at a table, and a third, evidently the surgeon, was examining a man in the last stage of nudity.

One of the writers at the table, a young man with curly hair and blue eyes, nodded
to me, and dipping his pen in the ink, commenced.

John Smith, what's your name?
John Smith, says I.
Where were you born?
Podunk, Maine.

What did your grandmother die of?
D—d if I know, says I.
Call it hapentap, says he; and your grandfather, too.

I don't care what you call it, says I, for I am a little riled by his nonsensical questions.
Can you ever have boils? says he.

meant something else.

Did you ever have the measles?
Here I took off my coat.
Or the itch?

Yes, sir, says I—that 'ere itch, (and I shoved
a very large brown one within three inches of his nose) has been itching for the last ten minutes to knock your pesky head off, you little, mean, low-lived, contemptible puppy,
you.

My dear sir, said the mild spoken gentleman, laying his hand on my arm; calm yourself, I pray. Don't let your angry passions rise, but take off your clothes, so I can see what you are made of.

So I suppressed my anger, and, with drawing to a corner, I hung my clothes on the floor and presented myself for examination.
clad only with the covering nature had given me, except about a square inch of court plaster on my right shin, where I had fallen over a chair, the night before, feeling for a match.

Young man, said the surgeon, looking me
straight in the eye, you have got the myopia.

Yes, sir, said I, and a good one, too; a little Binger, with a drop of Stoughton,
makes an excellent eye-opener of a morning.

And there seems to be an amauratic tendency of the right eye, accompanied with ophthalmia.

"Shaw!" says I.
And that white spot in the left eye betokens a cataract.

I guess you mean in the left ear, says I,
'cause I went in swimming this morning,
and got an alfred big bubble in my left ear.

And here I jumped up and down two or three times on my left foot, but to no purpose. As soon as I stopped, he mounted a chair and commenced feeling the top of my head.

Was your family ever troubled with epilepsy? says he.

Only the two boys, says I, and when they catch them my wife always goes at 'em with a fine tooth comb, the first thing.

Jumping off the chair he hit me a lick in the ribs that nearly knocked me over, and before I had time to remonstrate, his arms
were around my neck and his head pressed against my bosom the same way Sophia Ann does when she wants me to buy her some new bonnets and things.

Just what I thought, says he; tuberculosis and hemoptysis, combined with a defect in the scapular membrane and incipient phthisis.
Heavens! says I, what's that?
And cardiac disease.

No, said I.
And pendaritides.
Thunder.

Stop talking! Now count after me: One
One! said I, half dead with fright.
Asthma! Two.
Two! I yelled.

Exostosis of the right fabula! Three.
Three! I gasped.
Coxalgia! Four.
Murder! said I—Four.

Confirmed duodenum of the right ventricle!
Five.
Oh, doctor! dear doctor; ain't you most through? I feel faint.

Through? No, not half through! Why, my friend, Pandora's Box was nothing to your chest. You have sphyxianosis, and glottisitis, and conchulogis, and pesidage, and—

Here my knees trembled so I leaned against the table for support.
And permanent luxation of the anterior
lobe of the right phalanx.

My only answer was a deprecatory ge-ture.
And scrofulous diathesis and omniopadities.
I sank to the floor in utter despair.

Elutriation! he yelled, for he saw I was going fast; and maxilarium, and—

When I woke to consciousness again, I found myself in a puddle of water, an empty bucket near by, and the surgeon astride my chest, shouting something in my ear, of which,
however, I could hear nothing.

I smiled feebly in acknowledgment of his attentions. At a sign from him, two attendants drew near, and having lifted him into a chair—for he was absolutely black in the face with his exertions—they hoisted me to a perpendicular, and the examination proceeded.

But I will not harrow your feelings by repeating the heart-rending details. Suffice it to say that I was afflicted with gastritis, em-physemation, mercuritis, empysema, obesity, condyle of the humerus, bilicose veins, hernia in both great toes, and hermorrhoids in the left heel, besides lots of other diseases whose names I cannot remember. Finally, after a rigid examination of my toe nails in search of eruptive lesions, he rose to his feet, drew a long breath, wiped the perspiration from his face with a stray newspaper,
and recommenced.

Young man, said he, and his eyes glistened with delight as he spoke, you are really the most interesting subject I ever met with.
The most wonderful case! I don't think I have enjoyed a half hour so much.

Why, sir, with the exception of at most three, you have symptoms
of my disease in the Medical Dictionary.

Please let me embrace you once more; just to see if I can detect exostosis of the viscous membrane.

Well, no, he continued, with a slightly disappointed air, as he released me; I don't seem to find it exactly, but would you mind coming round to my boarding house after tea, so that I can spend the evening osculating after it.

He was so anxious to find that particular symptom that I was sorry to refuse him; but I had promised Sophia Ann that I would be at home to tea, and I knew she would worry
if I stayed, so I was obliged to decline. Seeing there was a lady in the case, he very politely excused me, much to my relief.

Well, good bye, my friend, said he, as I took my hat to go. I wish it was so you could go to the war; I would have you in my hospital in less than a month, and then I could examine you at my leisure. I am positive a little exposure would bring on those two symptoms I spoke of, and then what a magnificent subject you would be! How I should like to dissect you! But then, perhaps, you don't feel like it, and if you don't,
I don't know as I can blame you much for preserving your wonderful organism as long as you can; so you just go into the next room, and Captain Herrick will give you a furlough to go home and provide a substitute, or pay your commutation. Boy, call the next on the list.

But, sir, said I, agitated at his concluding remarks, you don't pretend to accept me as able-bodied?

Really, my friend, said he, the fact is you have so many diseases that I actually do, to say cranial disease, when it is your heart that is affected; and if I mention your heart, what is the use of your having consumption? But I know Dr. Cogswell will be pleased to receive your commutation fee—or if you will bring up a likely substitute, I shall be delighted to examine him, and some day when we are both at liberty, I shall be happy to have you call on me. Hold! just unbutton your coat for a moment. I must find that exco—

But here I broke from his grasp, and stopped in the next room only long enough to procure my furlough, I started for the railway station, and never looked behind until I was safe in the arms of Sophia Ann and the children.

And now can anybody inform me where I can find a good, able-bodied substitute, warranted diseased in the head, heart, lungs, or legs, or all of them? To such a man I will give $300 cash down, or, if preferred, at the rate of five dollars apiece for each symptom, and promptly him, in behalf of our Uncle Samuel,
food and clothing for three years, together
with medical attendance in proportion to the number and malignity of his diseases.

Traits of Character.

Profane and vulgar language should be guarded against by young men; for it is among them that we are more frequently pained to hear expressions of profanity and vulgarity than among any other class, though
the habit is not confined to the young.

"There is as much connection between the words and the thoughts as there is between the thoughts and the words; the latter are not only the expressions of the former, but they have a power to react upon the soul, and leave the stains of their corruption there. A young man who allows himself to use a profane or vulgar word, has not only shown that there is a foul spot on his mind, but, by the utterance of that word, he extends that spot,
and inflames it, till by indulgence, it will soon pollute and ruin the whole soul. We must be careful of our words as well as our thoughts. If the tongue is controlled so that no improper word is pronounced by it, we shall soon be able to control the mind, and save that from corruption."

Unguarded and hasty words are exceedingly ugly traits of character. Actions constitute character. "Handsome is that handsome does." Beauty of character can only be obtained and maintained by strict obedience to proper laws, the truth of which we may admit,
but do not allow to control us. We seldom meet with persons who do not have some good impulses. Who would be so degraded as not to act upon them all?

Close observance of truthful suggestions
will lead us to hate sin with proper abhorrence, and accustom the mind to pursue only those channels which open upon broader fields, and conduct to happy lives of usefulness.

It is not an easy thing to control ourselves;
but, with submission to higher dictation than selfish suggestions, we find a power within our reach, and evil has a weapon too potent for much combative influence. It is considered by some persons to be humiliating to their nature not to allow a full gratification of their natural propensities. "It's my nature,"
say they, "to be impulsive; and heaven and earth cannot move me to be otherwise than I am." Upon that disposition, no offer of restraint is made, and no tie is too sacred not to be unloosed, if only a full scope can be given to the false ambition. Thus the eyes of the soul are continually being put out; and it is mained and scarred all over with inconsistencies, which only a bending of self-will will set right. So with the body, if not protected by principle and proper attention, will waste in itself, and trust in its own unaided functions for healthful action.

Attention, then, to the moral duties of life,
unforgetfulness of its honest obligations, self-examination, and guarding ourselves against the exercise of improper speech, is our object lesson at this time, which, if we be kindly treated, will render our "trait" distinguish-able, and our efforts successful in the formation of character.

Whisperings from the Willows.—No. 2.

REST! A little word, but yet how full of meaning! When wearied and worn with the toils and cares of the day, how sweet to think, night cometh wherein we can rest.

'Tis then, the mind is to lay aside all cares
and resign itself to ease.
How anxiously we look forward to this time, and how pleasant the thought that it is a common gift—a blessing each and all may enjoy.

Yes, weary traveller, give not up to despair. There is a beacon light to guide thee; there own heart whispers "there is rest beyond." A little longer, a few more steps, and you will reach the goal; then much richer will the joys appear for which you have worked to win.

Mortal! upon whom the troubles of this life all seem to centre, bear thy burden meekly—it is wisely sent; and remember
there is rest beyond!

In that beautiful land above, where the heavenly host are never weary, but are constantly singing praises around the throne, to the Lamb—the King of Glory, there is rest—

sweet rest, beyond the river.

Is it not worth winning, this eternal rest in that far country?
But like all other blessings, this is sometimes abused. For much rest, is as injurious to man, as too little.

Our All-wise Parent never meant we should play the part of a drone.
On the contrary, he sends us to the ant to learn wisdom, lest we lag now and then.

What more contemptible object can be seen, than one who calls himself a man, always lounging about, wasting his time on this and that, taking no comfort himself, and allowing none to those around him.

Ask such a specimen of humanity, why he pursues this course? Say to him, as did Solomon to the sluggard: "How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? When wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?"

O, (he will answer with a yawn) yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands in sleep.
But, you say, "Not bodily sleep, but mental inactivity," is his disease.

More shame to such a man—thus to abuse
the precious gifts God has given! Rouse him from his torpid state; show him his error, and warn him to desist.

The lower animal creation, even, can appreciate this blessing, and use it aright. Shall man be thought lower than the brute?

Let us endeavor to improve all God's gifts,
as He meant them to be improved, that we may feel we have done rightly; that we may hear the welcome words, "He hath done what he could."

While we turn with delight, when weary,
to the earthly rest, let us, also, be able to look with faith to the rest above. JOAN.

Healthful Observations.

1. To eat when you do not feel like it is brutal; nay, this is a slander on the lower animals, since they do not so debase themselves.

2. Do not enter a sick chamber on an empty stomach, nor remain as a watcher or nurse until you feel almost exhausted, nor sit between the patient and the fire, nor in the direction of a current of air from the patient towards yourself, nor eat or drink
anything after being in a sick room until you have rinsed your mouth thoroughly.

3. Do not sleep in any garment worn during the day.

4. Most grown persons are unable to sleep soundly or refreshingly over seven hours in summer and eight in winter; the attempt to force more on the system by a nap
in the daytime, or a "second nap" in the morning, renders the whole of the sleep disturbed and imperfect.

5. Some of the most painful stomach aches are occasioned by indigestion. This generates wind, and hence distension. It is often promptly remedied by kneading the abdomen with the ball of the hand, skin to skin, from one side to another, from the lower edge of the ribs downwards, because the accumulated air is forced on and outwards
along the alimentary canal.

6. When you return to your house from a long walk or other exhaustive exercise go to the fire or warm room, and do not remove a single article of clothing until you have taken a cup or more of some kind of a warm drink.

7. In going into a colder atmosphere keep the mouth closed, and walk with a rapidity sufficient to keep off a feeling of chilliness.

8. Two pair of thin stockings will keep the feet warmer than one pair of a greater thickness than both.

9. The night sweats of disease come on towards daylight; their deathly clamminess
and coldness is greatly modified by sleeping
in a single, loose, long wollen shirt.

10. The man or woman who drinks a cup of strong tea or coffee or other stimulant, in order to aid in the better performance of any work or duty, public or private, is a fool, because it is to the body and brain an expenditure of what is not yet got; it is using power
in advance, and this can never be done, even once, with impunity.

11. The less a man drinks of anything in hot weather the better, for the more we drink, the more we want to drink, until even ice-water palls and becomes of metallic taste;
hence the longer you can put off drinking cold water on the morning of a hot day, the better you will feel at night.

12. Drinking largely at meals, even of cold water or simple tea, is a mere habit,
and is always hurtful. No one should drink at a meal more than a quarter of a pint of any liquid, even of cold water, for it always retards, impairs, and interferes with a healthful digestion.

13. If you sleep at all in the daytime, it will interfere with the soundness of your sleep at night, much less if the nap be taken in the forenoon.

14. A short nap in the daytime may be necessary to some. Let it not exceed ten minutes; to this end sleep with the feet resting on a chair back or the edge of a table.

15. Never swallow an atom of food in a passion, or if under any great excitement, whether of a depressing or exciting nature; brutes won't do it.—Hall's Nal of Health.

A Frenchman's Fast.

A Frenchman upon the road on "Fast
Day" told a boy to hold his horse swift.
Fast, you mean, don't you, sir? ingated the lad.

Vel, fast den; mais, be gar, I no understand dis.

"There goes a fast horse!" exclaimed a bystander, as streaked by a lively trotting nag.
How is zat? nervously enquired the astonished Frenchman; zere is one horse fast, and he goes like zander all de time; zere is my horse, he is fast, too, and he no move.

This is Fast Day in reality, by the appearance of the road, said another.

O, I see, den, said Monsieur, vy dis fast
day; everything is fast; de horse zat goes is fast; ze horse zat is tied is fast, and ze folks zat eat nothing, and eat it slow, is fast. Be gar, vot a countrie.

Taking it Coolly.

A man went into a beer shop in an adjoining town and called for ale. It was brought to him in a common pint measure. He drank a little, and thinking that it tasted queerly he asked the store keeper what was the matter with his beer. The answer was, "It's a fast rate, being just bought in Boston. This satisfied the customer, and he swallowed the remainder of the beer. When he got through, seeing something in the bottom of the measure, he asked what it was. I declare, said the shop-keeper, I forgot to take out the scum
the last time I shared.

Two Stories.

A gentleman in C-- had been relating to his little son for the first time, the Bible story of Jonah. At the close the little fellow, with a knowing smile, began.

"Papa, yesterday, as I was going down the street, I saw a cow on top of the Medical college."

"Why my son," exclaimed the father,
"how can you tell me such a thing?"
Humph—I guess it's as true as your story!
was the cool reply.

Selling a Thin Horse.

A jocosse Boston auctioneer was called upon one day by a country dealer from Vermont, who wished to dispose of his horse.
He was one of those distinctive characters
peculiar to the section, with a countenance strangely indicative of both simplicity and shrewdness.

I say, said he, I want to see the auctioneer
that auctions off horses here on Saturday.

I'm the individual, said the auctioneer, what can I do for you?

Well, I've got a horse I wanted to sell,
provided I can get enough for him; don't want nothing more than his value neither. He's a good one, though just now he's a lettle thin;
but I reckon he ought to sell pretty smartly.

Very good, will you have him advertised?
Well I guess I don't know about that.
What do you tax?

One dollar first insertion; fifty cents for every time after.

That's two dollars for three times; I reckon
that you may put him in the newspaper once,
stranger, and after that let him slide.

Very good; what color is he?
Rather brown than otherwise.
Is he sound?

Sound? Oh! sound as a dollar—shouldn't
like to warrant him, though!

All right; I'll advertise and sell him on Saturday. Have your 'critter' at the mart by twelve o'clock.

I just want to tell you, Mr. Auctioneer,
I should like to have the animal limited at fifteen dollars, but you may let him go for five.

Exactly, and you won't take a great deal
more than is offered for him, will you?

Well, no, I'm not dispositioned to be hard,
anyhow, I calculate not.

Saturday came, and one dollar and a half was bid for the animal brought up by the horse dealer.

Go on, gentlemen, I have only one dollar
and a half bid for the horse; how much more do I hear? One dollar and a half—going—going.

Sell him, sir, he's dying! whispered the Vermont horse dealer into the ear of the knave of the hammer.

Gone! shouted the auctioneer, and down
went the old horse at a dollar and a half.
After the sale, the horse dealer was the first one up at the desk to settle.

Well, I reckon it won't take long to settle up this little trade of mine about the horse,
said he.

Poetry.

Single Blessedness.

It's very hard!—and so it is,
To live in such a row,
And witness that every Miss
But me has got a beau,—
For Love goes calling up and down,
But here he seems to shun;
I'm sure he has been asked enough
To call at Number One!

I'm sick of all the double knocks
That come to Number Four!—
At Number Three, I often see
A Lover at the door!
And one in blue, at Number Two,
Calls daily like a dun,—
It's very hard they come so near
And none to Number One!

Miss Bell I hear has got a dear
Exactly to her mind,
By sitting at the window pane
Without a bit of blind—
But I go in the balcony,
Which she has never done,
Yet arts that thrive at Number Five Don't take at Number One!

'Tis hard with plenty in the street,
And plenty passing by—
There's a nice young man at Number Ten,
But only rather shy—
As Mrs. Smith across the way
Has got a grown-up son,
But he hardly seems to know
There is a Number One!

There's Mr. Wick at Number Nine,
But he's intent on peep,
And though he's pious will not love
His neighbor as himself.
At Number Seven there was a sale—
The goods had quite a run!
And here I've got my single lot
On hand at Number One!

My mother often sits at work
And talks of props and stays,
And what a comfort I shall be
In her declining days—
The very maid about the house
Have set me down a nun,
The sweethearts all belong to them
That call at Number One!

Once only when the Sue took fire,
One Friday afternoon,
Young Mr. Long came kindly in
And told me not to swoon—
Why can't he come again without The Phenix and the Sun!—
We cannot always have a sue
On fire, at Number One!

I am not old, I am not plain,
Nor awkward in my gait—
I am not crooked, like the bride
That went from Number Eight—
I'm sure white satin made her look
As brown as any bun—
But even beauty has no chance,
I think, at Number One!

At Number Six they say Miss Rose
Has slain a score of hearts,
And Cupid, for her sake, has been Quite prodigal of darts
The imp they show with bended bow,
I wish he had a gun!
But if he had, he'd never deign
To shoot with Number One.

It's very hard, and so it is
To live in such a row!
And here's a ballad singer come
To aggravate my woe!—
O take away your foolish song
And tones enough to stun—
There is "Nae luck about the house,"
I know, at Number One!

Anecdotes.

Bridget! Bridget! why don't you bring the iced lemonade? said Mrs. S. on the Fourth of July, from the top of the kitchen stairs.
Why, marn, said Bridget, wiping the sweat from her red face with her checked
apron, why, marn, you see the ice that I put into the lemonade, is so hard, that it has not melted yet, though it's stirring it over the fire
I've been for the fifteen minutes or more.

A gentleman 75 years of age, residing in Rhode Island, recently lost his wife by death.
A venerable lady, a neighbor, nearly five score years, was asked if she had called on her old friend since he had lost his wife.
Why, she answered in almost indignant surprise, no! indeed! it would not look well for a widow like me to call on him now, as he is a widower.

Tommy, what does b-e-n-c-h spell?
Don't know ma'am.
What you little numbskull, what are you
sitting on?
Tommy (looking sheepish,) I don't like to tell.

As the sun in its full splendor was peeping
over the eastern hills, a newly married man
exclaimed: "The glory of the world is rising.
His wife, who happened to be getting up at that moment, taking the compliment to herself, snarped out:
What would you say if I had my silk
gown on.

Mr. Brown, you said the defendant was honest and intelligent, what makes you think so, are you acquainted with him?
No, sir, I never see him.
Why, then, do you come to such a conclusion?
"Cause he takes ten papers, and pays for
'em in advance.
Verdict for defendant.

THE GREAT American Tea Company

51 Vesey Street, New York,
Since its organization, has created a
New Era in the history of Wholesaling Teas in this Country.

THEY have introduced their selection of Teas, and are selling them at not over two
cents (.02 cents) per pound above cost,
never deviating from the one price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their TEAS are not only devoted to the time
to the selection of their TEAS as to quality,
value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the Tea buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as
are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargain.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all
others.

There is no judge of Tea or of the Market—if his taste is valuable—he has all the benefits of a well
organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior sales-
men.

This enables all Tea buyers—no matter if they
are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York
merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by
us as well as though they came themselves, being
sure to get original packages, true weight and tastes; and the Teas are warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company's Teas,
which will be sent to all who order it; comprising HYSON, YOUNG HYSON, IMPERIAL, GUS-TAVUS, TWANKAY AND SKIPS, OOLONG, SOOCHONG, ORANGE AND HYSON PKEKE, JAPAN Tea of every description, colored and
uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into four classes, namely: CARGO, high CARGO, FINE, FINEST that every one may understand from description and the prices named that the Company are determined to underwrite the whole
Tea trade.

We guarantee to sell our Teas at not over
two cents (.02 cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who
have heretofore been paying enormous profits.

appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling,
Tucking, Gathering, Gauging, Braiding,
Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No
other Family Sewing Machine has so much
capacity for a great variety of work. It will
sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make
our Family Sewing Machine most reliable,
and most durable, and most certain in action
at all rates of speed. It makes the inter-
locked stitch which is the best stitch known.
Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,
can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine
is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine
when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While
some of the Cases, made out of the choicest
woods, are finished in the simplest and chas-
est manner possible, others are adorned and
embellished in the most costly and superb
manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family
Machine in operation, so as to judge of its
great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family
sewing as our Manufacturing machines are

Ayer's SARSAPARILLA

THE WORLD'S GREAT REMEDY

From Emory Miles, a well-known merchant of Oxford, Maine.

"I have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, but never yet one bottle which failed to do its duty and full satisfaction to those who had
it. As fast as our people try it, they give their best of medicine like it before in our community.

Eruptions, Pimples, Blisters, Pustules,
Ulcers, Sores, and all Diseases of the Skin.

From Rev. Robt. Stratton, Bristol, England.
"I only do my duty to you and the public, when I add my testimony to that you publish of the medical virtues of your SARSAPARILLA. My daughter, aged ten, had an affliction humor in her ears,
eye, and hair for years, which we were unable to cure until we tried your SARSAPARILLA. She has been well for some months."

From Mrs. Jane F. Rice, a well-known and much-esteemed lady of Denialville, Cape May Co., N. J.
"My daughter has suffered for a year past with a
scrofulous eruption, which was very troublesome.
Nothing afforded any relief until we tried your SAR-SAPARILLA, which soon completely cured her."

From Charles P. Gage, Esq., of the widely-known firm of Gage, Murray & Co., manufacturers of embossed papers in New York, N. Y.

"I had for several years a very troublesome humor in my face, which grew constantly worse until
it disfigured my features and became an intolerable
affliction. I tried almost everything a man could do for both skin and medicine, but with no success
whatever, until I took your SARSAPARILLA. It immediately made my face worse, as you told me,
but in a few days it began to clear up, and I soon began to feel under the better, and continued until my face is as smooth as a baby's, and I am free
without any symptoms of the disease that I know of. I enjoy perfect health, and without a doubt owe
it to your SARSAPARILLA."

From Mrs. John E. Johnston, Esq., of Wakenam, Ohio.
"For twelve years I had the yellow Erysipelas on my right arm, during which time I tried all the celebrated physicians I could reach, and took hundreds of dollars' worth of medicines. The ulcers were so bad that the cords became visible, and the people decided that my arm must be amputated. I began taking your SARSAPARILLA. Took two bottles, and some of your PILLS. Together they cured me. I am now as well and sound as anybody. Being in a public place, my case is known to everybody in this community, and excites the wonder of all."

From Hon. Henry Monroe, M. P. P., of Newcastle, C.
W., a leading member of the Canadian Parliament.
"I have used your SARSAPARILLA in my family,
for general debility, and for several years, and I with very beneficial results, and feel confident in commending it to the afflicted."

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Sore Eyes.

From Harvey Sieker, Esq., the able editor of the "Quincy Patriot," Quincy, Mass.

"Our only child, a young girl, was attacked by pimples on her forehead. They rapidly spread, and in a few days she was blind, and her face, which covered her face, and actually blinded
her eyes for some days. A skillful physician applied nitrate of silver and other remedies, but with no parent effect. For fifteen days we guarded his hands, lest with their blood they should open the festering corrupt wound which covered her face, and which laying tried every thing else we had any hope from,
we began giving your SARSAPARILLA, and applying the iodine of potato roots, as you directed. The child began to heal when we had given the first bottle,
and was well when we had given the first bottle.
The child's eyelashes, which had come out, grew again, and he is now as healthy and fair as any other. The whole neighborhood predicted that the child must die."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

From Dr. Hiram Stout, of St. Louis, Missouri.
"I find your SARSAPARILLA a more effective remedy for the secondary symptoms of Syphilis,
and for syphilis disease than any other we possess.
The prostration is induced to you for some of the best medicines we have."

From A. J. French, M. D., an eminent physician of Lawrence, Mass., who is a prominent member of the Legislature of Massachusetts.

"Dr. Ayer—My dear Sir: I have found your SARSAPARILLA an excellent remedy for Syphilis, both of the primary and secondary type. I have used it in some cases that were too obstinate to yield to other remedies. I do not know what we can employ with more certainty of success, where a powerful alternative is required."

Mr. Chas. S. Van Lier, of New Brunswick, N. J., had dreadful ulcers on his legs, caused by the use of mercury, or mercurial disease, which grew more and more aggravated for years, in spite of every remedy or treatment that could be applied, until the retreating use of Ayer's SARSAPARILLA relieved him.
Few cases can be found more inveterate and distressing than this, and it took several dozen bottles to cure him.

Leucorrhoea, Whites, Female Weakness,
are generally produced by internal Scrofulous Ulceration, and are very often cured by the alternative effect of this SARSAPARILLA. Some cases require, however, in aid of the SARSAPARILLA, the skillful application of local remedies.

From the well-known and widely-celebrated Dr.
J. C. Wright, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

"I have found your SARSAPARILLA an excellent alternative in diseases of females. Many cases of infertility, Leucorrhoea, internal Ulceration, and local debility, arising from the scrofulous diathesis, have yielded to it, and there are few that do not,
wherever it is properly aided by local treatment."

A lady, unwilling to allow the publication of her name, writes:

"My daughter and myself have been cured of a very debilitating Leucorrhoea of long standing, by two bottles of your SARSAPARILLA."

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Neuralgia,
when caused by Scrofula in the system, are rapidly
cured by this EXT. SARSAPARILLA.

AYER'S
CATHARTIC PILLS

possess so many advantages over the other purgatives in the market, and their superior virtues
are so universally known, that we need not do more than to assure the public their quality is maintained equal to the best it ever has been,
and that they may be depended on to do all that they have ever done.

Although of a high mag-
nifying power, this Microscope is so simple that
a child can use it—for it
requires no focal adjust-
ment; therefore it neither
fatigues the eye, nor
wears the patience, like
other Microscopes.

"The Microscope tells
me that in the leaves of
every forest, and in the
flowers of every garden,
and in waters of every
rivulet, there are worlds
resembling with life, and numberless as the grains

entist.*

Parents who wish to
instruct and benefit their
children as well as to enrich and amuse them, will here find the means of
doing so.

The popularity of this Instrument is constantly
on the increase. Its perfectness as a microscope, its power and its cheapness, are certainly
wonderful.

37—This Microscope, in brass, is sent by mail,
postage paid, for $2.25; or with 24 beautiful
mounted Objects for $3; or with 24 objects for $5; or with 48 objects for $8—postage paid. In prices. Mounts in Glass—very cheap—very compact—can be had at the rate of $1.50 a dozen.

scopic PHOTOGRAPHS, in which the

beautifully mounted on glass slides, and will be
